FINDS CITY SHORT 80,000 HOMES FOR 400,000 RESIDENTS

Lockwood Committee Reports Conditions Worse Than When Rent Laws Were Passed.

PROPOSES NEW BLOCK PLAN

Would Have Life Insurance Companies' Advance Capital for Building Model Tenements.

CALLS FOR QUICK ACTION

Offers Bill to Permit Companies to Invest 10 Per Cent. of Their Assets.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 30.—A shortage of 80,000 apartments, as compared with the pre-war supply of housing facilities, is declared to exist in New York City today in a preliminary report of the Joint Legislative Committee on Housing presented to the Legislature tonight by Senator Charles C. Lockwood, its Chairman.

According to the report, the stringency in apartments of the type used by the poor is greater today than it was when the emergency rent laws now in force were enacted. There was practically no new construction in buildings of this class, owing to scarcity of labor and high wages, as well as the high cost of building materials. Builders generally are turning to the construction of business structures or expensive dwellings as affording a better return on their money.

Prevailing conditions, the report declares, constitute a grave menace to health in New York City, where it is estimated by the committee that fully 400,000 persons are directly affected by the scarcity in dwellings within their means.

One recommendation of the committee would permit life insurance companies under certain conditions to invest up to 10 per cent. of their assets in housing projects in cities of the first class.

A bill was introduced to carry out this recommendation. This measure, according to Senator Lockwood, would enable the Metropolitan Life to go ahead with a $100,000,000 housing project now under contemplation.

Tenement Situation Worse.

"Your committee," says the report, "finds overwhelming evidence that the emergency in housing accommodations that existed, particularly in the City of New York, at the time the emergency rent laws were passed still exists, and that with respect to the cheaper class of tenements and houses that formerly rented at from $4 to $11 per room the emergency has grown and is today more acute than it was at the time the laws were passed.

"Your committee further finds that, owing to the high prices of labor and materials and to other economic conditions, no houses of the character last described are being constructed or are in prospect, while, on the other hand, many of the older tenements of this class have become obsolete and uninhabitable, while many others have been torn down to make room for business buildings that are encroaching upon these neighborhoods.

"The present costs have driven building activities into the construction of business and residential properties and of the more expensive apartment houses to the exclusion of reasonably priced tenements.

"Meantime the congestion among the masses of people in the great cities, and particularly in the City of New York, is increasing to such an extent that it has become a menace to the lives, health, morals and safety of the entire community. In many districts there are from three to four times as many human beings housed in the same number of cubic feet of living space as before the war.

"Such is the condition of this class of property that in the Borough of Manhattan alone there are said to be about 100,000 violations against the sanitary and building laws now on file in the public departments, upon most of which no action has been taken.

"The congestion, both in these departments and in the courts that have to deal with these violations, is so great that the public officials, notwithstanding the commendable efforts they are making, are swamped with them and have practically been unable to enforce the laws.

Life and Health Menaced.

"Your committee is satisfied that as a result of the shortage in this class of living accommodations, the lives and health of the population of the City of New York are in grave danger from the ravages of contagious diseases, apart from the perils that lurk in the unhealthful surroundings in which the poorer classes of our population are compelled to live.

"There is no relief in sight from the ordinary activities of competitive building, for the reasons above stated. We estimate that there is a shortage of about 80,000 apartments, as compared with the normal supply that existed in the years preceding the war. The average apartment of this class was formerly occupied by five persons, the accommodations required to remedy this shortage would be for about 400,000 people in the City of New York.

"Inasmuch as our labors are still far from completed in many of the ramifications of this subject upon which we have entered and should enter, there has not yet been the time or opportunity to bring into conditions that are said to be ominous, if not entirely similar in other cities of the State.

"Unless the State or the city, assum-

Wants Half of Immigrants Brought on American Ships

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Enactment of a law requiring half of the immigrants admitted annually to this country to take passage aboard American ships was urged by Chairman Lasker of the Shipping Board at a conference today with members of the House Immigration Committee.

There was a general discussion of the plan, at which Andrew Furuseth of San Francisco, head of the American Seamen's Union, and Commissioner Husband of the Immigration Bureau took part, but no final draft of a bill was agreed upon, it was stated.

SWEPT OFF YACHT, RETURNED BY WAVE

STRUCK BY A HURRICANE

Ex-Assistant Navy Secretary's Craft, Once ex-Kaiser's, is Towed to Virginia Port.

NEWPORT NEWS, Jan. 30.—Gordon Woodbury, former Assistant Secretary of the Navy, was swept over the rail of his yacht, Half Moon, forty miles off Cape Charles Friday night, but was returned by a wave to the ship, it was stated tonight when the yacht, formerly the Germania, private yacht of former Emperor William of Germany, was towed into Old Point Comfort in a damaged condition by the Standard Oil tanker Japan Arrow.

Several members of the crew also were swept over the rail, it was added, but all but one were rescued. The Japan Arrow came up a few minutes later and got a tow aboard.

Mr. Woodbury, a member of the New York Yacht Club, stated upon arrival at Old Point Dock that his vessel ran into a hurricane about 10 A. M. Friday. The mainsail, compass, jibboom, a dinghy and a lifeboat were swept away within a few seconds of each other.

An enormous sea struck the little craft some hours later, carrying Mr. W[illegible] and the entire crew overboard. By clinging to the rail the sidelights and rudder, every one of the crew with the exception of John Stolsvig, quartermaster, finally managed to crawl aboard.

"First Mate Beer did heroic work getting several of us back," said Mr. Woodbury.

The first man to fight his way back to the schooner was First Mate Beer, who clambered aboard while others were clinging to bits of wreckage with which the sea near the Half-Moon was strewn. Once aboard Beer lashed himself close to the side and waved to the others to work their way toward him. One after another, at opportune moments, they plunged toward the schooner. And one after another Beer hauled them to the deck, some of them very nearly spent when they got there.

After that experience, the crew, some members badly bruised up and all hungry and half frozen, managed to cling fast to articles on deck until about 9:30 this morning when the Japan Arrow came by, giving the Half Moon a line and taking the fagged out crew aboard. All of the yachtsmen are comfortable at Old Point Comfort and the vessel will go to dry dock for general repairs.

As the Germania of the Kiel Yacht Club, the Half Moon has an interesting history. She was built in 1908 for Bertha Krupp, who gave the craft to Count von Bolen as a wedding present when she married him. The couple spent their honeymoon on the vessel. A few years later the Kaiser was a guest at the races on the yacht. He liked the stout, trim-lined sailer so well von Bolen and Mme. Bertha gave it to him.

On Aug. 3, 1914, it is said, the Germania was at Cowes when Prince Henry of Germany appeared on a destroyer, took in tow the Meteor, one of the Kaiser's racing yachts, and ordered the skipper of the Germania to put to sea at once. The extreme need for haste was not explained to her Captain, who promptly took the Germania into Southampton for a supply of fresh water. Next morning, with war sweeping over Europe, the yacht was seized and her Captain and crew were made prisoners by the British.

In due course a prize court condemned the Germania and she was sold to Chris-

MEYER COMMITTEE TO GO ON, REPORTS BIG CITY PIER LOSS

Assembly Votes to Keep Up Inquiry Until New Charter Is Submitted.

REFORMS ARE SUGGESTED

Charges $11,000,000 Loss Through Waste, Favoritism and Profiteering.

POLICE ALSO ARE CRITICISED

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 30.—By a vote of 80 to 39, the Assembly tonight adopted a resolution offered by Majority Leader Simon L. Adler to extend the life of the Meyer committee so that it can co-operate with the Charter Revision Commission and submit a final report at the extraordinary session of the Legislature to be called next Summer by Governor Miller.

Minority Leader Donohue opposed the resolution on the ground that it was not privileged. Speaker Machold ruled that it was a privileged resolution. Assemblyman Cuvillier appealed from the decision of the Chair.

On the roll-call all the Democratic members of the Assembly voted against the resolution. The only Republican to vote in the negative was Assemblyman James H. Caulfield, Jr., of Kings.

The resolution was offered in the Senate by Senator Schuyler M. Meyer, Chairman of the committee, who said that the committee expected that $100,000 would be provided for the expenses in the annual appropriation bill.

$11,000,000 Loss to City Charged.

Loss of $11,000,000 annually by the city on its dock investments and waste, mismanagement, favoritism and profiteering in the administration of the city's Dock Department are charged in a report of the Meyer legislative investigating committee made today to the Charter Revision Commission and the Legislature.

The report, which was prepared by Elon R. Brown, counsel of the committee, recommends legislation to abolish the position of Dock Commissioner and his replacement by a Dock Commission of three members to be appointed by the Mayor, one of whom shall be nominated by the "maritime interests of the city" and another by what is probably intended to mean the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, although the "Chamber of Commerce of the City of New York" is the organization mentioned in the report. The report also recommends legislation to enable a commission representing the "maritime interests" to maintain an organized force to police the piers.

"The docks are neither conducted for the benefit of the city nor for the benefit of commerce," the report says. "The profits are absorbed by middlemen, robbetweens and favored individuals having a 'pull' with the Dock Department, for whose benefit both the City Treasury and the commercial interests are mulcted.

Present System Criticised.

"The inevitable results of such a haphazard administration have been to tax commerce heavily in some places and scarcely at all in others under the pretence of furnishing a cheap rate to all; to deprive the City Treasury of revenue to which it is entitled, by wastefulness, improvidence and corruption, and to drive commerce to other ports.

"The report declares that a fair charge based on the rental value of the docks leased would encourage commerce and increase the revenue of the city by millions of dollars. It says that the city-owned docks available for rental, excluding the new piers on Staten Island, were assessed in 1920 at $101,915,780, although not subject to taxation. The annual loss to the city, as calculated by the committee, is shown by the following table submitted in the report:

Interest on $101,915,780 at 8%	$11,514,946
Cost of administration, 1920	1,202,427
Two per cent. depreciation on estimated value of the dock construction Jan. 1, 1920 ($76,000,000)	1,600,000
Loss of taxes on dock property not used by the city, exempt	4,775,150
	$18,992,523
Total receipts from rentals and wharfage, 1920	7,004,240
Loss to city on investment in 1920	$11,788,283

By a similar method of computation, the report estimates the annual loss to the city on the twelve new Staten Island piers at $221,000 a year at present and

Muratore Operated On for Appendicitis; Uninterrupted Recovery Is Predicted

Lucien Muratore, the leading tenor of the Chicago Opera Company, was operated on for appendicitis yesterday at the Audubon Sanitarium. It was announced after the operation that his condition was satisfactory and that recovery should be uninterrupted.

Muratore was taken to the sanitarium from his rooms in the Ritz-Carlton after a morning conference of his physicians, at which the operation was decided upon. He reached the hospital about noon and was placed on the operating table. It required about an hour, during which time Lina Cavalieri, his wife, and Harold F. McCormick of Chicago waited in an adjoining room.

After the operation the following bulletin was issued by Dr. Charles F. A. Locke and the three surgeons who assisted him:

"Lucien Muratore was operated on for appendicitis about 1 o'clock today. His condition after the operation was very satisfactory. Appendix acutely inflamed. His recovery should be uninterrupted. Operation was imperative.

"Muratore was to have appeared with Miss Garden last night in 'Monna Vanna.' It is expected that he will be able to rejoin the company in a few weeks.

HELD BY HIS HEELS, FIREMAN SAVES FIVE

SWINGS LIKE A PENDULUM

No Fire Escape on Burned Building in Brownsville—Another Fireman Near Death.

In two fires in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn last night a mother and her four children were rescued by one group of firemen, and another fireman was overcome and may die from gas and smoke inhaled in trying to rescue a family of ten which already had escaped to the roof.

The first fire was in a three-story frame building occupied by three families at 251 Christopher Street. Two of the families escaped to the street by the stairway before the arrival of the fire apparatus, but when Mrs. Regina Steinberg attempted to leave, with her two daughters and two sons, she found that they were trapped in their apartment on the second floor by dense smoke and flames creeping up the stairway from the cellar.

A passerby was the first to discover flames shooting from the cellar. After he had turned in an alarm he ran back to warn the tenants. The families on the first and third floors heard his cries, but the Steinbergs did not hear as they were in the kitchen.

Then Engine Company 231 arrived, in charge of Lieutenant Edward F. Gross, he was told of the Steinberg's plight. Gross bolted up the stairs at the head of several firemen and [illegible] the door of the Steinberg apartment when there was a backdraft which sent the other firemen sprawling to the street.

Gross could hear the cries of the mother and four children. Mrs. Steinberg had bolted the door, but Gross threw his body against it and snapped the lock. By that time Mrs. Steinberg and her family were on the verge of collapse. The eldest daughter, Emma, 19 years old, had thrown up one of the windows and Mrs. Steinberg staggered to it with Herman, her 15-month-old child, whom she held at arm's length over the yard. Neighbors gathered below pleaded with her not to drop the child until they could make a net of blankets.

There were no fire escapes on the frame structure. Gross, grabbing the child from the mother, told her and the others to lean out of the windows. He sat astride of a sill awaiting other firemen with a ladder. Hook and Ladder Company 120 was expected any second, but the flames had eaten their way through the door of the Steinberg apartment, and Gross appealed to other members of his company, who had run to the yard, to improvise a means of rescue.

Six-footer a Human Derrick.

Just then Lieutenant John Davis of Engine Company 290 came into the yard and ordered half a dozen firemen to run up the stairs of the house next door to the roof of the burning building. There the Lieutenant ordered Fireman Edward Stehler of Engine Company 231, and more than six feet tall, to hang from the roof while other firemen held his ankles and take the members of the Steinberg family as Gross raised them to the fireman's grasp from the window sill.

The infant was the first rescued. As Stehler grasped the child he drew up his body and the other firemen on the roof began to swing him, pendulum fashion, until another fireman snatched the child as he was swung near the level of the roof.

Solomon, Mrs. Steinberg's 8-year-old son, next was rescued; then in turn, Louis, the 14-year-old son, and Emma and Mrs. Steinberg. Just as Mrs. Steinberg and the four children were hurried to safety on an adjoining roof, the flames broke through the roof of her home.

At the same time Fireman Charles O'Neill and Fred Newmaier of Hook and Ladder Company 120, appeared in the yard with a ladder and rescued Gross from his perilous position in the window.

The flames in the meantime had consumed the interior of the structure, and in less than ten minutes the building was in ruins. The damage was estimated at $10,000.

Ten Reported in Trap.

While Fireman Stehler, exhausted from his rescue work, was being conveyed back to his company's quarters, a fire believed to have been due to an explosion of gas drove tenants out of the four-story frame building at 13 Olive Place. Policeman Thomas Fitzgerald, after turning in an alarm, ran to the house and was informed that Angelo Aragone, his wife and eight children were trapped in their apartment on the third floor.

The policeman and several civilians entered the building and aided Peter Madalena, his wife, seven children and three boarders to the street, but when they essayed to reach the Aragone apartment they were driven out of the building by the flames, which were making strong headway up the stairs.

Engine Company 233 appeared at this moment and the policeman told the firemen of the Aragone family. Fireman Harry Sweetman threw a rubber coat over his head and bounded up the stairway. When he reached the third floor landing he believed the place was ablaze. Several firemen who sought to follow him were driven back, but Fireman Charles Rapp reached the third floor and found the unconscious Sweetman. He carried him up another flight and there found the scuttle open. Firemen who had run through an adjoining building in the meantime, discovered that the Aragone family had escaped through the scuttle.

Sweetman was passed to the firemen on the roof by Rapp and then to the sidewalk, where it was found that his condition was serious. He was hurried in an ambulance to St. John's Hospital and it was reported later he might die. The firemen subdued the fire in this building before it did much damage.

BODDY GUILTY, GRINS AT DEATH VERDICT

TO BE SENTENCED FRIDAY

'Have You Been Praying?' Mother Asks—'No,' He Answers When Awaiting Jury.

Luther Boddy, negro slayer of Detective Sergeants Francis J. M. Buckley and William A. Miller, was convicted of murder in the first degree at 9:25 o'clock last night by a jury in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court. He was tried for the murder of Detective Buckley.

The verdict was returned twenty-five days, almost to the hour, after the double killing on Jan. 5, and three hours and fifteen minutes after Justice Wasservogel completed his charge to the jury. As the foreman of the jury, in answer to the question of William Penny, clerk of the court, pronounced the word "Guilty" a faint smile overspread Boddy's features.

Then in a clear, calm voice the negro slayer said he was 22 years old, lived at 69 West 133d Street, and he had been arrested four times on felony charges. On two of these he was convicted, receiving a suspended sentence for burglary in 1918, and being sent to the penitentiary for burglary in the following year.

As Justice Wasservogel announced that he would call Boddy for the imposition of the death sentence on Feb. 3 the negro turned his head toward his wife, his mother and other relatives and friends in the rear of the courtroom. His wife began to moan, then became hysterical. She had to be led from the room.

Jury Returns for Information.

Ten minutes before reaching its verdict the jury filed into the courtroom and asked Justice Wasservogel to define the law regarding manslaughter and premeditation. Four questions were submitted. It was evident that doubt had been created in the minds of some of the jurors as to whether Boddy shot the detectives with intent to kill.

Boddy was detained in the prisoners' pen on the mezzanine floor of the Criminal Courts Building while the jury considered the case. There he was visited by his mother and his wife. They took some lunch to him, and a box of cigarettes and the prisoner refused to discuss the probable verdict until he had eaten. Then, after lighting a cigarette, he turned to his mother and said:

"Now I am ready to listen to anything you have to say."

"Luther, have you been praying?" she asked.

As the two women left him, the mother again urged him to pray.

Soon after the trial was resumed at 10 o'clock in the morning, Morris Koenig, former Judge of General Sessions and counsel for the negro, began his summation. He dwelt at length on Boddy's testimony that he had been beaten several times by detectives in the West 135th Street Station before the night of the double murder, and that he became crazed at the sight of the green lights of the station because he feared he was going to be beaten again.

Mind Diseased, Says Koenig.

His mind was diseased from birth, Mr. Koenig continued, and he didn't want "to be taken to the torture chamber in the West 135th Street Station." On the several occasions he was taken to the station by detectives they beat him with blackjacks and rubber hose to make him confess to crimes or to compel him to become a "stool pigeon" for them, he added.

"They did not succeed in either," Mr. Koenig said, "but they did create in his mind a horror and fear of the police which meant physical agonies and torture of the human soul.

"I do not desire to indulge in an attack on the Police Department. In its rank and file the police force has men who are willing to give the best that is in them to the service of the people of the city. But I cannot understand why some men, immediately on donning a police uniform, become instruments of horror and cruel methods. I challenge the District Attorney to deny that there has come to him reports that policemen have beaten persons in order to obtain information. If the police cannot detect crime except by unlawful methods, then woe to the City of New York, for the people's rights are being crushed to the ground."

Before he began his address to the jury, Mr. Koenig continued his cross-examination of Jasper Rhodes, a negro policeman, of the West 135th Street Station, who on Friday afternoon identified Boddy in the courtroom as the man who on the night of Dec. 18 had fired four shots at him, two of which inflicted dangerous wounds.

Justice Wasservogel a few minutes before had denied the motion of counsel for the slayer for a mistrial on the ground that Rhodes's testimony was im-

THEATRE WRECK INQUIRIES STARTED; SENATE WILL ACT

CAPPER OFFERS RESOLUTION

POLICE DEATH LIST ONLY 95

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Thorough investigation to determine the responsibility for the Knickerbocker Theatre disaster of Saturday night was promised today by officials of the District Government, leaders in both branches of Congress, the Federal Courts and the Coroner. Steps were taken during the day looking to at least four investigations.

Resolutions offered in the Senate and House called for sweeping inquiry into the enforcement of building laws in the District. The one in the Senate, introduced by Senator Capper of the Committee on District of Columbia, characterized as "unsatisfactory" explanations that the heavy burden of snow was the "chief cause" of the collapse of the theatre roof and referred to rumors that contractors and builders, determined to save money, "have acted in collusion with inspectors of buildings."

An official revision of the list of dead in the theatre collapse, as compiled by the Police Department up to 11 o'clock tonight, made their total 95. This included 94 persons, whose bodies had been taken to undertaking establishments, all having been identified. There are no unidentified bodies at undertaking establishments or elsewhere of which the police have any record. Miss Mary Forsyth of 1,602 Belmont Street died at Garfield Hospital today, and this made the total on the police list 95.

Errors Found in Previous Lists.

The police list is smaller than every newspaper list, but it now seems quite certain that there are duplications or erroneously included names in these unofficial lists. The list at one time contained as high as 113 names. One of the leading newspapers this afternoon carried 107 names, of which 12 could not be verified in any way, and elimination of these would give a total of 95 names.

The name of Mrs. Arnold Hague, widow of Dr. Arnold Hague, was included in last night's list. It developed today that Mrs. Hague, who had been ill several days, had not been to the Knickerbocker.

Other names that have been eliminated from the list, either because of duplication in spelling or because the persons named have not been reported missing or otherwise located, are: Mr. Marsh, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Maine, Albert Baker, Elizabeth Wise, William H. Scott, Carrie Parson (which was a misspelling of the name of Mrs. Carrie M. Fessan, one of the victims), Vincent Barber, Mrs. Marine Dale (misspelling of name of Mrs. Martindale, a victim), Paulus Lauby, H. W. D. Wattell, D. N. Walsh, Miss M. E. Walsh, Mrs. Vera Hall, Miss Agnes Garvey (duplication of part of name of another victim, Bernard Breslau, Mrs. Gladys Thomas (duplication of name of Gladys Tohms), W. N. Crawford (duplication of William M. Crocker).

Every effort has been made by the police to establish whether "Mr. and Mrs. Russell Maine" were killed. Neither police nor newspaper men have been able to find any persons of that name here, and there is no record of their names at hospitals or undertaking establishments.

Most of the names eliminated had no addresses. Apparently their inclusion in some lists was due solely to the confusion of the moment. Most lists carried the name of "L. L. Lehler," a misspelling for "LeRoy L. Lehmer," who was a victim. Another instance of two names being given the same person was in the case of Wyatt McKinnnis, whose name was also given in some lists as "Jack."

Grand Jury Inspects Ruins.

District Attorney Peyton Gordon and members of the Federal Grand Jury visited the theatre today and surveyed the wreckage. Pieces of the roofing concrete were carried away. The Grand Jury men were so impressed that they decided to put aside for the present investigation into charges against Charles W. Morse and give all their time to investigating the theatre tragedy.

Dr. Hermes Declines To Become Ambassador Here

BERLIN, Jan. 30 (Associated Press).—Dr. Andreas Hermes, Minister of Food, has definitely declined appointment as Ambassador to the United States. His declination is largely due to leading members of his own party who desired him to retain his post in the Cabinet.

The Clerical leaders believe that Dr. Hermes's services are needed in Berlin in connection with the Government's forthcoming taxation and reparations legislation and, although Chancellor Wirth, in the absence of other available candidates, sought to induce him to take the Washington assignment, the Chancellor's persuasions were unsuccessful. The Government must now renew its search for a man who is not only imbued with the democratic ideals of the new Germany, but able to shoulder the financial burden which will be imposed at Washington on an envoy only equipped with marks worth half a cent each.

PROWLER AT VASSAR ATTACKS SIX WOMEN

POSSES QUICKLY ORGANIZED

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Jan. 30.—Miss Anna T. Kitchell, instructor at Vassar College, fought for fifteen minutes with a powerfully built, roughly dressed man who attacked her on College Avenue within a quarter of a mile of the entrance to Vassar College and eventually beat the man off with her fists.

Posses of police and civilians began a hunt for the man within half an hour after Miss Kitchell informed the police of her experience. While the posses were being formed reports were received of an attack on another woman on Grant Avenue, a little further away from the college, and the description of the assailant in that case tallied with that furnished by Miss Kitchell.

Residents of this city were particularly aroused by the attacks on the two women tonight because reports of attacks on four other women had been made to the police here within the last five days. In each instance the man was described as being about six feet tall and wearing a dark tweed suit and a cap well drawn down over his face. Miss Kitchell declared after the attack tonight that the man, who was about 30 years old, did not appear to be a foreigner.

Section Sparsely Settled.

She said that she stepped off a trolley car at College Avenue shortly before 10 o'clock, when she noticed a man walking slowly ahead of her in the direction of the college. She paid no particular attention to him, she added, as she hurried in the direction of her home, which is about five blocks from the college entrance and on the same thoroughfare.

The section is in the suburbs of this city and is sparsely settled with dwelling houses. In a few minutes she came abreast of the man, who suddenly turned on her and grabbed her right arm.

Miss Kitchell also is six feet tall and athletic and when the man seized her arm she said she exclaimed "What do you mean by this?"

"Don't make an outcry, and I won't harm you," the man was quoted as having replied.

The fellow then tried to drag her from the walk, but Miss Kitchell decided to fight him off. She aimed a blow at the stranger's face which he dodged, and in doing so raised his right hand which in the darkness appeared to Miss Kitchell to hold either a pistol or an unlighted electric hand lamp.

Assailant Floss After Blow.

She said the man mumbled something about killing her if she again attempted to resist him, but, undaunted by the threat, she immediately returned to the attack. She grappled with the man for possession of the weapon with which he threatened her, and during the scuffle the man several times attempted to throw her to the road.

She managed to keep her feet, however, until she eventually struck the man a stinging blow in the face, and as he fell back she screamed. The man then broke and ran across a field in the direction of the city, with Miss Kitchell in pursuit. When he had run about three blocks, she saw he was outdistancing her and she gave up the chase and hurried to her home to inform the police of the occurrence.

In less than five minutes policemen and detectives on motorcycles and in automobiles appeared on the scene and began to comb the vicinity for the assailant. The detectives said that from the description of the man furnished by Miss Kitchell they were convinced he was the person being sought for the attacks on other women in this city and suburbs.

City to Pay $25,000 to Johnson as Fee In Transit Fight, and He May Get More

If a voucher for $19,000, approved yesterday by Corporation Counsel John P. O'Brien, is accepted by the Finance Department of the city, United States Senator Hiram Johnson will receive $25,000 for his legal services to date in connection with the city's fight against Governor Miller's traction bills recently upheld by the State Court of Appeals. Late last year Senator Johnson received $6,000 "on account" for his services. The Corporation Counsel has announced that he will carry the case to the United States Supreme Court, in which event it is expected that Senator Johnson will be retained and his emolument still further increased.

After approving the $19,000 voucher, the Corporation Counsel passed it on to Deputy Controller Harry H. Smith, who, in accordance with the routine of the Finance Department, sent it to the bureau of law and adjustment of the department for personal examination. If the routine is followed throughout, Senator Johnson may be called and examined. This, however, has not yet been decided upon.

Accompanying the $19,000 voucher is the bill for the California Senator's services. This reads:

"To balance for professional services in traction matters and actions and proceedings arising out of the city's street railways and transit companies to Jan. 1, 1922, $19,000."

John Mosmer, chief of the bureau of law and adjustment, said yesterday that he had not had time to examine the bill.

Senator Johnson was first retained by the city during the Legislative session of 1921 and he appeared before the Legislature and argued against the Miller transit bills. From then on he had charge of the city's case in fighting the bills and appeared in court both here and in Albany when the constitutionality of the bills was attacked.

AGREE ON SHANTUNG AND NAVAL TREATY; WORK NEARLY ENDED

HARDING TERMS ACCEPTED

NOT TO FORTIFY ALEUTIANS

Americans Accept Proposal of Japanese, Who Concede as to Bonin Islands.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30 (Associated Press).—Japan and China virtually settled their long standing feud over Shantung today while the plenipotentiaries of the five great naval powers were coming into final agreement on the treaty by which they are to limit their sea power in capital ships.

The mediatory proposal supported by President Harding was the final basis on which the Japanese and Chinese agreed in principle after a seven-hour session of the Shantung negotiations. Although some details of phraseology remain to be worked out, a final settlement is expected by tomorrow night.

The naval treaty text was completed at a meeting of the naval committee of fifteen and a plenary session of the armament conference was called for Wednesday to announce the covenant to the world. The fortifications article, the last remaining problem, was settled by an agreement under which the fortifications status quo in the Pacific is to include the American Aleutian Islands as well as the Bonin Island group of Japan.

Tomorrow the naval committee of the whole is to give its formal approval to the treaty, in preparation for Wednesday's plenary session, and the Far Eastern Committee also is to meet to begin a clean-up of the few Chinese questions remaining undecided. With Shantung out of the way, these collateral issues are expected to take but a few days.

China to Retain Japanese Experts.

In their discussions today, which lasted from mid-afternoon until late at night, the Japanese and Chinese centred their attention upon the key problem of the Tsingtao-Tsinanfu Railroad, with which the good offices of President Harding, Secretary Hughes and Arthur J. Balfour had concerned themselves. The proposal approved in substance provided that China pay for the railroad in fifteen-year treasury notes, with a five-year option, and that Japanese experts be retained during the payment period in some departments of road administration, but under a Chinese superior official.

The Japanese-Chinese conversations will be resumed tomorrow. It is the hope of some of the delegates that the agreement will be in such definite form that it can be announced on the following day when the conference assembles for its first public session since Dec. 10.

Among the subjects yet to go through both the committee and conference stages of agreement are the proposal to prohibit the importation of arms into China, a settlement regarding the Chinese Eastern Railway, a declaration regarding leased territories in China, the Chinese request for abrogation of the "twenty-one demands" treaties and a general resolution relating to land armament. In regard to most of these virtual decisions have been reached in informal exchanges between delegation heads, although the Chinese Eastern Railway problem is developing considerable difficulty because of Chinese objection to proposed methods of financing and policing.

French Yield as to Lease.

It was revealed today that the French had withdrawn their reservation in regard to surrender of their leased territory in China, and that as a consequence an agreement on that subject was imminent. At first the French delegates conditioned their withdrawal upon similar action by all the other powers, but they now are said to be willing to make exceptions for the Japanese occupation of the Liao-tung Peninsula and the British retention of Kow-Loon.

Obstacles which have delayed action on the arms importation ban for China are also understood to have been removed and the Far Eastern Committee may act on the arms resolution tomorrow. The twenty-one demands are not expected to occupy more than one or two committee sittings, the Japanese, Chinese and American delegations merely putting into the record their views on the subject.

In their consideration of the Far Eastern treaty which is to embody all the decisions regarding China, the delegates are making no present plans for an affirmative declaration regarding the Franco-Japanese alliance. In some quarters it had been suggested that a clause abrogating the alliance be put into the Far Eastern convention, but some American delegates at least are said now to believe that it might be unnecessary, in view of the agreements to which France and Japan have pledged themselves here.

None of the Japanese would comment on the status of the Shantung negotiations prior to a formal announcement, and no one who attended the meeting would disclose the exact extent to which the plan supported by the good offices of the President, Secretary Hughes and Mr. Balfour had been approved.

"We made considerable progress on the basis suggested by the friends, Mr. Balfour and Secretary Hughes," Dr. Koo said.

Pressed for details of the settlement, Dr. Koo said that he did not care to go into details, as he thought that the two mediators would want to make a statement after tomorrow's meeting. He said, however, that the agreement thus far reached provided for a managing director of the railroad who would be Chinese, and that the traffic manager and chief accountant "of whatever nationality" would be subordinate to the managing director. It was understood, however, in conference circles that these two positions, which were the chief obstacles to a settlement for so many weeks, would be filled by Japanese experts.

The conversations were broken off on two occasions on the question of control, the Chinese insisting on having complete control of the railway through the positions of traffic manager and accountant, while the Japanese delegates refused to concede the point. The Japanese insisted that their experts should occupy these posts to insure efficient operation of the road.

Terms on Payment for Road.

Another point seemingly cleared up by today's virtual agreement was the question of payment, the Chinese offering cash, or payment in instalments covering a period of twelve years with a three-year option. This was declined by the Japanese, who insisted on a loan covering fifteen years with a five-year option.

Through the good offices of Mr. Balfour and Secretary Hughes, and finally President Harding, the Japanese demands were reduced to the point where they agreed to waive the loan, substituting the instalment plan, but over the same period as their suggested loan. Then it came to the question of control again, with the Chinese apparently willing to accept the terms, giving the Japanese the titles of traffic and accountant chiefs.

The Chinese delegates than indirectly made known that they would like the Japanese to recognize the authority of the managing director, normally a Chinese official on all Chinese railroads, over the two Japanese officials.

NAVAL TREATY READY.

Japan Concedes as to Bonin Islands and America Will Not Fortify the Aleutians.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Agreement by the United States, Great Britain and Japan today on the terms of Article 19 of the naval treaty relating to bases and fortifications in the Pacific islands completed that document, the biggest work of the Washington conference. The naval treaty, it was announced tonight, would be presented at a plenary session at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning.

At that session there will also be formally adopted the Root resolution proposing an international law barring the use of submarines against commerce ships and the resolution barring the use of poison gas in warfare, and perhaps certain of the acts of the Far Eastern Committee affecting Chinese questions.

The settlement of Article 19 marks the end of a month's negotiation on that question. When Japan was asked to subscribe to the five-five-three naval ratio, she expressed the desire that there be a fortifications agreement. In the first draft of the naval treaty it was proposed that, with the exception of the islands of Japan proper, Australia, New Zealand and Hawaii, the status quo be maintained in the Pacific for the duration of the treaty. The British proposed a different plan by which a quadrilateral would be drawn north of the equator, within which should be maintained the status quo.

Difficulties over this arrangement were responsible for the long-drawn-out negotiations. The British plan has now been abandoned and the problem solved by naming the Pacific islands in which there is to be no increase of naval bases or island fortifications.

Final Terms of Article.

Briefly, Article 19 binds the United States to agree to maintain the status quo in the Pacific islands, with the exception of Hawaii and those adjacent to the coast of the United States, Alaska and the Panama Canal. This country agrees not to fortify the Aleutian Islands. Britain agrees to the status quo in all British islands in the Pacific, except those close to the Canadian coast, the Commonwealth of Australia and its territories and New Zealand. Japan agrees to the status quo in the Kurile Islands, the Bonin Islands, Amami-Oshima, the Loochoo Islands, Formosa and Pescadores.

It will be seen that there is no curtailment of Britain's rights to increase her base at Singapore nor of Australia's right to fortify the strait betwen her northern coast and New Guinea.

Here is the text of Article 19:

"Article 19—The United States of America, the British Empire and Japan agree that the status quo at the time of the signing of the present treaty, with regard to fortifications and naval bases, shall be maintained in their respective territories and possessions specited hereunder:

"1. The insular possessions which the United States now holds, or may hereafter acquire in the Pacific Ocean, except (a) those adjacent to the coast of the United States, Alaska and the Panama Canal Zone, not including the Aleutian Islands and (b) the Hawaiian Islands;

"2. Hongkong and the insular possessions which the British Empire now holds, or may hereafter acquire in the Pacific Ocean, east of the meridian of 110 degrees east longitude, except (a) those adjacent to the coast of Canada, (b) the Commonwealth of Australia and its territories and (c) New Zealand;

"3. The following insular territories and possessions of Japan in the Pacific Ocean, to wit: The Kurile Islands, the Bonin Islands, Amami-Oshima, the Loochoo Islands, Formosa and the Pescadores, and any insular territories and possessions in the Pacific Ocean which Japan may hereafter acquire."

Trade Ship Facilities Allowed.

The following official statement relative to the meaning of the agreement was issued:

"The maintenance of the status quo under the foregoing provisions implies that no new fortifications or naval bases shall be established in the territories and possessions specified; that no measures shall be taken to increase the existing naval facilities for the repair and maintenance of naval forces, and that no increase shall be made in the coast defences of the territories and possessions above specified. This restriction, however, does not preclude such repair and replacement of worn-out weapons and equipment as is customary in naval and military establishments in time of peace."

The communiqué concluded:

"A plenary session of the conference will be held at Continental Hall on Wednesday, Feb. 1, at 11 o'clock, and it is expected that the naval treaty in its entirety will then be presented to the conference."

Nothing in the terms of Article 19 is to be held to limit the building of facilities for the use of commercial fleets; it relates to facilities for warships. Its operation is to be for fifteen years, the term of the naval treaty.

The most significant result of Article 19, from the American point of view, is the agreement of this country not to increase its naval bases in the Philippines or Guam. Japan's chief concession is an agreement not to fortify further the Bonin Islands. Japan's promise not to fortify the Kurile Islands further offsets the American agreement not to increase fortifications or naval bases in the Aleutian Islands. Thus there is a disposition of an argument often used in Japan against America that this country, in planning increased naval facilities in the Aleutian Islands and at Guam, was threatening Japan.

The provisions of Article 19 in no way affect the rights of the French and Dutch with regard to their island possessions in the Pacific. As for the former German islands held by Japan, Australia and New Zealand under mandates, it is provided in the covenant of the League of Nations that they shall not be fortified.

It is probable that Secretary Hughes, as the author of the naval limitation plan, will make the speech presenting it on Wednesday morning. Other heads of delegations may speak. The reading of the treaty itself, about 4,500 words, will take considerable time, and as there are minor matters and resolutions to be dealt with, it is considered possible that the session will extend over into the afternoon—in other words, that there will be two plenary meetings on Wednesday. The preceding plenary session of the conference was held Dec. 10.

Treaty to Be Announced Wednesday.

The exact terms of the treaty, other than those of Article 19, are held as an official secret until it is given to the world day after tomorrow. Articles 20, 21, 22, 23 and 24, providing for review of the treaty and laying down conditions under which its terms may not be operative, have been published. The other articles contain the various provisions for the reduction of the navies of the five powers—Great Britain, America, Japan, France and Italy; for the replacement scale of 525,000, 525,000, 315,000, 175,000, 175,000 tons for the naval holiday; for the scrapping of the fifty-five odd ships to be got rid of; for the airplane carrier allotment of 135,000, 135,000, 81,000, 60,000, 60,000 tons; for the limitation of warship guns to sixteen inches, and the various other details of the capital ship plan.

Mr. Hughes is understood to have requested the delegates to guard from newspaper men the copies of the treaty distributed to them today. It is said that in the copies sent around there were made minor alterations which would tend to identify the path traveled by any copy which happened to find its way into the newspapers before the appointed time.

After Wednesday there will be one more plenary session, probably next week, for the announcement of the nine-power treaty covering Far Eastern questions. It is hoped that the conference can complete its labors next week.

BODY OF ST. AMBROSE DESPOILED AT MILAN

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, Jan. 30.—Thieves have broken into the tomb of St. Ambrose in the basilica of Milan and despoiled the body of some of its jewels. The body lies in the crypt of the church immediately under the famous altar of gold. The casket is bound with a stout cord of silver sealed with the seal of the late Archbishop Ferrari, who affixed it in 1898.

The saint's remains have been turned so that the body lies on its side. A ring has been removed from the left hand and a diamond clasp which held the vestments in place at the throat also is missing.

The fingers are covered with rings of very great value, some of which, apart from their antiquity, are said to be worth 50,000 lire. The robes in which the body is dressed are worth a small fortune, but nothing except the two articles mentioned was removed.

All the vergers were placed under detention and put through a severe cross-examination, but without result, and the authorities are mystified. Meantime the church is thronged with excited people.

St. Ambrose was the great Archbishop of Milan in the days when Augustine and his mother, Modica, journeyed from Africa to the north of Italy.

WAR OFFENDER FLEES FROM A GERMAN JAIL

Dittmar's Escape at Naumburg, It Is Feared, May Cause Foreign Complications.

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—First Lieutenant Ludwig Dittmar, the submarine officer sentenced to four years in jail by the Supreme Court at Leipsic, at one of the war criminal trials for complicity in sinking a British hospital ship, escaped from Naumburg jail yesterday.

Border authorities have been notified and a reward of $250 has been offered for the seizure of the fugitive. The Attorney General has hurried to the jail to conduct a personal investigation. In view of the possibility of grave foreign complications, since only a few months ago First Lieutenant Boldt, Dittmar's submarine team mate, who was sentenced for the same crime, escaped from the Hamburg jail in such a manner as to indicate that he must have had accomplices not only on the outside but among his jailers.

This second flight of a convicted war criminal comes most inopportunely for the Wirth Government.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 30.—The International Labor Bureau at Geneva has asked the World Court to take up the question of the agricultural eight-hour day as an advisory case for the League Council.

In France and Belgium the law is causing much discussion in agricultural centres. Where it is found impossible to adhere to the eight-hour day. Both of these countries wish to apply the law with more elasticity, but do not consider that it comes under the competency of the World Court.

CONFERENCE CREEPS INTO TWELFTH WEEK

Furtively and Shamefacedly It Tries To Regain Its Place on the Front Page.

TENACITY OF LIFE AMAZING

By ELMER DAVIS.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—One feels rather apologetic in calling the attention of the public to the fact that the Conference on the Limitation of Armament is still here and swinging into its twelfth week. Very few people are aware of that, even in Washington—perhaps one ought to say, especially in Washington. For Washington has enough to think about, quite aside from the theatre disaster in which practically everybody in Washington lost a relative or a friend.

For the last two days Washington has been digging itself out of the snow, and from all indications it will still be busy with that job for several days more. Stories are only just beginning to go around about things that happened in Washington on Saturday night—the collapse of other snow-laden roofs, the roof of a church and a garage—which passed unnoticed because all the policemen, all the firemen and all the newspaper men were at the Knickerbocker Theatre. Even if there were nothing else to think about, it will take Washington two or three days to catch up with the subsidiary news of what happened over the week-end.

Yet the conference is coming out into the open once more, furtively and rather shamefacedly trying to attract the attention of those who knew it in its exalant and optimistic youth, when it spread all over the front page—very much as a man who was the hero of his college days might timidly edge into the office of an old classmate to try to sell him a subscription to The Saturday Evening Post. For the conference, like the poor, is always with us.

Amazing the tenacity of life which the thing has displayed. The only parallel is Tennyson's heroine who thought to die ere snowdrops came, or words to that effect, yet found herself still hanging on when the violets had arrived. It is hard to realize that this conference, which is still being talked about by a few eccentrics with a taste for the occult, this conference which is still with us as the baseball teams are getting ready to go south for the Spring training, is the same conference that was hitting on all twelve cylinders two weeks before people had begun picking the All-American football teams.

Yet it is getting on. They are actually going to bring the naval treaty out in the open on Wednesday, it appears, and in the meantime somebody will have to sit down and name the islands to which the limitation of fortifications applies. One guess as to who draws that assignment. It will go to Henry Cabot Lodge, the Burton Holmes of Capitol Hill. The conference has not forgotten that he told them back in the prehistoric days of the last plenary session that there were 3,100 of the Philippine Islands alone, and that 1,000 of them had names. A man who knows queer things like that must be learned enough to know the names too. He missed his chance to recite them that day, though evidently anxious for some embittered European delegate to speak up and say "Is that so? I'll bet you the cigars you can't reel them off." And now he gets to put them all down in writing.

Still, there are worse things than being at the conference. M. Briand went home from Washington and lost his job and Mr. Sastri went from Washington, where he had surprised everybody by speaking out so clearly about Indian national aspirations, to New York, where he met with the usual delicate attentions of the superheated Irish patriot. (Can't call them Irish patriots any more, by the way, now that their efforts are so largely directed against the Irish Government; but better leave it to Michael Collins to pick a new name).

Well, if time and space have even a pragmatic validity, this conference must be at least nearer the end than it was at its beginning. Before long people will be able to look it over and see just how much it has accomplished. Mr. Hughes was wise, no doubt, in putting his cards on the table at the beginning. But there are those who think that he did more than that; he put his gun on the table when he led off with the naval limitation program, and he left it out there in the open where anybody who wanted to could pick it up and throw it on the floor. It may yet turn out that it would have been wiser to keep that gun in the pocket till the game was over.

The report that all Washington theatres were to be closed on account of the Knickerbocker disaster turned out to be mistaken. Only some of them were closed, though it is not expected that this will be a good week for the show business in Washington.

Meanwhile THE TIMES correspondent has been privileged to inspect the manuscript of a book on the United States which is now being written by a well-known Japanese publicist present at the conference.

"Many American customs," he says, "are incomprehensible to the Eastern mind. For example, after such a disaster in a theatre had just occurred the Americans usually close all the other theatres. Since it never occurs to them to close the theatres before an accident happens, it must be supposed that this retroactive procedure is regarded as an act of expiation to their gods."

"The custom is the more peculiar," continues the Japanese observer, "since it is the usual practice of the Americans to close up or suppress apparently quite innocent activities in mere suspicion that something undesirable might happen. They would suppress meeting news because somebody might bet on it, forbid meetings because something improper might be said, and abolish dancing and one-piece bathing suits because they might lead to evil thoughts.

"Generally speaking, it may be said to be the tendency of Americans to expect, and suspect, the worst. According to the American ideas people will always be as wicked as the police will let them be. But this national pessimism is limited only to the field of morals. When it comes to insecure buildings, unseaworthy boats or hazardous grade crossings, the Americans are invincibly optimistic. Since an element beyond human control enters into this, it must be said that this is a manifestation of their fundamental piety. They will trust their luck a great deal further than they will trust themselves.

"This is readily noticeable," says the Japanese visitor, "in the field of politics. If a political party has let the roof fall in on the country, they do not close up the other political parties of the same design, structure and materials. They go right over to see the show advertised at the competing theatre. And when the roof falls in there, too, they have no place to go but back to the old house, which in the meantime has been rebuilt on the same old plan. There seems to be some foundation for the general belief that Providence looks after the American people. Certainly, somebody does."

Slowly the lessons of this conference are spreading over the world and influencing the political thought even of peoples unrepresented here. For example, the German Government has at last balanced its budget, in principle.

GENOA CONFERENCE MAY BE POSTPONED

New East Parley in Paris, Which Is to Be Held First, Is Delayed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—Lord Curzon will not leave for Paris tomorrow as was intended, and the conference with Premier Poincaré and Marquis Della Torretta, the Italian Foreign Minister, to discuss the problem of the Near East, has been postponed, as a result of the receipt from the French Government of a memorandum which demands time for examination.

This memorandum explains the French point of view in Eastern matters and is in the nature of a reply to an earlier British memorandum on the Near East that had been communicated to Paris and Rome.

LONDON, Jan. 30 (Associated Press).—The Italian Government, which has the arrangements for the Genoa Economic Conference in hand, considers that a slight postponement of the conference may be necessary, says an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Rome today. This belief, it is indicated, arises from the postponement of the conference at Paris on Near Eastern questions, between the British, French and Italian Foreign Ministers, originally fixed for Feb. 1.

ROME, Jan. 30 (Associated Press).—The Italian Government is continuing its preparations for the organization of the Genoa economic conference as if all the countries that have been invited, including the United States and France, had unqualifiedly announced their intention to be represented.

Prefect Hiect of Genoa came to Rome today and conferred with Marquis Della Torretta, the Minister of Foreign Affairs; Angelo Mauri, Minister of Agriculture, and Eugenio Bergamasco, Minister of the Navy, who have been commissioned to arrange the preliminary details in connection with the conference. The prefect has requisitioned the Royal Palace of the Ancient Doges for the sittings of the conference. The Hotel Bristol, the Grand Hotel, the Excelsior and the Metropole, in fact, all the leading hostelries of the city, have been notified by the prefect that they must be ready to receive the various delegations as soon as they have made known their plans.

It is reported that the Russian delegation, headed by Nikolai Lenin, will be accompanied by thirty servants and five cooks. The Russians have elected to stay at the Hotel Germania.

Thus far no reservations have been made for the newspapermen. The Associated Press correspondent was informed today by the Minister of Foreign Affairs that there probably would be no hotel available for the journalists, and that an obsolete transatlantic liner, moored at one of the piers, would be the home of the writers during the conference.

Signor Sicci has instructed the telephone and telegraph administration virtually to completely rewire the city, in order to give the visiting delegations private telephones in their quarters at the hotels so that they may be in direct communication with their respective Governments. Minister of Posts and Telegraphs Giuffrida is arranging for seven supplementary wires to be placed in the conference room of the palace, three of them running direct to London, three to Paris and one to Berlin, working twenty-eight telegraph instruments which will be capable of handling 60,000 words an hour.

Hope was expressed at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs today that the United States will be represented at the conference. It was said to be the feeling in political circles that without American participation the conference would not be a complete success.

The Italian Government has not yet named its delegates to Genoa, but prominently mentioned as possibilities are Count Sforza, who recently was appointed Ambassador to France and who is a veteran of many Supreme Council meetings, and Senator Schanzer, who is head of the Italian delegation at the Washington conference.

JUDGES HOLD COURT IN BERLIN CABARET

Sit With Complainants, Witnesses and Lawyers To Judge Morality of Ballets.

By CYRIL BROWN.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—As a novelty unprecedented in the history of German jurisprudence a German court transferred its solemn activities to a cabaret during a public performance that was attended by a regulation paying audience. The scene was the result of a crusade against immoral plays and dancing exhibitions.

The scene was the "Miniature Art Theatre Potpourri," a small cabaret dance hall with a tiny stage. The case was "The State versus Bach and Ballet," performers of the so-called "naturalistic beauty dances." The charge was "a public nuisance."

The gallery had been reserved for court purposes and here, on the left-hand side, close up front where they could get an intimate view of the ballet, the stage as well as the playing audience seated downstairs at tables, mostly drinking coffee, smoking, talking and laughing, the learned-looking Presiding Judge and his two associates took their places, flanked by the State Attorney and Recording Secretary. The rest of the gallery was occupied by lawyers for the defense, criminals, police and witnesses (including experts on art, clothing, dancing and morals). The complainants and co-defendants not otherwise engaged in exhibiting the alleged objectionable dances were all summoned to appear in the cabaret court.

The program lasted an hour and a half. The paying audience was permitted to applaud ad libitum, but the dignity of the courtroom was maintained by the gallery occupants, as far as manifesting their feelings was concerned, though the Court took no umbrage at witnesses, experts, lawyers, detectives at all smoking coffee and drinking. The Judges equitably divided their attention between studying the nature of the dances on the stage and the appearance and deportment of the mostly male paying audience during the pauses. In this public performance nudity was not complete, but some dances left little to the imagination.

Despite the fact that the court was holding its session in the gallery the paying cabaret audience behaved normally, and at the end of the show the court equally normally adjourned.

In the morning the same cabaret court had sat with the public rigidly excluded and heard the performances of the Bach ballet, including several numbers in absolute nudity, which, it had been charged, were performed before an artistic society of Friends. This was totally more interesting than the case which recently resulted in the conviction of the pioneer nude dancer, Celly Dersay, because of the considerable artistic merit of the Lola Bach ballet, so that the Berlin Judges must base their verdict upon a nice decision of the dividing line between the nude in art and a public nuisance.

SWINGING TO GERMAN IDEA OF A BIG LOAN

Majority of Reparations Board Said to Believe Now It Is Sole Solution.

WIRTH NOTE IS CONSIDERED

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 30.—The reply to the Reparations Commission's request for suggested means of settling the reparations problem concludes as follows:

"It is only on condition that recourse is had to domestic and foreign credit in order to bring to a successful conclusion financial operations on a large scale that Germany will be in a position to fulfill the task of reparations and restore confidence in Germany's solvency to the world at large. It is essential to the satisfactory solution of the problem."

It was on that note also that Dr. Rathenau in his speech to the Supreme Council at Cannes on Jan. 12 concluded. It was the same idea in the minds of the British financiers which decided Lloyd George to propose the conference at Genoa and make the beginning of a new system with Russia. It was the same idea which underlay the finding of the Hoover commission that under guarantees loans must be made to European countries.

In the Temps tonight, almost alone of French newspapers, the idea gets powerful backing from Jean Herbette, its editor, in a leading article in which, after pointing out the dangers and disillusions that lie in all provisional or temporary settlements, he concludes:

"There is only one remedy—an international credit operation. When will the Government begin to discuss it?"

Reparations Board Coming to It.

Lastly this conclusion is one to which after so many attempts at a settlement the majority of the members of the Reparations Commission are coming—though it is not strictly their business—as the only possible way out.

Today the commission met twice to consider the German reply and at the end of the day sent the text and its many pages of annexes to their various Governments with a covering letter in conformity with the procedure laid down at Cannes. It will now be for the Governments to decide whether they will proceed with a discussion of the German proposals directly or refer it back for decision to the commission, and for the present the latter course, it is believed, will be adopted. But it is not thought likely that this will lead to any definite result. Sooner or later, it is predicted, the commission will come to a deadlock, for the two entirely opposite opinions of the British and Italian delegates on the one side and of the French and Belgian delegates on the other seem utterly unreconcilable.

Today in the French press the German note has on the whole a very unfavorable reception. Philippe Millet, one of the most liberal of French writers, argues in the Petit Parisien that it would have been better for the German Government to have gone much further in making sacrifices in order to meet this year's payments, for then there would have been a more favorable reception of their last suggestion of an international loan to Germany, of which the author, he says, is certainly Dr. Rathenau.

This is the same scheme as was discussed by Loucheur and Lloyd George at Chequers in December and to which little by little the British Premier, with at least the tacit consent of the late French Cabinet, was trying to lead events and opinion. But before it can be realized there will be many weeks, probably many months, of haggling and discussion on the old exhausted and insolvable question of how much Germany can pay every three months toward the total sums fixed last May in the London accord.

Even if a provisional settlement should be reached it will in effect only prolong the uncertainty for all countries, for so long as France and Belgium do not know how they stand they cannot put their financial position in order. So long also as Germany does not know how she stands she cannot even attempt to make her budget balance.

Other Writers Take Harsher View.

Unfortunately this view is that only of Millet and Herbette and a few Socialist writers in the otherwise abysmally prejudiced French press. Pertinax, for instance, in the Echo de Paris, tries to prove that the only object of Chancellor Wirth and Dr. Rathenau is to destroy the schedule of payments of last May.

Jacques Bainville tries to stir up bad feeling by demonstrating that Wirth seeks to reconstruct devastated France while keeping German capital intact for industrial enterprise.

In the Eclair the ingenious idea is advanced by Leon Ray that the German Government should be obliged to abolish the German mark by buying francs for national currency from the Bank of France at the rate of 15 paper marks to the franc.

In the Intransigeant and other papers all the "ifs" of the German reply and insinuated requests for reduction are the text for diatribes against the new proposals.

But out of it all there emerges the one firm and definite suggestion, which is so slowly but surely gaining ground, that the only possible solution is in the restoration of German and European credit generally by an international loan. Even the most determined opponents of this measure are being compelled to see that the long uncertainty and the necessity of Germany making payments every three months or so in foreign currencies prevent that country from ever restoring order to her finances.

That was the reason which underlay the suggestion two months ago that a moratorium should be granted to Germany. In face of the opposition in this country, the idea had to be temporarily dropped. To this extent it has, however, fulfilled its purpose, that it has advanced the slow-moving current of public opinion in every European country, and also it is hoped in America, to a realization of the futility of going on with the present hand-to-mouth schemes with their perpetual changes and their perpetual uncertainty.

Now almost unanimously it is said the Reparations Commission has come to see that the only salvation lies in a big international loan, which will stabilize financial situations in all the countries involved, and, though such a remedy is not for the commission to suggest officially, it is understood that various members are pressing that idea on their Governments.

America Holds Key to Situation.

But the key to the whole situation lies with America. It is only there that the money can be found with which to undertake the immense work that must be done, and for reasons which need not be emphasized European statesmen are becoming shy of suggesting anything which has even the appearance of asking a favor of the western republic. They realize that they must hammer away and do their best till the tide of opinion turns in the way which Lloyd George hoped, and probably still hopes, that the Genoa conference will turn it.

In France, with its thousands of homes still in ruins, its villages blotted out and a notice board all that is left to tell where they stood, its towns in ruins along the rim of the old battlefields, there cannot be any other public opinion than that Germany must be somehow or other compelled to pay to the uttermost for the damage she wrought.

In England, with her two millions out of work, there cannot be any other opinion than that Germany should be allowed to become again as she was before the war—England's best customer.

In Belgium there cannot be any other opinion than that Germany must repair the financial ruin of the four years of occupation.

In Italy, with her exchange at a disastrous ebb and her food prices far beyond the capacity of her dense population, there cannot be any other opinion than that new markets should be opened to her in the same way as England seeks.

All these opinions must dictate in different ways the policies of the countries which sit in the Reparations Commission and in the Supreme Council where Roland Boyden and Ambassador Harvey sit, as unparticipating observers. Yet all these delegates know, from two and a half years' experience, that their only hope lies in the suggestion which Dr. Rathenau and Chancellor Wirth now put forward as a sequel to the conversations of the last two months—that devastated France cannot be reconstructed by any one country or any two countries, but must be reconstructed by all countries through the medium of an international loan.

Yet they dare not ask America to take the initiative. They are perhaps proud in not submitting to those conditions of further disarmament and economy which the Hoover commission and the McCormick resolution suggest.

But is it extraordinary that France in her poverty should be proud? Is it extraordinary that she should say reparations first and disarmament afterward? America did not make conditions when she came into the war on the side of the Allies, but dictated in their wide outlines the terms of peace. And today there still remain the shreds of the hope that she will not make conditions in the possible settlement which can be made which will rebuild Europe.

Economy and an attempt to balance their budgets have begun in all countries. In such a democratic country as France disarmament is only an affair of time and a swing of opinion when nerves are at rest. That is the situation as it stands today, and for Germany, as for France, the only solution lies with America.

SPEAKS FOR JAPAN'S ARMY.

Yamanashi Warns of Disregarding the Martial Spirit.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—It was reported from Tokio today that Lieut. Gen. Tamanashi, the Minister of War, had given the following statement to the newspapers:

"While it is a matter of great satisfaction to every one that the Washington conference is being crowned with success, a serious mistake is being made by some of the political leaders of Japan in their efforts to disregard the martial spirit of the nation, which is as essential to the peaceful expansion of the people as it is in time of war.

"It is wrong to consider that a martial spirit is incompatible with the limitation of armaments. In a certain sense armament is an expression of national power, which is the sum total of various kinds of individual energy. Modern warfare, for instance, demands national industry besides shells and bayonets. Therefore, if a nation is to advance and hold its own in the industrial competition that must necessarily follow on the establishment of a world peace, its martial spirit must be expanded and developed to such a degree as the actual armament is reduced."

Prince Regent Hirohito, according to Tokio reports, sent the following message to the Ministers of War and Marine:

"On this the fortieth anniversary of the issuing by his late Majesty of his message to the military forces, I, in my new capacity as Regent, am so deeply impressed by the spirit of the message that I take this opportunity of uttering my profound wish that the forces of the army and navy shall redouble their efforts in the discharge of their duty of guarding the throne, in obedience to the command of his late Majesty the Emperor Meiji."

ASKS LEAVE TO PRACTICE.

Application by American Attorney Filed With World Court.

When the sessions of the Permanent Court of International Justice at the Hague opened yesterday the first application on file by an American attorney for permission to practice before the court was that of Amos J. Peaslee of Peaslee & Compton of New York City, and of Peaslee, Irwin & Smith of Philadelphia.

Mr. Peaslee, who, while attached to the American Peace Commission, urged greater recognition of the work of the Hague conferences and more prominence to the World Court in the League of Nations plan, returned last week from a trip abroad to arrange for the presentation of his application to practice.

Mr. Peaslee made a study of the Permanent Court and its problems while abroad. In discussing the court, Mr. Peaslee said yesterday:

"The Permanent Court of International Justice has come into existence to meet the necessity for some supreme tribunal to bring order out of the chaos of statements as to what constitutes international law, and to develop and apply fairly, fearlessly and uniformly principles of right and justice among the nations of the world.

"The many separate sovereignties in the family of nations are the largest business corporations that ever existed. Their daily intercommunication has resulted in a network of treaties, conventions, declarations of principles, policies and programs far more complicated than the relations and laws with which our ordinary courts wrestle.

"The Supreme Court at the Hague should be supplemented in time with a complete system of lower courts. It is unfortunate that more prominence was not given in the court and a judiciary system in the plan of the League of Nations. The Covenant does not contain an adequate bill of rights to protect the nations and peoples from possible usurpation of power by the Council and the Assembly of the League of Nations."

WORLD COURT HOLDS ITS FIRST MEETING

LODER PROVISIONAL HEAD

League of Nations Called On to Provide a Court With Provisional Secretariat.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 30 (Associated Press).—At the first informal and preliminary sitting of the Permanent International Court of Justice in the Peace Palace today nine of the eleven Judges and two supplementary Judges were present. Dr. B. T. C. Loder of Holland took the chair pending the election of a President.

The first question to be settled was whether the supplementary Judges should participate in this election. This being decided in the affirmative, the meeting decided to invite the two other supplementary Judges, namely, Demetriu Negulesko of Rumania and Dr. Chung-hui Wang of China, to participate. The election will take place at the next sitting on Friday of this week. In the meantime Dr. Loder will act as Provisional President.

It was decided at today's sitting to request the Secretariat of the League of Nations to provide a court with a Provisional Secretariat. The first public meeting of the court was fixed for Feb. 15.

Among the Judges present today were John Bassett Moore of the United States, Viscount Finlay of Great Britain, Yorozu Oda of Japan, Senator Ruy Barbosa of Brazil, Rafael Altamira of Spain, Dionisio Anzilotti of Italy, Max Huber of Switzerland and Charles André Weiss of France.

No Cases for Court Yet.

The Permanent Court of International Justice, created by the League of Nations, meets with nothing on its calendar. Eighteen nations have agreed to give the court compulsory jurisdiction on all disputes arising among them, but these nations so far have found nothing to go to law about.

It is expected, however, according to the League of Nations News Bureau of this city, that cases will be presented to this world court shortly after its organization. Lack of business is no indication of lack of importance in a new court, it was pointed out, since the most powerful judicial body on earth, the Supreme Court of the United States, had an empty calendar for two years after its organization. It was not until its fourth sitting that the highest American court had its maiden case.

Besides being the accepted court of eighteen nations, the Permanent Court receives through the League of Nations compulsory jurisdiction over disputes relating to international labor and transit conventions, the recent treaties about liquor in Africa, the traffic in arms and the protection of minorities in countries of mixed populations.

Several questions involving the interpretation of new treaties have arisen and are expected to be submitted soon to the new tribunal, though the "papers" have not been filed as yet.

The court must meet once a year at least, the usual date of assembling being June 15. The President, who must reside permanently at The Hague, receives 60,000 Dutch florins, or about $24,000, while the Vice-President and Judges receive from 15,000 to 45,000 florins, depending on the number of days of service. No member of the court may exercise "any political or administrative functions" or "act as agent, counsel or advocate in any case of an international character."

The eleven Judges were elected in September by the Assembly and Council of the League of Nations. They are:

Viscount Finlay, formerly Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain and a member of the Permanent Court of Arbitration.

André Weiss, Member of the Institute of France and of the Permanent Court of Arbitration.

Commendatore Dionisio Anzilotti, Professor of International Law at Rome and Member of the Permanent Court of Arbitration.

Ruy Barbosa, Brazilian statesman and law professor.

B. C. D. Loder, member of the Supreme Court of the Netherlands.

Yorozu Oda, Professor of International Law at the University of Kyoto, Japan.

John Bassett Moore, former Counsellor of the United States Department of State.

The four Deputy Judges are:

C. W. Wang, President of the Chinese Supreme Court.

Frederik Valdemar Nikolai Beichmann of Norway.

Importance of the Court.

In its statement yesterday the League of Nations News Bureau said:

"This development in international affairs can hardly be exaggerated in importance. From now on there will exist a permanent world court composed of men of the highest individual and professional standing, representing all the great systems of international thought and law, chosen from a world ballot by the suffrage of fifty-one nations, and always open for the settlement of disputes on the basis of law and justice rather than diplomatic expedience. In the years to come this court, like the Supreme Court of the United States, should build up a precedent and a prestige which will give it a vital place in international relations.

"Of the many activities entrusted into by the League, the court is probably of most interest to the United States. Though America has given it no official co-operation whatsoever since the treaty fight began, it is noteworthy that Secretary of State Elihu Root gave the project its early impetus at the second Hague conference; that the American delegation to the Paris Peace Conference suggested a provision for such a court in the League covenant; that Mr. Root later suggested a position on the committee of jurists which drew up the present court and even succeeded in providing that the court should be open not only to members of the League but to States invited to join the League; that the Republican platform and President Harding have declared in favor of such a court, and that among the eleven men who today form the first court is John Bassett Moore, one of America's foremost jurists."

HEROISM SHOWN BY MEN WHO DIED

SO THEY LOST THEIR CHANCE

Persons From All Over the Country and All Walks of Life Among the Victims.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The audience in the Knickerbocker Theatre at the time of the tragedy Saturday night was a typical cross-section of Washington life. Few were natives of the District. The dead and injured included men, women and children from many States and all walks of life.

In at least two instances the self-sacrifice of men, who when found by rescuers pinned under the débris, urged that succor be given to others first, cost them their lives.

Douglas Hillyer, 2,021 Hillyer Place, whose body was one of the first to be taken from the theatre, was prominent in local athletic circles and was well known as an amateur golfer and a tennis player of ability. About three years ago he married Miss Imogene McGraw of Washington, who had an ankle fractured in the collapse and is at Emergency Hospital in a highly nervous condition. They have one child.

Miss Helen W. Dortch, 40 years of age, was a daughter of Mrs. Hattie W. Dortch of Berryville, Clark County, Va., and a sister of Tyson Dortch, a Federal attorney in New York City. She was a teacher in an art school.

Daniel K. Jackson was a real estate broker and had been identified for years with golf activities in the District. He married about a year ago Mrs. Ireven Donnelly of Washington. He was 48 years old.

Brousseau Died, Friend Saved.

Wilfred A. Brousseau Jr., who died from injuries received in the theatre crash, was a native of North Adams, Mass., where his father is City Physician. Brousseau was a student at the School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University. He and a friend, William L. Peters, went to the show together. Peters says he threw himself under a seat and Brousseau tried to follow his example, but was caught on the arm of the chair.

Howard S. Kneesi, Vice President of the Semmes Motor Company, was a Director of the du Pont National Bank and well known in business circles. He was 34 years of age, and is survived by his injured wife.

Colonel Charles C. Tucker, who was killed with his wife, was a native of Washington and served as a page in the House of Representatives when a boy. Admitted to the District bar, he served as reporter of the Court of Appeals. During the World War he was in the Judge Advocate General's Department. In 1919 he married Miss H. Zimmerman of Baltimore. They are survived by two daughters.

Dr. Clyde M. Gearhart, who was injured when his wife was killed, is a dental specialist and President of the American Academy of Periodontology. His legs were crushed and his right heel has been cut off at the hospital. A friend, Dr. F. H. Edmonds, an optician, furnished blood for transfusion before the operation. The surgeons have not yet decided whether amputation of the left leg will be necessary.

Mrs. Marie H. Smith was seventy years old and had been prominent in relief movements for years. She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. H. W. Vansenden.

Asked That Women Be Saved First.

Scott Montgomery, chief of the accounts section of the Veterans' Bureau, served as a Sergeant in the Medical Corps during the World War. He was taken from the ruins alive, but died at the hospital.

Sergeant Montgomery was a hero to the last. Found by his rescuers pinioned by a steel girder and almost buried in cement and plaster, he protested that he was all right and murmured, "For God's sake, help the women."

He had been accompanied to the theatre by Miss Veronica Murphy of 1,800 California Street, who was killed by his side.

John Miller Jeffries, 27 years, and Miss Elizabeth Jeffries, 23, brother and sister, were children of Louis E. Jeffries, general counsel and Vice President of the Southern Railway system. Young Jeffries was with a real estate firm. His sister was a graduate of Ogontz School.

Captain Reginald C. Vance, who was killed with his wife, was President of the Piedmont National Bank of Fredericksburg, Va., and of the Farmers' Creamery, and also owner of the Mansfield Hall herd of Jersey cattle and dairy farm near that city.

Alfred G. Eldridge, who lost his life with his wife, was for twenty-seven years organist at St. Margaret's Protestant Episcopal Church. The congregation at St. Margaret's paid silent tribute to the dead organist on Sunday. The Eldridges are survived by a 10-year-old son.

Joseph Wade Beale, 27 years old, was first violinist at the Knickerbocker Theatre. He married Miss Margaret Denham Tuesday and had just returned from his honeymoon Saturday afternoon. His bride is at her home in a serious condition.

The young man's father is "Ben" Beale, a veteran telegrapher, who has charge of the telegraph staff at the arms conference press room. A desire to become a violinist was interrupted many years ago by the loss of an arm. When his son was born that desire to become proficient on the violin was transferred to him.

Ernesto Natiello, leader of the Knickerbocker Orchestra, was for three years Director of the Strand Orchestra at Louisville, and had been at the Knickerbocker only three months. His wife, who was in the audience, escaped with slight injuries.

Asked to Have Others Taken.

Albert G. Bushler, 22 years old, who died a few minutes after he was taken from the wreckage, was a graduate of Cornell University, and an instructor there for a year after his graduation. He then became an examiner in the Patent Office. In the World War he was commissioned a Lieutenant of Engineers, and later a Captain. After the war he entered the patent aeronautic division of the War Department.

But for his self-sacrifice, Mr. Bushler could probably have been saved. Witnesses say that when rescuers reached him, he assured them that he was alright and asked them to take others nearby, including his wife, who is now in the hospital suffering from bruises and a lacerated arm.

ENVOYS AND DELEGATES SEND CONDOLENCES

M. Sarraut, Baron Shidehara and Minister Brun Express Their Sorrow in Letters to Hughes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Albert Sarraut, head of the French delegation to the arms conference; Baron Shidehara, the Japanese Ambassador, also a delegate to the conference, and Constantin Brun, the Danish Minister, sent letters today to Secretary Hughes, expressing sorrow over the loss of life in the Knickerbocker Theatre disaster.

M. Sarraut wrote:

"It is with the most profound sorrow that I have heard the news this morning of the awful accident that has plunged the city of Washington and so many families into mourning.

"This fearful catastrophe will move France with that deep emotion which is felt when misfortune overtakes one's dearest friends.

"I should have gone in person to present my sorrowful condolence and that of the French delegation if I had not been confined to my room for several days past by illness.

"By this convey, I beg you, the expression of those sentiments to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia and the families of the victims.

"Accept, Mr. Secretary of State, with the assurance of my very sad sentiment, this expression of my deepest sympathy."

Ambassador Shidehara's message read:

"I take advantage of this early opportunity to convey to you expression of the great shock and sorrow with which I learn of the terrible accident which took place at the Knickerbocker Theatre, in this city, on the 28th inst., whereby many persons lost their lives and scores were injured.

"In the face of a disaster entailing so much death and suffering, the sympathies of the entire world will go out to those who have been overtaken by this great calamity, and I beg the privilege of assuring you of the deep sincerity with which the people of Japan will share this sentiment."

Baron Shidehara also sent this letter to Cuno H. Rudolph, President of the Board of District Commissioners:

"As the representative of my Government and people, I ask the privilege of expressing to you the deep essence of shock and grief with which the news has been received of the appalling accident which took place on last Saturday evening at the Knickerbocker Theatre, in this city.

"In the presence of a calamity so stressing and entailing so much of death and suffering, the sympathies of my people go out in full measure to the people of Washington, and I beg, through you, to assure them of my heartfelt solicitude and sorrow."

Minister Brun's letter read:

"I have to express to you on behalf of the Danish Government the profoundest sympathy in the disaster which befell the Capital of the United States on Saturday, Jan. 28, when owing to the enormous fall of snow the roof of the Knickerbocker Theatre collapsed, resulting in the death or injury of several hundred people.

"As a resident of this city since a number of years I cannot but feel deep sorrow myself in this tragedy, and I now beg to express these personal feelings to you together with the grief of the Danish Government."

FULL TRAIN SERVICE RESTORED AT CAPITAL

Street Car Lines Also Are Being Opened as Warm Temperature Melts the Snow.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Bright sunshine and warmer temperature did much today to restore normal conditions in Washington and the middle Atlantic section buried under Saturday's severe snowstorm.

Forecasts of the Weather Bureau were for a continuation of the favorable temperature and it was generally believed that tomorrow night would see a resumption of activities suspended since the storm began Friday night.

All danger of a food shortage in the capital passed away during the day as train service became normal. Regular schdules were resumed by trains on the Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio at noon.

Street car service here was not so quickly resumed. While many lines were opened today, the two traction companies serving the city stated that it would be late tomorrow before some of their cars, stranded since Friday night in outlying sections, could be released and the lines cleared for traffic.

Reports from Baltimore, Philadelphia and other cities told of rapid restoration of normal conditions. Heavy seas were still being experienced in the vicinity of Hampton Roads, with several vessels still in danger.

GRIDIRON CLUB FOR INQUIRY.

Pays Tribute by Resolution for Two Members Who Were Killed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Members of the Gridiron Club held a special meeting today at the New Willard Hotel to take action upon the deaths in the theatre disaster of Chauncey C. Brainerd, its Vice President, who was correspondent of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, and Lewis W. Strayer, former President, who was correspondent of The Pittsburgh Despatch.

James P. Hornaday of The Indianapolis News, President of the club, presided at the meeting which adopted a resolution, requesting the District Attorney to direct the Grand Jury to make immediate investigation of the cause of the disaster "with the view of securing the indictment and punishment of all persons, whether architects, contractors, owners or officials, found by law to be responsible for the unnecessary, inexcusable and criminal sacrifice of more than 100 human lives."

Resolutions of tributes to the two dead members were adopted and committees were appointed to attend their funerals.

The funeral of Mr. and Mrs. Brainerd will be held Wednesday at 3 P. M. at Gawler's Chapel. The Rev. J. McBride Sterrit will conduct the services and the Gridiron Quartet will sing. Immediately afterward the services for Mr. Strayer will be conducted in the chapel.

MET DEATH BESIDE HIS BRIDE.

W. M. Crocker, a Native of New Jersey, Was Killed Instantaneously.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Five months from the day of his wedding William Mortimer Crocker, age 26, died in the Knickerbocker Theatre tragedy, while his bride, formerly Miss Elsie Anderson, daughter of J. Robert Anderson of the Department of Justice, escaped serious injury.

The couple sat in the third row of the balcony. When the crash came, the husband was killed instantaneously. His bride grasped his hand and called to him as the roof fell, but she heard only a groan and there was no responsive clasp of his fingers. She sat beside his body until released from the wreckage about 1 o'clock Sunday morning, having suffered a severe mental shock.

Mr. Crocker was a native of Washington, N. J., where his parents live. After leaving high school there, he attended Columbia University. When the United States entered the World War, he enlisted in the army but later was transferred to the navy and became aide to the officer in charge of the anti-submarine school.

He had been for two years the representative here of the World's Trade Club of San Francisco and the American Metric Association of New York. He was a young man of fine personality and high character.

He was a member of the Church of the Covenant, and the funeral will be held there tomorrow afternoon.

ORDERS A SURVEY OF THEATRES HERE

ACCIDENT UNLIKELY, HE SAYS

President of Theatre Chamber of Commerce Says All Precautions Are Taken.

An immediate reinspection of all the theatres, moving picture houses and other places of assembly in Manhattan will be made as a result of the collapse of the Knickerbocker Theatre in Washington. A survey of the entire situation will be made by Charles Brady, Superintendent of Buildings, acting under instructions of Borough President Julius Miller. The Borough President said he assumed that all places of public assembly in this borough were safe in the absence of any reports to the contrary.

An immediate inspection of all the theatres and other public gathering places throughout the entire city was urged yesterday by Chief Magistrate William McAdoo, who is conducting a John Doe investigation into the collapse of the American Theatre, Bedford Avenue, near Park Avenue, Brooklyn, on Nov. 29 last, when seven workmen were killed and seventeen were injured, and by District Attorney John E. Ruston of Kings County.

"A disaster like that which has occurred in Washington is impossible in New York City," said William Brandt, President of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, having hundreds of members in this city. "There is no chance for a theatre in New York City to collapse under the weight of a blanket of snow, for the reason that, following the collapse of two marquise awnings in front of two theatres during a snowstorm a year ago, we called upon the members of our organization to clear away the snow the minute it began to fall. Every precaution that can be taken is taken to insure New York's citizens of theatres that are safe in every respect."

Want a Reinspection.

"In view of what has happened in Washington," said Chief Magistrate McAdoo, "I think it was very fortunate indeed, for the people of Brooklyn that the theatre which collapsed there, killing several people, was not open to the public. This Brooklyn theatre would have seated 1,050 persons. I think that the authorities in all the boroughs should rigidly reinspect all of these theatre buildings immediately, and especially those whose construction is on lines similar to that of the Brooklyn theatre, and if there is a reasonable probability of danger they should be closed until they are made safe.

"The investigation in Brooklyn disclosed that attached to the office of Commissioner of Public Works in that borough are young men called 'examiners,' who pass upon all plans submitted by architects and engineers for building construction.

"The young man who approved the plans in Brooklyn is 28 years old and receives a salary of $1,940 a year from the city. Without in any wise criticising him for his capacity, I have said, and I repeat, that it is a positive menace to the public safety that these examiners should not be selected with greater care and a higher salary paid them. A man of sufficient professional ability to have approved the plans of the Brooklyn theatre would have been easily worth $10,000 a year instead of $1,940. Each one of these examiners is subject to no other supervision. His approval is final.

"It would not be proper for me to make even a suggestion to that effect but up to this time there can be no question that the present regulations and laws are inefficient. I might add that the architect who drew the plans for the moving picture theatre in Brooklyn which collapsed was also architect, he tells me, for several other theatre buildings now being used by the public. It may be, and I hope it is the case, that these buildings are entirely safe, but it would not be amiss to look at them."

Every theatre, motion picture house and other place of assembly in the city has been inspected since 1919 by the inspectors of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, seeking to minimize the fire hazard, said Thomas M. Murphy, Acting Chief Engineer, yesterday. These structures are constantly under inspection by the theatrical squad, whose work, more or less routine in character, was rechecked for the first time in ten years. The routine squad includes thirteen inspectors for Manhattan, fifteen for Brooklyn, five for the Bronx, ten for Queens and six for Richmond.

Where violations were found the owners of the property were notified to make immediate corrections, according to Mr. Murphy. Most of the violations found by the inspectors were of the type where temporary or special equipment is employed by troupes playing at these houses.

For Quick Examinations.

District Attorney Ruston, who is conducting the John Doe investigation into the fall of the American Theatre, at the opening of yesterday's session before Chief Magistrate McAdoo, said the terrible catastrophe in Washington "makes our investigation here all the more important."

When Joseph Gaydica, head of the Gaydica Iron Works, the firm which did the steel construction of the American Theatre, was called as a witness yesterday he did not answer. Albert Conway, who said he represented Mr. Gaydica, said that he had a motion to make.

"I understand that Mr. Gaydica will not sign a waiver of immunity," interjected Mr. Ruston. "I will not examine any witness who had anything to do with the construction of the theatre unless he signs a waiver."

"We have not signed and will not sign a waiver," said Mr. Conway. "I move to set aside the service of the subpoena upon Mr. Gaydica on the ground that on the information laid before your Honor you had no jurisdiction to issue the subpoena."

Ida Freeman of 163 Herkimer Street and Mrs. Caroline Malloy of 216 Sixth Avenue, stenographers, were called to identify transcripts of a statement given by Mr. Gaydica in the District Attorney's office on Dec. 6, 7 and 12, and which were read into the record. In one of these transcripts Mr. Gaydica is quoted as having said that the American Theatre was a "cheap job, cheap owners and everything. It seems to me that they did not use enough cement."

The hearing will be continued on Friday afternoon.

EAGLE STAFF HONOR BRAINERD

Pay Tribute to Washington Correspondent Who Was Killed.

Members of the staff of The Brooklyn Eagle, at an informal meeting in their auditorium yesterday, paid tribute to the memory of The Eagle's Washington correspondent, C. C. Brainerd, who was killed in the Knickerbocker Theatre disaster with his wife, Arthur M. Howe, editor of The Eagle, presided at the meeting and a resolution was offered by Herbert F. Gunnison, Vice President and publisher.

Short speeches were made by Harris M. Crist, managing editor, and other members of the staff, who praised Mr. Brainerd's work as a newspaper man and his qualities as a friend. He had been a member of The Eagle staff about thirty-six years.

STATE CONTROL HERE SUGGESTED BY MILLER

Governor Thinks Industrial Commission Might Inspect Movie Houses—Resolution by Cuvillier.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 30.—In discussing the Knickerbocker Theatre catastrophe, Governor Miller said this afternoon that the construction of motion picture theatres in New York State might be a matter to be looked into by the State Industrial Commission. When told that Commissioner Sayer would be at the Capitol tomorrow, he said he would probably discuss the matter with him.

The Governor pointed out, however, that at present the construction of theatres was purely a matter for local authorities. The Industrial Commission has jurisdiction over factory and mercantile buildings, but the Governor indicated that he was not certain but what the commission ought to have the same authority with reference to theatres.

This resolution was offered in the Assembly tonight by Assemblyman Cuvillier, Democrat, of New York:

Whereas, none of the moving picture houses in the State are under the supervision of any State department or commission, as to their construction, and inspection as to their safety, and in the various cities, towns and villages in the State the local authorities in some instances fail to examine their construction and look into other details concerning their safety.

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Assembly that all motion picture houses be put under the exclusive control, supervision and jurisdiction as to their safety, of the State Labor Department.

The Labor Department is administered by the Industrial Commission.

PAYMASTER HELD UP AS PEOPLE PASS BY

Victim Too Frightened to Make an Outcry When Pistol Is Pressed Against Him.

Pressing a revolver so close to his victim's body that persons passing a few feet away did not notice it, a thief held up Max Silverberg, paymaster of the Eagle Swiss Embroidery Company, yesterday morning in the street near the office of the company at 102 Hague Street, Jersey City, and took from him $118.

Silverberg told the police that he was too frightened to make an outcry and he could not give a clear description of the robber or tell in which direction he went. The robber had threatened, "I will fill you full of lead if you make a peep," and since he added the warning as he started away, "Keep quiet and don't tell," Silverberg told the police he did not report the hold-up until he reached the nearest police station.

According to Silverberg's description, the thief was about 30 years old, wore a brown overcoat and weighed about 150 pounds. Silverberg had just come from his home, 2,123 Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn, and was walking from a Summit Avenue car when accosted by the highwayman.

Philadelphia Theatres Inspected.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30.—Inspection of all theatres and buildings in which public gatherings are held was ordered for Philadelphia today by Mayor J. Hampton Moore in a telegram sent from Washington, which the Mayor reached on his way home from the South. Director Cortelyou said that the energies of inspectors were being directed to seeing that snow was cleared off roofs of such buildings and that water and melting snow are not allowed to freeze on fire escapes.

STORM FORCES LINER TO RETURN TO PORT

SEVERAL SHIPS BATTERED

Steamships of all kinds, from the thousand-ton coaster to the 15,000-ton ocean liner, were arriving in port yesterday at slow speed after having been battered by the storm which raged on Friday night and Saturday between Sandy Hook and Sable Island.

The United States Lines steamship Princess Matoika, which left Hoboken on Saturday for Bremen with 400 passengers, mostly steerage, reported by radio that her steering gear had become disabled early Sunday morning when the vessel was about 100 miles east of the Ambrose Channel Lightship. Three hundred and twelve of the passengers were Polish orphans on their way back to their native land.

On receipt of the message the U. S. Coast Guard Gresham was ordered to go out to the rescue of the helpless liner, but was recalled on receipt of a second message from the captain of the Princess Matoika, stating that his ship was in no danger and that he was returning slowly to port and using his twin propellers for steering. Three tugs were sent to meet the liner and assist her to reach the quarantine, where she is expected early today.

The Comanche of the Clyde Line arrived yesterday forenoon from Jacksonville three days behind her scheduled time and her thirty passengers, including four women and two children, were very glad to get ashore. The vessel struck the worst gale off Hatteras and her steering gear was disabled which caused the vessel to be hove to for a few hours while repairs were made. Water entered the cabins, and some of the passengers had to change their cabins three or four times on that account in order to get a dry place to sleep.

Through the violence of the storm outside Sandy Hook on Saturday three of the pilots who were taking vessels out had to continue the voyage and did not return for weeks. One went on the Surinam to Trinidad, another on the Siboney to Havana and the third went to Antilla, Cuba, on the Munamar.

The Holland-America liner Ryndam arrived from Rotterdam three days late after a voyage which was a continuous encounter with storms and icy blasts that chilled the lookout men in the crow's nest and the officers on the bridge to their innermost marrow. The big beards of the Dutch sailors were a mask of ice and they had to go to the ship's galley to thaw them out before they could turn into their bunks.

The Cunarder Carmania from Southampton and the America of the U. S. lines from Bremen both arrived yesterday, three days late owing to storm, but they had not suffered any damage. The Hellig Olav of the Scandinavian-American Line arrived in Quarantine late last night for Hoboken and will dock early today.

The Fort Hamilton of the Furness Bermuda Line arrived yesterday from Bermuda after making one of the worst trips to New York in her history. Only six passengers out of 127 ventured to eat dinner in the dining saloon Sunday night.

COLD GRIPS WEST AGAIN.

Montana and Wyoming Report 28 Degrees Below Zero.

DENVER, Col., Jan. 30.—The West was in the grip of another cold wave today. The mercury went down to 28 degrees below zero in parts of Montana and Wyoming, while sub-zero temperatures prevailed in virtually all of the mountain districts of Colorado. A light snowfall was general over the region.

Forecasts for the new twenty-four hours were for the coldest weather of the Winter in Utah, Northern Arizona, Western Colorado and Western New Mexico.

SWIMS AMIDST ICE, SAVES DROWNING BOY

Joseph O'Brien, 9 years old, of 470 West 165th Street, was playing with several companions yesterday afternoon in the Speedway opposite West 174th Street when he mounted the railing atop the wall of the Harlem River and fell into the swiftly moving current. The boy, unable to swim, clutched a large block of ice and soon was swept into mid-stream.

Ignatius Ruiz, 27, a window cleaner of 116 West 127th Street, was strolling along the Speedway when he heard cries for help. Without removing his overcoat, Ruiz dove into the river and fought his way through the ice to O'Brien's side just as the boy lapsed into semi-unconsciousness and lost hold of the ice cake. Then began a struggle for two lives, the rescuer's and the boy's.

Cries of the boys on the Speedway had attracted the attention of Policeman John A. Conway of the West 177th Street station. He procured a rope. This he threw to Ruiz when the rescuer reached the wall and the two were drawn to safety—the boy first.

On the Speedway Ruiz collapsed. The policeman commandeered an automobile, bundled Ruiz in several robes, wrapped the boy in his uniform overcoat and started for Columbus Hospital. There it was found that Ruiz and the boy were suffering severely from exposure.

"It took a lot of nerve to jump into the Harlem River on a day like this," said Policeman Conway to Ruiz after the window cleaner had recovered somewhat.

"It wasn't nerve," said Ruiz. "It was impulse."

Dr. Concaras said the condition of both patients was favorable, and he hoped that pneumonia would be staved off.

CITY FREED OF SNOW.

Nearly 22,000 men worked yesterday to clear the city's streets of the eight-inch snowfall of Saturday and Sunday, and by last night about 8,000,000 cubic yards had been carted away in 1,500 motor trucks or flushed into the sewers.

All of the main thoroughfares were virtually clean by late afternoon, as well as the crosstown streets carrying the heaviest traffic, and trucks were carrying away the snow piles in the streets of less importance to traffic. Fifth Avenue was washed and hardly a sign of the recent storm remained.

The Police Department co-operated with the Street Cleaning Department. Every patrolman who went out on "beat" had instructions to notify all property holders that each would be held responsible for the cleaning of walks and gutters in front of his or her property. By this order the Street Cleaning Department hoped to prevent the choking of the waterways by ice should the temperature drop suddenly as it did in the storm just before New Year's Day. The orders were generally observed.

Alfred A. Taylor, the new Street Cleaning Commissioner, has been working nights and day to clear up the streets, and it is expected that every pile of snow will be out of the city's 951 miles of streets by the end of the week. John J. Condon, Superintendent of snow removal work, and his assistant, Harry Hart, have been directing the work since the storm, and hunting for men to put to work. Yesterday they had more than 11,500 emergency snow shovelers, 7,000 regular men in the Street Cleaning Department with more than 3,000 men employed by firms with contracts for snow removal.

"All the main arteries where vehicular traffic is heavy have been cleared," said Commissioner Taylor. "We have been very fortunate in having favorable weather conditions. All the main crosstown streets have been plowed and the snow removed. In the residential streets the snow has been piled and probably will be removed today."

All the city transit lines were running on schedule, although some trouble from ice in the street car "slots" was anticipated if a fall in temperature came today.

The Pennsylvania and the Baltimore & Ohio were sending out their trains for Washington and the South yesterday on schedule time, but a few of the incoming trains were slightly delayed.

START INQUIRIES INTO THEATRE WRECK

Coroner and Senate committees searched for evidence among the piles of iron and concrete. Army engineers were employed by the District Commission to make an investigation. Trucks were sent to the theatre and took away loads of building material, which will figure in the later inquiry.

Suggests Defect in Material.

Individual inspections were made by Colonel Charles Keller, District Engineer Commissioner, and several Senators and Representatives. Colonel Keller scouted the theory that the weight of the snow was alone sufficient to cause the collapse of the roof.

"Unless there was faulty or defective material," he said, "the weight of the snow was not enough to cause the collapse of the roof."

Colonel Keller, who examined pieces of the concrete roofing, was satisfied that it had been manufactured to meet specifications. He added that to the best of his belief, after his inspection of the building, the structure was constructed "according to rules laid down in the building code." The roof, he said, had been sufficiently anchored to meet all demands upon it.

"There may," he said, "have been some defect in the steel, for instance, which ordinary inspection would not reveal. That would account for the collapse. So far as I could determine there was no evidence of deterioration in the concrete or other material.

"The roof was constructed to stand a strain of twenty-five pounds to the foot and the snow which had collected placed no such burden upon it. It would appear more probable that some defect in material which ordinary inspection did not detect gave way, causing the entire structure to collapse."

Another official who expressed the opinion that there must have been a defect in material was Secretary Hoover. He did not believe that the burden of snow was sufficient to have caused the collapse.

Capper for Stringent Inquiry.

Congress will probably await the reports made by the Grand Jury and of the District Commission. It is argued that the Commissioners ought first to have a chance to show whether they mean to take action that will satisfy the public. But it is likely that an investigation will be made anyway by Congress into general enforcement of law in the District.

Senator Capper was the first to move for an inquiry, offering this resolution:

"Whereas, the tragedy of the Knickerbocker Theatre last Saturday evening, resulting in the death of 100 citizens and the serious injury of many others, has profoundly shocked the people of Washington and the entire nation; and

"Whereas, the explanation that snow, although of an extraordinary quantity, was the chief cause of the collapse of the roof appears to be unsatisfactory, and

"Whereas, it is concurrently reported that contractors and builders, especially during and since the World War, have ignored, evaded or treated lightly the rules and regulations provided in the building code of the District of Columbia, especially those sections which make mandatory provisions for assurance against such a terrible calamity as has just occurred; and

"Whereas, it has been persistently rumored that contractors and builders, determined to save money on the erection of residence and building structures, have acted in collusion with inspectors of buildings employed by the District of Columbia; and

"Whereas, it is the imperative duty of the Senate of the United States to know all the facts relating to this inexcusable tragedy and also to learn what, if any, truth there is in the repeated assertions that the safety and health of thousands of citizens and residents of the District of Columbia have been jeopardized by the action of careless contractors, builders and building inspectors,

"Resolved, that the Senate committee on the District of Columbia be and hereby is authorized and directed to make a searching investigation into the Knickerbocker tragedy, including the operations of builders, contractors and building inspectors, especially in relation to structures erected during and since the World War;

"Resolved, that the committee be authorized to employ such expert and other help as may in its judgment be needed to obtain all the facts connected with this disaster.

"Resolved, that the expenses of the investigation be defrayed from the contingent fund of the United States Senate."

"In the meantime, from conversation with the Chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia, Mr. Fess, as well as other members of that committee, it is my understanding that the District Committee is preparing to keep closely in touch with the investigation, and if at any time it seems proper and wise for the committee to investigate the matter on its own account, it will do so."

Despite this statement, Representative Thomas J. Ryan of New York City offered this resolution:

"Whereas the roof and balcony of the Knickerbocker Moving Picture Theatre collapsed on the evening of Jan. 28, 1922, and killed more than one hundred men, women and children; and

"Whereas the said collapse was brought about by the alleged faulty construction of the trusses, carrying walls, &c.; and

"Whereas such catastrophe would not have occurred had there been proper supervision, having regard for the safety of the public and a competent building code; and

"Whereas this same condition exists, to a certain extent, in other theatres and public buildings of the District of Columbia; and

"Whereas there is no proper supervision that would insure fire prevention and the safety of the public in the District of Columbia because of the lack of competent inspection and a proper building code; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That a committee be appointed by the District Committee of the House of Representatives for the appointment of a competent architect and engineer and a practical builder for the purpose of making a thorough investigation of the collapse of the roof and balcony of the Knickerbocker Moving Picture Theatre, and the erecting of the building so that its operation will prevent accidents of this particular nature occurring again;

"That this committee will investigate and report on fire prevention in the various public buildings in the District of Columbia, will make rules and regulations as to the consistent and efficient inspection of all public buildings in the District of Columbia;

"That such recommendations and changes as may be necessary, in the judgment of the said committee to be appointed, shall be reported back to the District Committee of the House of Representatives for the purpose of adding additional safeguards on all public buildings now erected and to be erected in the District of Columbia;

"That this committee will investigate and recommend such disciplinary action as may be necessary in their judgment for the proper observance of the necessary changes in the building code.

Many Firetraps, Says Freilinghuysen.

Supporting the Capper resolution, Senator Freilinghuysen remarked:

"I know of my own personal knowledge that the administration of the laws supposed to govern the District and protect the lives and welfare of its people is lax and laws are not being properly enforced. I believe a rigid investigation should be made of the entire administration of the District government. I demand, as one of the property owners of the District, that such an investigation be made.

"I know of my own personal knowledge that many buildings in the District are firetraps and that if any of them caught fire there probably would be a great loss of life.

"I know of my own personal knowledge that the laxity in the enforcing of traffic laws of the District is but another constant menace to the safety and welfare of the people of Washington.

"The resolution proposed by the Senator from Kansas should be enlarged so as to embrace a widespread investigation which should determine the laxity in law enforcement which we all know exists in Washington and which is a blot on the capital."

In the House several members were prepared to speak on the theatre disaster, but Representative Mondell, Republican floor leader, forestalled discussion by saying of the matter:

"A number of gentlemen have asked me whether the House would order an investigation. I have suggested to them that, inasmuch as under the law there must be a thorough inquiry, or should be, by the coroner's jury, and inasmuch as the District Commissioners and District Engineers have given notice that they intend to investigate the matter very thoroughly, it would not be well for Congress to start an investigation until these official bodies, directly responsible, shall have undertaken and concluded the investigations they propose to make.

White House Reception Put Off.

Because of the theatre tragedy President Harding put off a reception scheduled for tonight at the White House at which Washington residents of Ohio birth were to meet in observance of the birthday anniversary of President McKinley. The President said in a letter to Milton E. Alles, Chairman of the Arrangements Committee:

"While I have looked forward with most agreeable anticipation to the reception to be given tonight by the Ohio Society, at which we were to meet and happily recall the memory of the late President McKinley, I cannot but feel that we would best answer all our inclinations if the reception were postponed. There is so much of grief in Washington today, so much sorrow attending the Knickerbocker Theatre disaster, that I should prefer to omit a social affair while Washington is suffering from the great shock.

"It is especially becoming, as you have suggested, to have the Ohio Society take note of its own particular share in the great sorrow, and the cancellation will be a befitting expression of the grief which comes through accident and death to members and valued friends of the society."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—With the exception of five motion picture houses controlled by the corporation which owned the Knickerbocker, all theatres in the city were open today, advertisements in newspapers assuring the public that they had been carefully inspected and declared safe by officials.

Harry Crandall, manager of the Knickerbocker, in announcing that other theatres in the Crandall chain would remain closed until further notice, said that this was done not because any of the theatres were considered unsafe, but because he and his associates did not desire to accept money for amusement while the city was mourning for those who lost their lives at the Knickerbocker.

LED EDISON QUIZ; NOW WINS A BRIDE

MARRIAGE IS TOMORROW

The man who won Thomas A. Edison's AA mark of excellence for his answers to the inventor's famous questionnaire, thereby winning a job and several promotions in the Edison plants, is now to join the Edison family by marrying Miss Charlotte Hawkins, who is a sister of Mrs. Charles Edison, daughter-in-law of the inventor.

Samuel A. Halsey is this man, and when he and Miss Hawkins are married tomorrow night at the home of Edison's son at Llewellyn Park, West Orange, Thomas A. Edison will be one of the guests. Miss Hawkins has been doing welfare work in the Edison plants at Orange, and there she met the man who was so good at answering questions that she could not say no to the one he asked her.

This star of the Edison class is now manager of the Phonograph Corporation of Manhattan, the distributing and selling agency for the inventor's phonographs in the metropolitan district, but he has worked his way to this job after a thorough trial on several others in the Edison plants.

When Mr. Halsey was tackling the famous Edison questionnaire about a year ago, the inventor happened to enter the examination room. Halsey's paper was passed up to him, and the inventor marked it with the AA grade, or whatever he uses to designate excellence, and gave orders that the man should be hired from all the host who applied for jobs in the plant.

Charles Edison, son of the inventor, said last night that Halsey had been working in the Edison plants since last April and that he had made rapid progress through all the tests prepared for him by the Edison experts. He started by calculating the costs of hand cranes as compared to electric cranes and later was made chief of personnel under Charles Edison, who is Chairman of the Board of Directors of his father's corporations. While he was in this job he handed out the questionnaires to other applicants for work—and met Miss Hawkins.

The star questionnaire man is about 40 years old and got a start in the answering business by taking a course at St. Paul's School at Concord, Mass. Then he went to Brown University, started to study medicine in the University of Pennsylvania, changed his mind about being a physician and traveled.

He went into the real estate business in Newark, sold insurance and motor trucks, and other things. In the war he enlisted in Newark for the Naval Reserve Force, enlisted as chief yeoman, helped to build the Naval Reserve camp at Pelham, and then was sent to the Brooklyn Navy Yard to superintend motor vehicles there. After two years in the service he went into construction work in this city.

Then he decided to try the questionnaire with the miscellaneous knowledge he had picked up in all these occupations and vocations. In October he and Miss Hawkins told the inventor of their forthcoming marriage, and said that it was due to the questionnaire habit. All agreed it was a good habit.

STOCKHOLDERS IN WRANGLE

Meeting to Reorganize Remington Phonograph Ends in Disorder.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30.—A meeting of the stockholders of the Remington Phonograph Company, called to consider the question of reorganization, broke up in disorder today without taking any definite action. The company went into the hands of a receiver last December.

Many of the 400 stockholders, including a number of women, who attended the meeting today favored liquidating the affairs of the concern. Most of them inquired of the officers as to what had become of approximately $1,000,000 alleged to have been collected on stock. The concern's books showed that only $441,000 had been received.

The assets, according to the receiver, Louis Jerzawitz of New York, amount to about $100,000. He did not give the liabilities, but declared if the affairs were liquidated at once every one of the 3,100 stockholders would be paid in full.

Edwin Starr Ward, Chairman of the Stockholders' Committee, had been elected Chairman of the meeting when James J. Homes of New York, Vice President of the company, arrived and insisted that under the constitution he was the only one present who had authority to preside. He was shouted down, and the confusion that followed became so great that the manager of the hotel where the meeting was held threatened to call the police.

The Stockholders' Committee announced its resignation, and motions to adjourn constantly came from various parts of the room, but no attention was paid to them. Finally the gathering broke up in disorder, and without setting a date for another meeting.

CANADIAN PACIFIC NET UP.

Increases a Million While Gross Earnings Drop $23,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Jan. 30.—Net earnings of the Canadian Pacific Railway for 1921 were $34,201,740, an increase of $1,048,095. Gross earnings were $198,021,854, a decrease of $23,916,494. The increase in net in the face of marked decreases in gross is the result of drastic cutting down of operating expenses to $155,820,114, compared with $133,488,804 the previous year, the ratio of operating expenses being 61.26 per cent., as compared with 85 in 1920.

Figures for December show the net for the month $1,017,781, compared with $3,871,801 in November and $2,222,012 for December and 1920, and gross earnings of $15,736,923 compared with $18,787,879 in November and $20,604,167 December a year ago.

Lenin Wires He Will Attend.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—Nikolai Lenin, Russian Soviet Premier, has telegraphed the Italian Foreign Office that he will attend the Genoa Economic Conference, according to a Central News dispatch from Rome today. Recent Moscow dispatches announced that Premier Lenin had been named head of the Soviet Russian delegation to the Genoa conference with Foreign Minister Tchitcherin as vice chairman of the delegation. M. Tchitcherin being given full powers to act in case Premier Lenin decided not to go.

"Erasmic" Shaving Stick

"HUH! Palaface soap heap no good."

Such was the opinion of an Indian ex-warrior who occasionally visits New York.

He, however, was prejudiced in favor of the Indian custom of quilting out the beard by the roots to keep it from growing again.

Heroic treatment we would say, and hardly likely to become popular with the palefaces.

"Erasmic" Shaving Stick is not guaranteed to change the Redman's habits, but has been known to restore a White man's peace of mind.

MRS. ASQUITH TALKS OF DIARY AND JAZZ

ASKS WHO IS JANE ADDAMS?

But Wants to Meet Hughes—Calls Prohibition "a Splendid Try," but Fears It Favors the Rich.

Mrs. Margot Asquith, wife of the former British Premier, who arrived here yesterday on the Carmania and will lecture this afternoon at the New Amsterdam Theatre, discussed last night at the Hotel Ambassador some phases of world politics and some of the nice questions that arise in publishing diaries.

"Some people complain because you print things about people who are still alive. Others complain that you print them about those who are dead," said Mrs. Asquith, a slight woman, who looks just like the hundreds of photographs of her that have been printed in this country after her famous diary was published. She was interviewed in her suite, before she had time to take off her small black hat, on her arrival from the ship. She wore a gray knitted gown, with a patent leather belt about a foot wide.

"One set of critics objects to half the topics you discuss. Another set objects to the other half. If you do as they say you print nothing."

Mrs. Asquith said there might be some rules which a diarist should observe, but the only sure guide was good taste and discretion. She intimated that her countrywoman, Mrs. Clare Sheridan, had rather lost her amateur standing among diarists by publishing her diary installments from month to month, so that her hosts and hostesses found themselves praised or criticised or ridiculed in print within a few weeks after they entertained her.

Her Secretary Agrees with Her.

"I heard something about what Mrs. Sheridan had done before I came over here," she said. "Just what did she do?"

When she was told how Mrs. Sheridan had made a mild sensation by her speed in informing the public of the details of her entertainment in private houses, Mrs. Asquith removed a cigarette from her mouth, blew a slight cloud of smoke away and shook her head.

"That's not so fortunate," she said. "It seems to me that that's not so fortunate."

She asked the opinion of her woman secretary on this point and it turned out to be in exact accord with that of Mrs. Asquith herself.

"But it is difficult to say what you should do," said Mrs. Asquith. "There's no way to put an arbitrary time limit on what should be printed. It is wholly a question of taste."

Mrs. Asquith said she had no idea, at present at least, of writing anything about America, and expected to use her leisure in reading. She said a large number of people had in some way or another let her know that they were displeased with and annoyed by her diary, but that she did not remember that any one had been personally disagreeable to her. Asked if she had regretted that she had printed it, she said:

"No; I don't think I ever have."

Wants to Meet Secretary Hughes.

Charles Evans Hughes, Secretary of State, was the only man, now a stranger to her, that she was anxious to meet during her stay in this country, as far as she could remember. She said that she was quite anxious to renew the acquaintance of Elihu Root, and that she also intended to call on former President Wilson when in Washington.

When she was asked if there were any notable woman in the country whom she intended to make it a point of seeing, Mrs. Asquith asked:

"Who are they?"

There was a pause, and somebody named Jane Addams.

"Who is she?" asked Mrs. Asquith. Lee Keedick, manager of Mrs. Asquith's lecture tour, here gritted his teeth and hissed:

"Can't you think of some more important question to ask her?"

She was then asked if any feature of American life had a special interest for her.

"Prohibition," she said. "I think it is a splendid try. I am very much interested in it, and in favor of it. But I fear, from what I hear, that it is only enforced so that the poor can have no liquor while the rich can have all they want."

The divorce question is in the same position in England, Mrs. Asquith asserted later, the rich being able to obtain divorces, while the poor were denied them.

"I understand in this country," she said, "that the law is different in every State, so that if you cross the State boundaries you may have all the husbands you want. Isn't that so?"

Asks If Jazz Means Jargon.

One of the large group of interviewers that encircled Mrs. Asquith asked her if the younger generation in England was "going to the dogs" as fast as it was alleged to be doing here. In her opinion the speed of the younger set today was about the same as it was some years ago. In this connection some one mentioned the word "jazz" and Mrs. Asquith said quickly:

"I don't think that is confined to the young. I think we all use slang more or less. That is what you mean, isn't it? 'Jazz' means jargon, does it not?"

Mrs. Asquith declined to comment on Lloyd George, Lady Astor or other persons mentioned, and said she intended to keep off the subject of politics.

"Is the Premier, Lloyd George, as popular with the British public as he was?" she was asked.

"Do you think there will be a general election soon?"

"I have not been in the inner circle of politics for some time, but I do not think that it is likely to happen for some time to come. The Conservatives would have liked to have had one a few months ago, but they do not want one now."

Mrs. Asquith said that practically everybody in England was pleased and relieved over the settlement of the Irish question and had the greatest possible hopes for the successful outcome of the conference in Washington. Her interest in the work done there by Secretary Hughes was what made her want to see him. She denied that she had ever reflected unkindly on Americans in any of her books and that she liked most of those she had met.

"I think this is an extremely hospitable, impulsive country," she said. "Of course, I can't have a very mature opinion an hour after I have arrived."

Her Idea of the "Yellow Press."

Mrs. Asquith said she was deeply interested in the labor question and hoped to see a woman labor leader like Miss Bonfield elected to Parliament. None of the men leaders were especially strong men in her opinion, and the movement had lost headway in the last year through the depletion of their funds in last year's strikes and loss of public interest. When somebody was quoted as saying that a certain labor leader had proved to be "yellow," she asked for a definition of the word. Later she asked for an explanation of what the "yellow press" meant. When this had been expounded to her, she exclaimed:

"Is that so. I always thought the 'yellow press' meant the Chinese."

Mrs. Asquith said women in politics had failed as yet to make their mark in England. She attributed their failure, as she saw it, to their lack of organization.

Mrs. Asquith remained in her cabin for the whole voyage until Sunday night when she went to the salon for dinner. She said that it had been "frightfully rough." After the ship left Quarantine she went on deck at the request of photographers, but she told them to hurry up as it was too cold to stand there long.

The wife of the former Premier was met at the pier by her son-in-law, the Prince Bibesco, the Rumanian Minister at Washington, who came here to meet her.

SIR GEORGE PERLEY HERE.

Canadian High Commissioner is on His Way to Ottawa to Resign.

Three liners arrived yesterday from Europe. Among the 190 first-cabin passengers on the Carmania was Sir George Perley on his way to Ottawa to resign his post as High Commissioner for Canada in London, a place he has held for the last seven and a half years. He was accompanied by Lady Perley, and said that he was going to take a year's vacation. Sir George said that things were improving slowly in England and that every one there was pleased that the United States and Great Britain had pulled so well together at the conference in Washington.

H. J. Whigham, proprietor of The Metropolitan Town and Country, who returned on the Carmania from a trip to England and France, said that conditions were improving in France.

Professor Harry A. Garfield, President of Williams College, returned with his wife from a vacation trip to the Mediterranean. He visited some old friends in France and Italy.

Sir John and Lady Harrington, Orin Root, Franklin S. Mooney and P. W. Herrick, son of the United States Ambassador in Paris, were also passengers.

One of the 850 passengers on the America from Bremen was Otto Arendt, from the Ministry of Posts and Telegraphs in Berlin, who has come over to confer with the cable companies about a direct cable to Germany. Dr. Ludwig Kleinwachter, Consul General for Germany in Chicago from 1912 to 1916, arrived on the ship, and Dr. Friedrich Fischarour, Austrian Consul General in New York from 1911 to 1917, was also a passenger.

DINE S. S. M'CLURE, TO HONOR MAGAZINE

Friends of S. S. McClure met last night at dinner in the Yale Club to wish him well in the re-establishment of McClure's Magazine, the first issue of which produced by him as editor will be out in April. McClure's Magazine was started by him years ago and after many vicissitudes, some of which Mr. McClure told last night, others being related by Frank N. Doubleday, who was associated with him, became successful. Mr. McClure left it ten years ago and said he always had wanted to get back into his chosen field.

He outlined to the writers, publishers and editors his hopes of being able to publish a magazine which would embody in it the wholesome life of this country which now, he thought, was misrepresented by the necessities of newspapers and weeklies in reproducing and commenting on the faults of life.

Mr. McClure spoke of the danger of relinquishing a magazine, and cited one magazine from which he became separated years ago and which in the next twenty years lost $1,000,000. A few moments later Thomas W. Lamont, who recently sold The Evening Post, said that he could think of one thing that was more dangerous to turn loose into the world, and that was a newspaper.

"I think Outing was a pike," said Mr. Lamont, amid laughter. "But I must say that if I had been able to give The Evening Post more of my attention and if I had first sought the advice of some of the distinguished men here the result might have been different."

Cyrus H. K. Curtis, owner of The Saturday Evening Post, and Don C. Seitz, business manager of The World, also spoke, and wished Mr. McClure success. A telegram from Rudyard Kipling, many of whose stories were published in the old McClure's, was read, describing Mr. McClure as "a great man with a surplus of energy."

Among those present were Samuel Hopkins Adams, Lawrence Abbott, R. J. Cuddihy, Russell Doubleday, Robert H. Davis, Wallace Irwin, Edwin Lefevre, Arthur C. Train, Jesse Lynch Williams and others.

FOUNDLING 'PRINCESS' TELLS STRANGE STORY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, Jan. 30.—A London foundling who became a "princess," was affianced to a nobleman, and was forced to flee from her foster parents and declare her identity is the strange story of a girl whose career is now creating deep interest in Italy.

At Via Reggio live Prince Carovigno with his wife and a girl of 16 named Vera, who was generally supposed to be their daughter. The girl, who is supposed to have received the education and upbringing of one of high rank recently became infatuated with a Government official of noble birth, and after some reluctance Prince Carovigno gave consent to the betrothal.

On Christmas Day the girl fled from home and sought refuge with friends at Pietrasanta. She refused to return home, declaring she was afraid of some dreadful punishment. She told a story which, if true, is astounding.

She declares she was brought from England when very young and ever since she was five years old, had to do the work of a drudge, and was constantly beaten and ill-treated. Since her betrothal, as her story goes, Prince Carovigno tried to force his attentions upon her, and when she resented his advances he attacked her.

The prince declares the whole story a fabrication; that the girl's mother was a servant and her father was not known and that out of pity for the child he and his wife took her as an infant and brought her up.

Some Italian and English families have interested themselves in Vera's case. A wealthy English woman living at Via Regio has arranged for the girl to live in the house of a prominent member of the Roman aristocracy and one of Rome's foremost lawyers has volunteered to conduct an action on her behalf against the Prince and Princess Carovigno.

MARTIN McCUE, LEADER.

Twelve District Democrats Elect Him to Succeed Justice Boyle.

While 200 men and women sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" Martin G. McCue was elected executive member of the Twelfth Assembly District Democratic Club at a meeting held last night in the clubhouse at Forty-seventh Street and Third Avenue.

McCue, as leader of the district, which he represented in the Assembly for many years, succeeds Edward J. Boyle, who resigned last year to accept Justice of the Court of Special Sessions by Mayor Hylan. Justice Boyle was leader of the district for twelve years. Telegrams and telephone messages congratulating the new leader were received.

FOR A LABOR BUREAU RUN BY THE CHURCH

The Rev. Charles Stelzle Says Plan Would Offset the Wrong Kind of Radicalism.

UPHOLDS SOCIAL UNREST

Tells Federation There Would Be No Progress Without This Form of Idealism.

Plans for an employment bureau were laid yesterday at a meeting of the New York City Federation of Churches to which clergymen of all Protestant denominations were invited, in Marble Collegiate Reformed Church. The Rev. Charles Stelzle, who had had experience in aiding the unemployed, proposed the bureau, at an operating cost of $10,000 a year. He thought it would relieve pastors of the burden of finding jobs and would help to allay the wrong kind of radicalism.

"Radicalism is not caused by agitators," Mr. Stelzle declared. "It is caused by certain educational processes such as the public library, the public art gallery, the public school, prohibition and the church.

"Radicalism means getting at the root of things. The early Apostles were arrested and brought before the Jewish Sanhedrim. They were accused of turning the world upside down, and they were guilty of the charge.

Missionaries Cause Unrest.

"The missionaries that we have sent to so-called heathen lands are responsible for social unrest in these countries. They found nations long satisfied with low physical, mental and moral ideals. The missionaries pointed out these low conditions and showed the possibilities of a life in Jesus, with the result that the natives will never again be satisfied until they have been emancipated from these low conditions.

"Prohibition has created radicalism. The Socialists have always been strong for prohibition, because they have declared that it is hard to lead drunken workingmen to social emancipation. Social unrest is the legitimate outcome of the finest idealism the world has ever known, and without it there can be no real progress.

"But there is a certain kind of radicalism which is of the type that breeds hatred and murder. How can we cure this kind of radicalism? There must be a development of confidence, of mutual co-operation, and a frank discussion of the labor problems between capital and labor, a clear and fair interpretation of bosses to the men, and of men to the bosses. But chiefly there must be a development of the right kind of character."

Wants Women on Committee.

"We feel that we have a distinct responsibility," said the speaker, adding that church members who were without work would receive first attention. "The tendency is to get the churches to organize a breadline," he went on. "But we may be able to work out a different plan."

Mrs. Lemuel C. Barnes, wife of a Baptist clergyman, asked for several women on the Unemployment Committee. "There are not only homeless men in New York City, but there are homeless women," said Mrs. Barnes.

The subject is to be considered further at a meeting in the Bowery Y. M. C. A. on next Friday afternoon.

A resolution was adopted approving a reorganization of the federation "on a basis which will provide for the association of the various ecclesiastical bodies in the federation, their representatives to be elected or appointed in the manner approved by the various bodies represented."

William B. Miller, the new general secretary, announced that noon services would be held every week day but Saturday in Lent in the Palace Theatre, Manhattan; the Royal in the Bronx, and the Orpheum in Brooklyn.

The meeting adopted a resolution of appreciation of the Rev. Dr. Walter Laidlaw, who just has retired after twenty-five years as general secretary and one year as statistical secretary. Dr. Laidlaw expressed his thanks.

HARVEY SEES POINCARE.

Calls on Premier With Herrick, but Politics is Not Discussed.

PARIS, Jan. 30 (Associated Press).—Myron T. Herrick, the American Ambassador to France, and George Harvey, Ambassador to Great Britain, were in conversation today with Premier Poincare for nearly forty minutes. Afterward the Ambassadors said that their talk was of a general nature and that it did not relate especially to the Genoa conference or to Franco-American relations.

Reference was made during the interview to the general situation, but according to Mr. Harvey and Mr. Herrick the French Premier, contrary to expectations, failed to take advantage of the opportunity to discuss the attitude of the United States Government with regard to the Genoa conference.

It was the first visit of the Ambassadors to M. Poincare since he became Premier. Both Mr. Herrick and Mr. Harvey tendered to M. Poincare congratulations and good wishes. The Premier asked if there had been any decision regarding American participation at Genoa. He was told that the Ambassadors had not been informed of any decision.

Mr. Harvey has postponed his departure for London for several days. He said tonight, however, that he had no further appointment to see M. Poincare and would not again visit him unless something developed which necessitated a call.

PUNCHED DAILY, HE SAYS.

Wife's Way of "Making Man of Him," Theodore Declares.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Jan. 30.—Considerable humor was injected today into the trial of the separation suit brought by Mrs. Anna Theodore of Mount Vernon against her husband, John J. Theodore, when the defendant went on the witness stand before Supreme Court Justice Seager here and told how his wife "tried to make a man out of him" by "punching him daily."

The Theodores have been married three years. Mrs. Theodore had previously testified that for three weeks during their honeymoon her husband fed her daily on peas and pea soup. She also said he struck her.

"My wife was always punching me," said Theodore, who is much thinner than his young wife. "She told me she was trying to make a man out of me, but I didn't like her ways. Once she jabbed me with a can opener. She punched me so much she took all the energy out of me. Then I objected to being made a punching bag."

Justice Seager and the spectators roared at this. Theodore also denied giving his wife a diet of pea soup and peas.

THREE SHOT IN RESTAURANT

Two Men Arrested—Police Say Cause of Disturbance is Unknown.

Three men were shot, one seriously, early today and two others were arrested and taken to the East Sixty-seventh Street Station as the result of a disturbance in a restaurant at Third Avenue, near Eighty-fourth Street.

The wounded men, according to the police, are Harry Willis, 22, of 201 East Ninetieth Street, shot in the left hip; Charles De Wolf, 28, of 434 East Seventy-third Street, shot in the back and abdomen, and Harry Bund, 20, of 703 East 188th Street, the Bronx, shot in the chin. They were taken to Reception Hospital.

The men described by the police as Thomas Gilmartin, 1,864 Second Avenue, and Joseph Ryan, 806 East Eighty-second Street, were arrested after the shooting. The cause of the shooting, according to the police, is not known.

DENIES HER DYED CAT DIED FROM DYEING

Veterinary to Settle Case of Woman Held for Cruelty to Pets.

Alleged to have caused the death of a cat by dyeing it, Miss Margaret Owen, 22, of 75 West Fiftieth Street, was taken before Magistrate Peter A. Hatting in West Side Court yesterday on complaint of Harry Moran, Superintendent of the Humane Society, of 44 Seventh Avenue, who said complaints have been made that Miss Owen was cruel to her cats.

Miss Owen appeared in court with another cat which she admitted having dyed a deep blue, but denied that the dyeing process or dye had killed the other animal. It died of natural causes, she declared.

After unsuccessfully trying to get Assistant District Attorney Gibbs, as representative of the people, to take the live dyed cat into custody for a few days, Magistrate Hatting postponed the hearing until Friday, ordering an examination by a veterinary in the meantime to determine whether dye is injurious to a cat.

Moran said Miss Owen told him she had taken one of the cats to an animal hospital on West Fifty-third Street and that when he inquired there he was told the cat had died.

PRINCE YAMAGATA NEAR DEATH IN TOKIO

TOKIO, Jan. 30 (Associated Press).—The death of Field Marshal Prince Yamagata, prominent 85-year-old Japanese statesman, was expected hourly today. He lapsed into a state of coma at noon, and at 7 o'clock this evening he was still unconscious. He has been critically ill since Jan. 5.

A year older than the Marquis Okuma, who died three weeks ago, Prince Yamagata is the only survivor of the original group of statesmen who bridged the gap between medievalism and modernity in Japan. It has been said that "the Genro will die when Yamagata dies." The son of a samurai of Choshu, he was one of the leaders in the overthrow of the Shogunate, which had eclipsed the power of the Mikado, and on the restoration of the Emperor he rose rapidly with the aid of the imperial favor. He comanded the 1st Army Corps in the war with China and was Chief of Staff against the Russians. In 1905 he succeeded Prince Ito as President of the Privy Council.

WOMEN FOR NIGHT WORK.

Toilers Appear Against Restrictive Bill at Trenton.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 30.—Testimony of women actually engaged in night work in factories featured a public hearing before a committee of the Legislature today on the bill of Assemblyman Evans to prevent the employment of women in industries between 10 in the evening and 6 in the morning.

The women were witnesses for the State organization of manufacturers, who are putting up a fight to continue what many of the social workers of the State declare is "industrial slavery of women." The women called by the manufacturers said they were satisfied with their work, which brought them high wages and enabled them to support or aid in the support of their families.

The New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs and the New Jersey Consumers League appeared for the bill. Speakers insisted that prohibition of night work for women should be the subject of national legislation, and they insisted that the States should fall in line and point the way to some national plan for safeguarding women.

J. O. BIGLOW AS PROSECUTOR

Newark War Veteran Supplants 'Boss' Nugent, Turned Down by Senate.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 30.—A war veteran without active political affiliation was selected by Governor Edwards tonight as Prosecutor of Essex County in place of James R. Nugent, who failed of confirmation in the Senate last week. The new appointee is John O. Biglow of Newark. He is 35 years old and is rated as a first-class lawyer. It is understood that his selection is pleasing to Mayor Archibald of Newark, who expects to be the Democratic "wet" candidate for Governor next Fall.

The Governor also sent to the Senate tonight the name of John Enright of Freehold to be State Commissioner of Education for five years at an annual salary of $10,000. J. Spencer Smith of Tenafly and Robert F. Engle of Beach Haven were named to succeed themselves as members of the State Board of Conservation and Development.

CANADIAN PAPER'S EXPORTS.

150,000 More Hundredweight for Million and Half Fewer Dollars.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Jan. 30.—Canadian pulp and paper exports in December, 1921, were $10,325,533, compared with $14,012,082 in December, 1920, a decline of $4,286,490, and with $9,441,830 the preceding month, a gain of $883,663.

Exports of newsprint for the month amounted to 1,459,196 hundredweights, valued at $5,706,178, compared with 1,800,431 hundredweights, valued at $7,360,631 in December, 1920—a gain of 109,764 hundredweights in volume and a loss of $1,661,453 in value. They exceeded November shipments by 112,807 in volume and $368,830 in value.

In the month, the United States took paper to the value of $5,347,062, to the United Kingdom's $30,831, and wood pulp valued at $3,264,713 to the United Kingdom's $612,218.

2 TAKEN IN JERSEY HOLDUP AND MURDER.

BOTH HAVE POLICE RECORDS

One, a Hoboken Salesman, Has Served Time for Auto Theft; the Other is Son of Hoboken Merchant.

Two men were arrested in Hoboken last night in connection with the holdup in West Hoboken Saturday afternoon which resulted in the theft of $21,000 in currency from a messenger for the First National Bank of North Hudson and the murder of Lieutenant of Detectives Charles Harms, who was escorting the messenger.

The prisoners were Carl Rettich, 27 years old, a salesman, of 80 River Street, Hoboken, and Benjamin Alberts, 22 years old, a feed merchant, of 685 Garden Street, Hoboken. They were charged with highway robbery and murder. Alberts was arrested at his home and Rettich at the Hudson tube terminal in Hoboken.

The police say that both men have records. Alberts is the son of Morris Alberts, a well-to-do Hoboken poultry merchant. The police say that Benjamin Alberts stole an automobile in Newark some time ago and was sentenced to the penitentiary, but that the sentence was changed to a fine of $200. Later he was arrested in Hoboken with ten others, and fined $200 on a charge of conspiring to steal automobiles.

In November, 1919, the police say, Alberts and Rettich were arrested in Hoboken as fugitives on a charge of holding up a drug store in Brooklyn, but the case was dropped. The druggist said he and others in his store had been bound, gagged and robbed. According to the police, Rettich was tried in connection with the killing of a man in Homestead, N. J., but acquitted. They say he has been arrested several times for disorderly conduct, but never has been convicted.

The arrests were made by Lieutenant Herman Bolts of the West Hoboken police and the charges were preferred by Chief of Police Rohrbach of West Hoboken. Two or three additional arrests within twenty-four hours were predicted by the police.

The murder and robbery were committed at Clinton Avenue and Monastery Street, West Hoboken, when Lieutenant Harms and Secondo Gallo, the bank messenger, were taking a bag containing $21,000 to the West Hoboken Post Office, whence it was to be sent by registered mail to the Federal Reserve Bank in New York. Harms put up a brave fight until his pistol jammed on the third shot and he was mortally wounded. He died in the North Hudson Hospital Sunday afternoon.

Gallo dropped the money bag as he was running to the Post Office. One of the three men who participated in the holdup picked it up, and the three jumped into an automobile. In the flight the car picked up a fourth man, who had acted as lookout. The driver is said to have been the fifth of the robber band. The car was a Dodge touring, with a license plate which had been stolen in Newark on Jan. 12.

HERR PROFESSORS LAUD THE KAISER

Stage Monarchist Demonstration for Their Pupils and Rouse Republican Ire.

By CYRIL BROWN.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—The arrival of a new Hohenzollern was announced today. He is a boy, the fourth child of the Kaiser's youngest living son, Prince Oscar, who is convalescing from a long illness.

The monarchistic papers are jubilant because Doorn reports that the Kaiser received more birthday congratulations this year than last despite the vastly increased post and telegraph rates. The Kaiser received 5,000 letters and a thousand telegrams representing in their entirety a million of the Teuton population.

The Democratic and Socialist papers chronicle with indignation two features of the Kaiser birthday celebration in Germany. One Dr. Wolter, principal of the Berlin Hohenzollern Lyceum for Girls, assembled the pupils, and after selected readings about Wilhelm II, wherein the latter was characterized as "our exalted monarch" and the singing of the former Prussian national anthem, "Heil dir im Siegerkrans," the principal delivered an address containing the following sentiment:

"It was every good German's duty toward the Kaiser to give up his gold during the war, and the same must be done during the next war which soon will have to be waged against France."

The other incident arousing Democratic umbrage occurred when Ulrich Stueb, Professor of German History at Berlin University, delivered a laudatory address on the Kaiser, closing with the outburst: "We will stand by our Kaiser with unshakable loyalty and I place myself in your ranks, comrades."

Here the professor leaped from the lecture platform into the front row of the students for a dramatic finish:

"And I call out to our Kaiser, the great patient sufferer, with eyes turned in the direction of the house at Doorn: 'Ave Caesar imperator, studiosi te salutant!'" toffner Hannevig, the Norwegian shipbuilder. Hannevig brought the vessel to the United States in 1917. Subsequently Mr. Woodbury bought her from Hannevig's estate.

Mr. Woodbury was appointed Assistant Secretary of the Navy by President Wilson to succeed Franklin D. Roosevelt, who resigned to make the race for the Vice Presidency in the Fall of 1920. He was born in New York City in 1868 and maintained his home here until recently at 34 East Thirty-fifth Street, though he has spent much of his life in New Hampshire, of which State he has been a Democratic leader for many years, having served for a time in its Legislature. He is a Harvard man and once edited The Manchester Union. Since the time of his connection with the navy he has lived with his wife and a daughter at the Wardman Park Hotel in Washington.

With a long line of ancestors who have served the navy conspicuously, both in civil and military capacities, it was but natural that Mr. Woodbury should feel a close kinship with the sea. So his announcement here a few weeks ago that he had bought the Kaiser's former schooner yacht, fitted her out and was about to gratify a lifelong desire to cruise the Mediterranean as a preliminary to a voyage in the South Seas caused little surprise.

Before the vessel cleared from this port a few days ago, Mr. Woodbury was quoted as saying that the Navy Department was taking deep interest in his voyage and that those abroad would be authorized to make observations along lines not yet exactly laid down." Beyond that he was secretive as to the exact purpose of the journey, letting it be understood, however, that in addition to learning certain things in connection with Near East relief, the members of the party would carry out the instructions of the Government.

Those who were said to be included in the party were William B. Hoke and George Hoke, formerly a Major and a Captain in the army; Wendell Baker of New York and Charles F. Meyer of Chicago. Commanding the crew of eighteen was to be Captain John Swanson, as officer in South Sea waters, having skippered the Genesee which made a treasure-hunting expedition there, the outcome of which never was disclosed.

The itinerary of Mr. Woodbury's first voyage on the Half Moon was to have included Gibraltar, Marseilles, Genoa, Naples, Venice, Trieste, Fiume, Piraeus, Constantinople, Smyrna, Alexandria, Tunis and Bizerte.

The Half Moon was named for Henry Hudson's ship. Mr. Woodbury had made for her a pewter set that copies the one on the Half Moon now moored near West Point, which was built as a copy of the original for the Hudson Fulton celebration. Mr. Woodbury's vessel flies a flag with the Dutch colors—white, blue and orange—with the four white pointed stars in the corners of a white field which are the emblem of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Traffickers in the Técla Name will be Prosecuted

IT has come to our attention that a dealer in the Downtown section of New York is trading on the Técla name to promote the sale of inferior examples of pearls. Indeed, the practice is more notorious than unique, and the injury is doubly damaging to us in that stores which use the Técla name fail to live up to Técla Pearls. We are warning the dealer in question and will prosecute any establishment which wilfully trades on the Técla name or even covertly countenances its use by salespeople. Técla Pearls are sold only at our Fifth Avenue address, at 10 Rue de la Paix, Paris, at 7 Old Bond Street, London, and by our exclusive agents in Philadelphia. FOREIGN DEBT BILL DIVIDES FARM BLOC

Kenyon and Capper Vote With Regulars to Defeat All Amendments.

MEASURE CERTAIN TO PASS

Williams the Only Democratic Senator Voting to Support the Administration's Program.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Passage by the Senate of the Foreign Debt Refunding bill in practically the form in which it was reported by the Committee on Finance was regarded as beyond all doubt late this afternoon, when amendments which would have limited the powers of the Administration in the funding operations were defeated one after the other by large majorities.

The farm bloc failed to hold together, Senators Kenyon and Capper, leaders of the group on the Republican side voting with the regulars against all efforts to amend the measure. Senator Ladd, another bloc adherent, also voted "regular," as did Messrs. McNary and Kellogg, who sometimes in the past have voted with the agricultural group.

The test vote came on the amendment offered by Senator Johnson of California, which stipulated that any agreement entered into by the American commission would not be binding upon this Government until approved by Congress. This amendment was defeated, 44 to 36, as follows:

FOR THE AMENDMENT, 36.

Borah, La Follette, France,
Brandegee, Moses,
Johnson, Norris,

Democrats, 29.

Democrat, 1.

Williams.

This was the only amendment on which Senators Brandegee, Moses and France stood with the opposition. On all subsequent amendments they voted with the Administration. Messrs. Borah, Johnson, Norris and La Follette voted with the Democrats on all questions.

An amendment by Senator Simmons of North Carolina which would have required semiannual or annual interest payments was defeated, 40 to 32, while one by Senator Reed, which directed that interest payments could not be deferred longer than two years, was defeated by the same vote, as was also a third by Senator Simmons, which extended the deferring period to three years.

Points to Farm Bloc Break.

"I note," he said, "that in this particular instance the so-called 'farm bloc' is responding to the party whip."

"Yes," interrupted Senator Stanley of Kentucky, "I am both surprised and grieved at this sad spectacle. It grieves me to call attention to the failure of the 'bloc' to 'block' where there is something worth while to 'block.'"

The emergency tariff, Senator Stanley said, was a gift to the farmers from the "farm bloc" and, he added, "they might just as well have given them a square mile of hot air."

The onslaught on the bill today was directed by Senators Simmons, Reed and Borah, the latter declaring that European Governments, backed by powerful financial interests on both sides of the Atlantic, do not consider that the American $11,000,000,000 foreign debt should ever be paid. He said that the question was not one of payment but "of postponement until the debt can be canceled."

"While I voted for the legislation under which the money was originally loaned," continued Senator Borah, "I feel that my share of the responsibility for lending this money does not end until the money has been repaid. It is not treason now to say that I did not favor lending the money. But I voted for the bill because the others insisted it was the only way to win the war. Now I want to know how and when and where this money will be repaid. I won't give up this power to any commission of five men."

Senator Reed served notice that he would not vote for the bill in its present form. He would only support it, he explained, when it was amended so as to further restrict the powers of the commission and make necessary the approval of Congress to any and all agreements that might be entered into with the debtor nations.

Reed Assails Mellon.

Senator Reed referred to Secretary Mellon as "an agent of Wall Street." For five years, he said, a propaganda had been going on in this country which "seems to have for its basic thought the idea that the United States is a sister bountiful for the whole world, and that the Congress of the United States, composed of men clothed with a brief authority, have the right to give away the resources of this country whenever they see fit to pass a resolution to that effect.

"The whole atmosphere," Senator Reed continued, "surrounding this and all other transactions has seemed to be that if you can get money into the Treasury of the United States by hook or crook, then we have a right to do with that money whatever we please. That is an infamous doctrine. We have not the right. We have the power, but we have not the right, and if there were such a thing as a court having jurisdiction to control our acts and keep us within the Constitution a suit could be brought which would compel Congress to pursue the proper path marked by the Constitution."

Senator Williams, the only Democrat supporting the Administration in this fight, said he regretted that a great international udeling such as the foreign debt should be considered from a partisan standpoint. "Politics," he said, "ends at the seashore."

He would never vote for any proposition, he added, Senator Williams said, that would make a Shylock of the United States. He pleaded for generosity for the debtor nations, which, he said, had shouldered the greater part of the burden in the war for civilization.

"I am tired," said Senator Williams, "of this drivel that we alone won the war. That kind of talk is not true and it is not chivalrous. We did our part nobly and grandly, but the others did theirs just as well and a great deal more. France did 1,000 times as much as we did, and England—the world knows what England did. They all fought for civilization just as we did, and they were in the fight three years before we got in."

Senator McNumber announced that he expected to get a final vote on the debt bill tomorrow afternoon.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 30.—At the French Foreign Ministry today no fewer than 100 out of 300 girl stenographers and secretaries received notice to quit. And the axe fell not only at the Quai D'Orsay, but in all the Ministries and Governmental offices throughout the country.

Since the Chamber six weeks ago urged wholesale reduction of functionaries whose number had become enormous since the war the process of selection and reduction has been going on. By the time it is finished 50,000 girl employes in the Government offices will be dismissed. The turn of the men will come later, and the reduction promises to be even more drastic.

At the low average pay of 120 francs or $10 a week the dismissal of these 50,000 girls represents a saving to the French Treasury and taxpayers of 312,000,000 francs, or $26,000,000 at the present exchange rate.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—Ought girls to be allowed to smoke during office hours?

This question was raised today in a Republican court in Dublin by Miss Smith, a young bookkeeper, who claimed a week's wages in lieu of notice from her employers by whom she has been dismissed for smoking a cigarette during working hours. She said all the men workers smoked.

CATTLE PLAGUE IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The Ministry of Agriculture announces a serious outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease among the cattle in North England, one of the most widespread visitations the country has experienced for many years.

The outbreak, which is mostly among Irish cattle, has occurred in six counties and an order has been issued prohibiting the movement of cattle over an area covering twelve counties.

HARDING TO SEE FORD PLAN

To Discuss Muscle Shoals With Weeks, Probably Today.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Secretary Weeks will discuss the proposed purchase and lease by Henry Ford of the Muscle Shoals power and nitrate projects with President Harding before sending the contract to Congress for final action, it was said today at the War Department. Since Mr. Weeks had made no engagement today at the White House, it was assumed that the subject of Muscle Shoals would be taken up at the regular Cabinet meeting tomorrow.

The contract probably will be submitted to Congress Wednesday or Thursday, the War Secretary said.

A copy of the contract as signed by Mr. Ford on Jan. 25 was received today by Senator Harris of Georgia. It contained two modifications of the original proposal, one providing for the appointment of a commission by the President to see that the contract was strictly observed, and the other setting forth an agreement on the part of the contractors to pay an annual rental of 4 per cent. on the cost of completion of Dam 3.

The proposed commission would have the right to determine "what has been the cost of manufacture and sale of fertilizer products and the price which has been charged therefor and, if necessary, for the purposes of limiting the annual profit to 6 per cent. as aforesaid, and shall regulate the price at which said fertilizer may be sold by the company."

The commission would consist of nine members, seven of whom would be chosen by the President, the other two to be representatives of the Ford Company. The seven members, the contract provides, shall be selected by the President from a list of twenty-one names, seven submitted by each of the "three leading representative farm organizations, national in fact, namely: The American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange and the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union of America, or their successors."

It was provided also that a representative of the Bureau of Markets of the Department of Agriculture should serve on the commission in an advisory capacity.

BURGLARS USE DUMMY SAFE

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30.—Crackmen placed a dummy safe, made of cardboard and oilcloth, in the window of the United Motor Service Corporation today to dupe the police and robbed the real safe in the rear of the place.

They escaped with a code book for making keys for ignition locks and with $800 in money, bonds and jewelry.

YEAR'S PAY TO MRS. NEVILLE

Sum Voted Policeman's Widow, and "Crime Wave" Recognized.

Both Controller Craig and President Hulbert of the Board of Aldermen, at a meeting of the Committee of the Whole of the Board of Aldermen, recognized the existence of a crime wave when they sponsored a plan yesterday for the payment of extra money to widows of policemen and firemen killed in the performance of their duty. Mrs. Barbara Neville, widow of Policeman Daniel J. Neville, killed on the night of Aug. 27 last, was voted a year's salary. Other petitions were laid over for a month.

"Firemen and policemen would feel much better if they knew that their families would be protected by the city in the event of their being killed in the performance of their duty," said President Hulbert. "It would probably add to their zeal. It takes a lot of nerve to walk up to a gun held by a gangster."

"We are living in extraordinary times," said Controller Craig. "Lawlessness has increased all over the world following the war, and I think we should take notice of extraordinary heroism."

TARIFF MEMORIAL SENT TO CONGRESS

ONE SPEAKER AGAINST PLAN

But a Resolution Urging Speedy Enactment of Legislation is Unanimously Accepted.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A memorial to President Harding and Congress urging passage of tariff legislation providing for American valuation was passed today at the first session of a convention of manufacturers invited here by the National Association of Manufacturers.

Washington has thus become the last ditch in the battle over the American valuation plan sponsored by Representative Fordney. Opponents of the plan inserted a half page advertisement in the morning papers here calling upon manufacturers to think twice before they voted for resolutions endorsing the plan and the convention retaliated by leaving open half of the period for discussion to opponents.

The sole speaker against the plan was H. E. Miles, a former officer of the National Association of Manufacturers, who told the meeting that they represented the "merest handful" of manufacturers of the country.

John E. Edgerton, President of the National Association of Manufacturers, declared that the chief virtue of the American valuation "is that it is applicable to either a high tariff or a low tariff, to a tariff for revenue only or a tariff for protection."

"It also will be uninfluenced by the rates of foreign exchange," Mr. Edgerton added, "and in this particular will bring into the Federal Treasury over $300,000,000 in addition to the present receipts. Let him who shouts about the doctrine of the American consumer being entitled to as low rates as those in other countries point out any instances wherein the American public has shared the advantages of cheaply imported commodities."

"Our country is today in the grip of the greatest economic crisis of our time. Great numbers of men and women are unemployed. Farmers are beseeching Congress to alleviate the difficulties with which they are confronted. In all parts of the country producers are being obliged to discontinue or greatly curtail production.

"The utmost determination to surmount the existing difficulties by energy, efficiency and thrift are unavailing in the face of a foreign economic invasion such as our country has never before witnessed. Farm products and manufactured articles are being dumped upon our market from many countries whose depreciated currency and depreciated economic standards have greatly lowered former low production costs.

"The present basic revenue act of 1918 was avowedly designed by its author as merely a revenue measure from which so far as possible the element of protection to American producers was entirely eliminated. The depreciation of foreign currencies since that law was enacted has greatly reduced its effectiveness even for revenue purposes; and, the vastly increased quantity of imports, made possible by its rates of duty and uncertain basis of valuations for dutiable purposes, are displaying corresponding increase of domestic production, thereby intensifying the evils of unemployment and consequent restriction of mercantile business.

"If the hardships of unemployment and its attendant evils are to be removed, it is essential that there shall be a prompt return to a policy of protection for American labor on the farm, in the mine, and in the factory, and to make such protection effective under the new and altogether unprecedented economic conditions now prevailing in competing countries, it is imperative that the American valuation methods of assessing ad valorem duties should be incorporated as a basic administrative principle of the tariff act; as by so doing there will be placed on the statute books an operative, enforceable law as against the present inoperative and non-enforceable law.

"The opposition to the American valuation plan is economically an opposition to the substitution of protective tariff rates in the place of the revenue rates of the act of 1913. All other reasons for opposing that method of assessing duties have been effectively refuted. The fundamental issue is now narrowed to the mere question of whether the tariff policy of the country shall be one for revenue only or one for such protection as will assure employment for American labor.

"This convention, representative of the great industrial activities of the country, joins with those innumerable organizations which have already spoken in approval of the American valuation plan of assessing the duties on imports, and in urging immediate revision of the tariff for the purpose of providing needed protection for the labor of manufacture, agriculture and mining.

"Be it resolved that a committee of ten members of this convention, in addition to the Chairman of this convention, be appointed by the Chair for the purpose of presenting the views of this convention to the proper committees of the United States Congress and to the appropriate executive officers of the Government.

"We respectfully urge that the revisions in the pending Fordney tariff bill be retained that provide for American valuation by American appraisers in America."

Kurds Occupy City of Van, Armenia.

LONDON, Jan. 30 (Associated Press).—Revolting Kurd forces have occupied the city of Van, in Armenia, says a Constantinople dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company today, quoting advices received there from Angora. A serious conflict between the Kurds and the Turkish Nationalist forces of Mustapha Kemal Pasha is anticipated, says the dispatch.

proper dealt with another crime and prejudiced the minds of the jurors." The court added, however, that he felt the negro policeman's testimony should have been presented when District Attorney Banton was conducting the direct examination of the State's witnesses.

Mr. Koenig called the attention of the jurors to the fact that Rhodes had not been called to the witness stand by the prosecution at the beginning of the trial, and said the District Attorney was forced to call the policeman because it was feared that "the case was slipping." He said that policemen frequently sought vengeance on a prisoner, and said if judgment for Jim Rhodes was called as a witness in this case "to serve as the link in the establishment of a motive, to create in your minds a picture of Boddy as a desperate man, although he was a creature of environment."

"It became essential that for their protection and for the fair name of the Police Department they bring forth Rhodes," said the lawyer. "Well, Rhodes is a police officer, and Boddy an ex-convict. The presumption is that a police officer never commits perjury, but it is well known in the history of the courts that policemen have lied on the witness stand."

Mr. Koenig referred to the confession obtained from Boddy by Assistant District Attorney Hennin when the same was arrested in Philadelphia on Jan. 10, and characterized it as "intellectual browbeating." He said this confession revealed that Boddy was not asked about the shooting of Policeman Rhodes, and indicated that Detective Sergeants Miller and Buckley had no idea of accusing Boddy of the Rhodes shooting when they started with him for the West 135th Street Station.

Keen Intellect, Says Banton.

District Attorney Banton plunged into an attack on the defense of emotional insanity at the beginning of his address. In referring to the appearance of the negro on the witness stand, the prosecutor said:

"In all my experience I have never met a keener intellect. Many times during the course of his examination he subtly wiggled out of situations.

"Many rats who are tried in the Criminal Courts seek the excuse of mistreatment by policemen," the prosecutor continued. "It is cheap, with the hope of exciting sympathy and prejudice in the jury. The police force of New York stands between you and your safety, and it is a shame on New York that when a policeman testified here the other day he would protect a brother officer, those in the courtroom tittered."

Mr. Banton said Boddy shot the two detectives because he knew he would have to serve a long term for having a pistol in his possession. He planned the killing and "shot his way out" to avoid going to jail, the prosecutor insisted.

Justice Wasservogel took two hours in his charge to the jury. He said that he admitted the testimony of Policeman Rhodes because the shooting of the second policeman was inseparable from the killing of the two detectives.

FIFTY MORE INDICTED IN LOCKWOOD INQUIRY

LABOR OFFICIALS INCLUDED

Conspiracy to Fix Prices is Charged—Defendants to Be Held in $2,500 Bail Today.

Twenty-one corporations in the heating and ventilating business and twenty-four individuals were indicted for violating the Donnelly Anti-Trust act, and five individuals were separately indicted for conspiracy, yesterday by the Grand Jury, of which Robert Appleton is foreman.

The indictments resulted from the work of the Lockwood committee. The evidence was presented to the Grand Jury by Deputy Attorney General Timothy N. Pfeiffer, an associate of Samuel Untermyer in the building investigation. The text of the indictments was not made public, because the defendants will not be arraigned until today, but the investigation on which they are based indicated an agreement to fix prices and prevent competition in the installation of furnaces and ventilating systems.

Among the indicted are three labor union officials—John Imhoff, Martin McCue and Louis Gebhardt, business agents of the United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters, Local 638. They were indicted on the separate conspiracy charge, together with Charles G. Witherspoon, a Director of Baker, Smith & Co. of 576 Greenwich Street, and John T. Hettrick, the lawyer and originator of the famous "Hettrick Code of Practice," by which prices were made to soar and competition to vanish in the building industry.

Baker, Smith & Co., 576 Greenwich St.
Child & Scott Co., 112 Wooster St., Ernest T. Childs.

John T. Hettrick.

The defendants were notified by their lawyers, Charles A. Brodek of 2 Rector Street and B. F. Foster of the Woolworth Building, to be present and prepared to furnish bail of $2,500 each today, when they will be arraigned before Supreme Court Justice Isidor Wasservogel in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court.

WANT PUBLIC TO BE MUTE.

Building Unions Would Limit Discussion at Proposed Conference.

Representatives of about twenty civic organizations who apointed a committee of five on January 4 to arrange a conference between the Building Trades Council, the Building Trades Employers Association and the public, met at the Hotel Pennsylvania yesterday to hear the report of the committee.

Walter Stabler, Controller of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, a member of the committee, read correspondence showing that the employers' association was willing to have the public represented at a conference but the council was unwilling, unless representatives of the public remained mute during the discussions. The only public representation that the employes' association was willing to permit to take part in the discussion would be members of the Lockwood Committee.

In place of U. N. Bethell of the New York State Chamber of Commerce, who was unable to serve on the committee of five, Guy Duval of the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce was elected. The others are Mr. Stabler, F. S. Stiles of the Queens Chamber of Commerce, and Burt L. Fenner and Mr. Kohn, representing the architects. Some of the organizations represented are the Federal Reserve Bank, the Bankers Trust Company, Title Guarantee and Trust Company, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, Merchants' Association, City Club, and a number of other savings institutions and architects societies.

ASKS MANY CHANGES IN INCOME TAX LAW

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—Worthless debts, unless they arise out of transactions entered into for profit, cannot be deducted in making State income tax returns, if a bill introduced tonight by Senator Davenport and Assemblyman Judson, Chairmen of the Committees on Taxation of the Senate and Assembly, should become law.

This is one of several important bills introduced tonight on behalf of the joint legislative committee which has been studying the tax problems of the State. Among the provisions of the bills are these:

Withholding agents will have until April 25, instead of March 15, as at present, to make a return.

A withholding agent failing voluntarily to make a return and pay a tax that is due within sixty days of the time fixed by law, shall pay an additional amount equal to the tax, together with interest of 1 per cent. per month from the time the tax was due upon both tax and penalty. He may not charge to the taxpayer the amount of the punitive payment, nor the amount of interest paid.

Failure to pay tax, make a return or supply information to the authorities required by the law is punishable at present by a penalty of $1,000, which must be recovered through action brought by the Attorney General. Under one of the bills introduced tonight the penalty is reduced to $100, which must be collected in the same manner as the tax, thus relieving the Attorney General's office of a mass of litigation.

Where a trust has been created by an employer as part of a stock bonus or profit-sharing plan for the benefit of employes, and with contributions from them, the amount actually distributed shall be taxable to those who receive it only to the extent that it exceeds the amount paid in.

Another bill eliminates the provision from the present law requiring that one-third of the income tax revenue return to towns shall be distributed among the school districts. Under the amendment the whole may be used for general town purposes.

Any increase in value of property given away realized by the donor during his ownership shall be regarded as taxable in the hands of the recipient. Under the present law gifts are exempt.

Any one residing more than seven months of the taxable year and maintaining a permanent place of abode within the State shall be regarded a resident for taxation purposes. A taxpayer changing during the year from resident to non-resident, or vice versa, will be required to file two returns, if another bill introduced tonight becomes law.

DEMANDS 5-CENT FARE IN ALL STATE CITIES

Erie Republican Offers Bill in Assembly to Include Free Transfers.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 30.—From a Republican source was sprung on the Legislature tonight a bill providing for a straight five-cent fare, with free transfers, on street surface roads in all cities of the first and second class.

The bill was introduced by Assemblyman John W. Slacer of Erie. It was stated tonight that the measure had been drafted by Corporation Counsel William S. Rann of Buffalo, and had the approval of Mayor Frank X. Schwab of that city, also a Republican, and of Mayor Hylan.

The bill provides for an amendment to the Public Service Commission law as follows:

"Notwithstanding the provisions of side division 1 of this section, or any other provisions of law, the rate of fare to be charged or collected for transportation of any person on any street surface railroad in a city of the first or second class shall not, under any order of the commission, or otherwise, exceed a maximum of 5 cents for one continuous ride from any point on such road, or any road, line or branch operated by the same corporation or under its control, to any other point thereon, or any connecting branch thereof, within the limits of such city."

The Slacer bill has not received the sanction of the Mayor's conference as yet.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The nomination of Andrew Miller to be Federal Judge for the North Dakota district was ordered reported favorably to the Senate today by the Judiciary Committee.

The action, Chairman Nelson said, was unanimous and based on a new report by a sub-committee which recommended that charges against Mr. Miller be disregarded.

MANY OFFER TO AID $100,000,000 PLAN

Manufacturers of Building Material Volunteer to Co-operate in Tenement Project.

TO DO THE WORK AT COST

Stewart Browne Challenges Untermyer's Figures in His Attack on Fire Insurance Methods.

Samuel Untermyer said yesterday that substantial offers of co-operation had come from many large firms in favor of the $100,000,000 building program of the Lockwood Committee, which contemplates the erection of the 1,500 five-story tenements on a low-cost basis. If the legislation sought at Albany is obtained, the success of the plan is practically assured, it was said. The following statement summarizing offers of help was made public yesterday:

"A firm of contracting electrical engineers would do all or a portion of the work required on a basis of cost of labor and material plus operating expense without profit.

"A firm of truckmen and riggers of over forty years' experience desires to haul any building material such as boilers, pipe-fittings and plumbers' supplies, at cost.

"A representative of Western lumber interests announced that they are prepared to supply unlimited quantities of lumber at 25 per cent. below New York market prices.

"The head of the productive department of a large manufacturing corporation says that he is confident that co-operation will be offered by manufacturers of brick, cement and lime; but if such assurances are not received within a reasonable time he will place his experience in the manufacture, purchase and sale of these commodities at the disposal of those interested in the project.

Plastering at Cost.

"A firm of general plastering contractors, with facilities to undertake all or part of the plastering of the 1,500 apartment houses, of twenty-five years' experience, will be glad to do the plastering at labor and material costs.

"A manufacturer of window shades offers to make all the shades necessary without profit at actual cost of labor and material.

"A manufacturer of window frames, sashes and doors offers all of his time and that of his organization to supply all the window frames and sashes at a net cost far below present prices. He also offers all interior woodwork at cost and also his services to supply necessary lumber, plaster, lathing, flooring, &c.

"A firm of architects offers its services at cost, without profit, in the design of any or all of the apartments.

"A supply company dealing in hardware has written to the Thompson-Starrett Company, saying that it will co-operate on a cost basis.

"The Phelps Stokes Fund of 100 William Street, interested in building model tenements to rent at $1.75 per room per week, bathrooms being charged for at 75 cents per week, offers to place at the disposal of those behind the plan all its plans in a competition for model tenements now being held under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, the Merchants Association of New York, the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests, the Real Estate Board of New York and the Phelps Stokes Fund."

Stewart Browne, President of the United Real Estate Owners' Association, attacked statements by Mr. Untermyer on the insurance question, saying:

"While endorsing a great deal that Samuel Untermyer does, I do object to his newspaper publicity which contains so much that isn't so. Not because Mr. Untermyer knows so much that isn't so, but because he knows so much that he knows isn't so. I hold no brief for the insurance companies, but I do for facts, and I have no interest whatever with insurance companies except as a policy holder.

Disputes Untermyer's Figures.

"Mr. Untermyer says that the aggregate insurance companies (except life) receive $1,300,000,000 in premiums and paid 60 per cent. in losses, or $780,000,000, and that the difference of $520,000,000 is profit or economic waste. Mr. Untermyer knows better. He knows that the expenses, unpaid loss liability and reinsurance reserve or unearned premium liability and interest on stockholders invested cash capital have all to be deducted.

"Mr. Untermyer says that the State furnishes only from 10 to 15 per cent. workman's liability insurance and the corporations the remainder, and he would therefore prohibit the latter from engaging in that business, and he gives reasons which are not facts and which he may or may not know are not in accordance with the facts."

After challenging other statements by Mr. Untermyer on insurance rates and methods abroad, he continued:

"The fire insurance rates, I know, are too high. But stop the publication of 'gouf.' The people of New York City believe that Mr. Untermyer's activities have reduced wages in the building trades. They did not. Plasterers and bricklayers' wages are higher, but I don't blame Mr. Untermyer for that.

"Let's have pitless newspaper publicity, but for heaven's sake let it be truthful."

MANY GOING TO ALBANY TO SUPPORT PORT BILL

Outerbridge, Smith and Pounds of Port Authority to Have Backing of 25 Associations Today.

Chairman Eugenius H. Outerbridge, ex-Governor Alfred E. Smith and Lewis H. Pounds, the three New York State members of the Port of New York Authority, went to Albany yesterday to appear today at the joint session of the Senate Finance Committee and the Assembly Ways and Means Committee, in advocacy of the passage of the Meyer-Mastick bill to ratify the Port Authority's "comprehensive plan" for the development of the port.

Delegations representing twenty-five civic and commercial associations in favor of the plan will go to Albany this morning. David T. Warden, Chairman of the Committee on the Harbor and Shipping, of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, and William McCarroll of that Chamber's Executive Committee will head these delegations.

Among the associations to be represented will be the Merchants Association, City Club, the Fifth Avenue Association, Bronx Board of Trade, Produce Exchange, Board of Trade and Transportation, Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests, New York Board of Title Underwriters, Real Estate Board of New York, Forty-second Street Property Owners and Merchant's Association, Central Mercantile Association, Citizens' Union, Advertising Club, Queens Chamber of Commerce, Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce, Flatbush Chamber of Commerce, Brooklyn Real Estate Board, New York State Association, New York State Waterways Conference, Women's Municipal League, Women's City Club, League of Women Voters of New York City, Nyack Chamber of Commerce, Amsterdam Board of Trade, Syracuse Chamber of Commerce, Albany City Club, New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, Utica Chamber of Commerce, and the Hudson, Middletown, Beacon, Poughkeepsie and Elmira Chambers of Commerce.

Members of the city administration and opponents of the plan, who will include representatives of various organizations, also will go to Albany this morning.

TO PERMIT ARMS AT HOME.

Cuvillier Would Allow New Yorkers to Protect Themselves.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 30.—Under a bill offered in the Assembly tonight by Louis A. Cuvillier of New York the Sullivan law would be amended to permit householders, dealers and storekeepers to keep arms at their homes or business places at all times without a permit from the police authorities. It would permit a messenger of a banking institution or express company to carry a revolver in the street without a permit, and make it a misdemeanor for any other person to have a revolver in public without a permit.

"The object of this amendment," said Mr. Cuvillier, "is obvious. It is due to the fact that the Sullivan law has caused more murders in New York City by reason of the fact that a highwayman or a burglar well knows that when he goes into a dwelling or a store or engages in a hold-up or stick-up, that his victim is unarmed. It is a well known fact that the criminals in New York City are more intelligent and better organized for protection than is the Police Department in that city."

at $800,000 a year when they are completed at a total cost of $25,000,000.

Enormous Profits by Subletting.

The report charges that lessees of city piers have made enormous profits by subletting them. On twenty-four piers, it says, the lessees paid the city $1,404,717 and charged ships for berthing privileges a total of $3,685,000.

"The Maritime Shipping," the report continues, "a concern without capital, not maritime, and owning no ships, occupied Pier 72, at the foot of East Twenty-fourth Street, from Sept. 1, 1919, to Nov. 14, 1920, at an annual rental of $40,000, and rented berthing privileges at a net annual profit of $61,000 over the rent paid.

"Sabbatino & Co., a concern composed of a young saloonkeeper's helper, who was later interested in a small moving picture house, and a ship's clerk without capital and not engaged in shipping, received from the Dock Department a large number of berthing permits between June 7, 1918, and Sept. 22, 1921, which they sublet to ships entering the port. While their records were destroyed or suppressed, numerous cases of such rentals showing a profit of from 66 to 400 per cent. over the amount paid the Dock Department were established. They were permitted a credit account with the Dock Department, and deposited during this period over a million dollars in bank."

The failure of the Dock Department in establishing any zoning system, so that light draught ships should not occupy deep water berths, is criticised, as is the lack of sufficient warehouse and storage facilities on the city docks.

The report attacks the excessive cost of policing the piers, which is borne by the shipping interests, and says that in 1920 16,000 men were employed by the maritime interests to protect the piers at a cost of $35,000,000, while during the same year the entire city was policed by a regular force of 11,191 at a cost of $24,506,106.

Police Department Blamed.

The alleged dictation of the Police Department as to the employment of private detective agencies for pier guarding is said to be partly to blame for this excessive cost. "One such agency, newly organized but enjoying the favor of the Police Department," the report continues, "took over the policing of docks for forty shipping companies in 1918. Instances of compulsory employment as a condition of police co-operation and payments to an inspector in alleged consideration of service in compelling such changes were proved before the committee.

"Notwithstanding the expenditure of these vast sums for protection, pilfering and theft have been extensive and protection has not been efficient. This condition can be largely accounted for by inefficient organization, by the compulsory employment of useless or untrustworthy persons and by the radically unsound relation of dock protection to the police."

The report declares the management of the city's docks a matter of both State and national interest as affecting the greatest port in the United States. Seven separate recommendations are made, to embody which, it is said, bills will be drafted and introduced in the Legislature. The recommendations follow:

"First—That the office of Dock Commissioner and the control of the Sinking Fund Commission over the docks be abolished.

"Second—That a new Dock Commission of three members be established, to be appointed by the Mayor, one from a list to be named by the maritime interests of the city, one from a list to be named by the Chamber of Commerce of the City of New York and one at will, who shall be Chairman of the commission. That the tenure of office be eight years, the first appointees to hold for four, six and eight years respectively, as determined by law, and that such Commissioners be subject to removal for cause.

"Third—That existing provisions of law affecting the dock finances be so amended that all receipts from the docks be subject to appropriation by the city for the following purposes, and in the following order of preference: 1, for expenses of administration of the Dock Department; 2, for payment of interest and amortization of dock bonds; 3, for the maintenance and repair of docks and, if not otherwise provided, for the extension of docks; 4, for the transfer of any surplus not required for the purposes cited to the general fund.

"4. That the charter and all laws affecting the docks be revised in harmony with the recommendations of this report.

Reforms Recommended.

"5. That the commission have power to fix rates of all rental charges by the city, by lessees and by private dock owners, such charges to be as nearly equal for the service as existing conditions permit; to provide for zoning regulations; to restrict the terms of leases to a year unless the necessities of commerce require, and in no event to grant leases for a longer term than ten years without a revaluation, or in a manner to interfere with the general development of the port; to provide for the appraisal of the rental value of all properties leased, and to fix the rental on a fair business basis for a reasonable return from such values; leases of city docks to be made according to the necessities of commerce, which shall be determined as a fact by the commission; no lease to be issued without reasonable public notice of the intention to grant it; applicants who would be entitled from the necessities of commerce to receive such lease to be listed in the order of their respective necessities, and preference given to the first one on such list who will pay the rental fixed by law; if none of the applicants listed will take the lease at such rental, then the same to be put up at public auction and leased to the highest bidder on such list, subject to the right of the commission to reject any and all bids.

"6. That all payments for procuring or aiding in procuring leases or permits and all payments in connection therewith be prohibited, unless the same be for legal proceedings had before said commission or in court.

"7. That the policing of the docks, when under lease or permit, now treated as guarding private property, be conferred upon a commission of seven members, without pay, to be named in the bill, representing as nearly as may be the various maritime interests using this port."

ing that either can secure the necessary constitutional power, will undertake to supply this pressing need (as to the advisability of which the committee expresses no opinion at this time), the only way we see in which the necessary capital may be promptly secured would be by enlarging the powers of investment of the life insurance companies so as to permit them (but only during the existence of this emergency) to invest a small proportion of their capital in the constructions of this class of buildings and the purchase of the land necessary therefor, subject to the limitations contained in the accompanying proposed amendment to the insurance law.

Regards Investment as Safe.

"Your committee regards this form of investment as entirely safe for these corporations under existing conditions. Our investigations have satisfied us that if the work of construction is conducted on a large scale by the building of units of square blocks at one time, substantial concessions from the ruling prices of labor and materials can be had that will permit of the construction of healthful model tenements, in good neighborhoods, adapted to the use of families of workmen, mechanics, laborers, clerks and others of very limited incomes, at rental prices of not to exceed from $6 to $9 per room, and still leave for the companies safe returns of 6 per cent. upon their investment after making liberal allowances for depreciation, vacancies, reserves and the like.

"In making these estimates your committee is supported by the opinions of the most important building experts in the city of New York of vast experience. Included in these figures in fixing the rental basis your committee has also calculated as an item of annual expense the amount of taxes that would normally be assessed against these properties, but from which they will be exempt for nine years. Estimating the total saving through this exemption on the basis of eight years' exemption from the date of the completion of the buildings, we have a total of 20 per cent. which would be set aside by the owners and credited against the original cost in addition to the annual depreciation allowance, thus insuring an additional margin of safety.

"The plan as outlined, provided the proposed amendment is enacted, contemplates that, in return for concessions to be made below the prevailing wage scale by mechanics and laborers who work upon these buildings, they would be afforded by the owners a preference over the tenants in hiring apartments in the building, the hope and expectation being that by these means the men will feel that they are constructing their own homes and that added labor efficiency will thus be secured, which is regarded as an important item by way of reduction in costs.

Urges Speedy Action.

"In view of the existing crisis and the constantly increasing urgent need for housing accommodations of the character above described, your committee earnestly recommends the passage of the accompanying amendment at the earliest opportunity consistent with its proper consideration."

The report was signed by Senator Lockwood and Assemblyman Thomas A. McWhinney, Chairman and Vice Chairman of the committee, respectively; Senators Ward V. Tolbert, William A. Carson, Salvatore A. Cotillo and John J. Dunnigan, and Assemblymen James H. Caulfield Jr., Peter J. Hamill and Peter A. Leininger.

The lawmakers were informed that a further report, with recommendations and probably additional legislation, which now is being drafted, would be presented to the Senate and Assembly about Feb. 15.

The bill introduced tonight to carry out the recommendation of the committee permits life insurance companies until March 2, 1924, to invest up to 10 per cent. of their assets as of Dec. 31, 1921, for the purchase of land in any first-class city and the erection thereon of apartment houses, tenement houses and other dwellings, not including hotels.

To insure action by the companies it is provided that unless the purchased land is improved with dwellings of the type provided for, the companies would not be permitted to list it as an asset. To prevent profiteering, it is provided that the properties shall not be recognized as an asset unless at the commencement of construction the rental value is estimated at $6 a room or less.

The bill is offered as an amendment to the insurance act. It was referred to the Committee on Insurance in the Senate.

HAYES EULOGIZES POPE'S ROLE IN WAR

THRONG AT REQUIEM MASS

Italian and Other Consuls, Police, Firemen and Carriers Attend in Uniform.

A solemn pontifical mass of requiem, the highest mass of the Roman Catholic Church without the Pope as celebrant, was celebrated yesterday in St. Patrick's Cathedral for the repose of the soul of Benedict XV. There was a great congregation, which included representatives of many foreign nations and the municipal government, hundreds of the clergy and thousands of the laity of the Archdiocese of New York.

Significant of the improved relations between the Vatican and Quirinal was the presence of A. E. Bernardi, the Italian Consul-General, with three of his staff in official uniforms. These representatives of the Italian Government occupied the first row of the seats reserved for the foreign consular officers. It was said that practically every consulate in New York, except that of Turkey, was represented. The British, French and Belgians occupied seats immediately back of the Italians. There was also present a representative of the new Irish Free State, who appeared unexpectedly but was ushered to the consular section.

The mass was celebrated by the Right Rev. John J. Dunn, Auxiliary Bishop. Archbishop Patrick J. Hayes presided and delivered the sermon, which was in eulogy of the late Pontiff. The Archbishop spoke of the importance of the Papacy and the contribution to the welfare and stability of society made by Benedict XV. He closed with the prayer that the "spirit of God may give the faithful children of his church another Pontiff who shall walk in the footsteps of Benedict XV, and in the footsteps of Christ, our Lord."

The other officers of the mass, who were chosen to represent the Irish, Italian and German clergy of the archdiocese, were the Very Rev. Daniel Burke, pastor of the Church of St. Philip Neri, the Bronx, assistant priest; the Rev. Joseph F. Rummel, pastor of the Church of St. Anthony of Padua, the Bronx, deacon of the mass, and the Rev. Joseph Condego, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Manhattan, subdeacon. The deacons of honor to Archbishop Hayes were Monsignor Michael J. Lavelle, rector of the Cathedral; Monsignor James H. McGean, pastor of St. Peter's, and Monsignor William Livingston, pastor of St. Gabriels.

A catafalque, said to be a replica of that used at the funeral in Rome, except that its covering was of purple instead of gray, had been placed in front of the altar. This was surmounted by the tiara and seat of arms of Benedict XV.

During the celebration of the mass, the responses in which were by the Cathedral Choir, the Archbishop stepped out from the chancel and walked twice around the catafalque, bearing the censer and also sprinkling it with holy water.

Archbishop Hayes's Sermon.

The Archbishop began his sermon by thanking the representatives of foreign nations, the Federal Government and the City Government who were present. He also thanked the press and the non-Catholics who came to pay honor to the late Pope. "I have declared thy justice in a great church," from the Thirty-ninth Psalm, was the text selected by the Archbishop, who said that these words might well be spoken of Benedict XV.

"Some condemn, others admire the Catholic Church, as they view it, for one or more of the following reasons," said the Archbishop, "because of her ancient skill in statecraft and her wisdom in diplomacy; because of her marvelous mechanism of organization and mode of government; because of her service to schools of science, letters and art; because of her historic part in the civilization of the world; because of her fearless combat with emperors and kings; because of her underlying insistence on dogmatic truth and the moral law; because of the grandeur of her liturgy and the majesty of her worship; because of her unchanging and unchangeable character. Thus it happens that where one sees good, the other sees evil. They see only in part and see only humanly.

"Benedict was the 260th to sit in the chair of Peter. No worldly dynasty; no imperial line; no royal family; no ruling power, is comparable to the Throne of the Fisherman from Galilee.

Wide Influence in War.

"As of old, all roads led to Rome, so during the war all eyes turned to Rome. The Pope became a world issue, and could not be ignored; to millions, a father in God filled with the love of Christ; to many not of the faith, a man of God moved with mercy for suffering humanity, while to others who understood not, an unwelcome and forbidding figure, if not a real enemy.

"Wherever the viewpoint, the fact was evident that the Vicar of Christ was powerful and rich in spiritual prestige the world over, and was succeeding where neutral embassies and world societies of relief had met with failure. Emperors and Presidents, Kings and Premiers, nations and individuals, rich and poor, great and lowly, sooner or later besought our Holy Father's intervention in one way or another.

"The achievements of Pope Benedict XV enshrine his name among the greatest of the Roman Pontiffs. His sublime example of justice and mercy, fortitude and tenderness, charity and patience has been an inspiration and a benediction to mankind amid the crash of thrones, the fall of empires, and the rocking of the social structure to its very foundations.

"A mass of documentary evidence has piled up in the Vatican archives, which, when brought fully to light, will astound the world as to the ministry of mercy and service, spiritual and corporeal, the Holy Father rilled during these recent years. His paternal solicitude for all mankind, of every race and every creed, urged him to heroic efforts, with much success, to bring about the following:

"The exchange of military prisoners; the release of non-combatants; provision of hospital care for wounded and sick soldiers in famous health resorts in neutral countries; the deliverance from prison of fathers of large families; the repatriation of soldiers suffering from tuberculosis; the establishment and extension of postal communication between prisoners and their families; the opening in the Vatican itself of a bureau of information for families in search of missing soldiers; the observance of Sunday by soldiers as a day of rest; the suspension of hostilities for Christian burial of the dead on the battlefields; the limiting of bombardment by airplanes to battle areas; the commutation of the death sentence in many instances; providing material aid in food, clothing, and funds to starving babes and stricken families; pleading for the widow, the orphan, and the aged victims of war.

"Even a still greater and more far-reaching contribution has been made by Benedict XV, to the welfare and stability of human society. His official allocutions and public utterances have been the very embodiment of the eternal principles of right and justice, of peace and charity. His voice thundered above the roar of artillery in protest against might as the sole ruler of the world, and against military or civil authority that would brook no interference, and, while demanding absolute obedience from the subject, would itself refuse obedience to the higher laws of God.

"The principles of lawful authority and legitimate obedience was not only insisted upon by the Supreme Pontiff, but exemplified in himself, obedient to his sacred trust of teaching nations and individuals that the salvation of the world is to be found in the placid reign of obedience among all men and in the exercise of authority in exalted service among the rulers of the earth. The Holy Father himself has been and is 'servus servorum Dei'—the servant of the servants of God."

HONOR THE LATE POPE.

Archbishop Hayes Deplores Political Aspect Given to Election by Correspondents.

The Catholic Club, 120 Central Park South, held a meeting in memory of the late Pope last evening, the chief address being given by its President, Martin Conboy, who praised Benedict XV. for his efforts as a peacemaker during the World War. He was followed by Archbishop Patrick J. Hayes, who gave personal reminiscences of the Pontiff.

Archbishop Hayes said that he deplored the political aspect given to the present election of the new Pope by American newspaper writers abroad.

"These Cardinals have only one thought," he went on, "the glory of God. Of course, each loves his own land, but all are actuated by but one thought, to choose as Pope the man who is best fitted for that high position. You people here must bear in mind that you have no control over the lines of communication with Rome, and you should believe what you read of what is going on there only if it is endorsed by some one in authority in the Church."

CONCLAVE TO BEGIN WITH SEVEN ABSENT

Paris Hears Rites May Be Prolonged to Permit American Cardinals to Vote.

ROME, Jan. 30 (Associated Press).—The Sacred College was completed today as it will begin deliberations on Thursday to elect a Pontiff.

Fifty-three Cardinals are now in Rome and they will compose the conclave at its opening session. The arrival of Cardinal Logue, Primate of all Ireland, completed the list of electors for the early meetings, from which seven Cardinals will be absent—Frisco, Archbishop of Naples; Martin De Herrera, Archbishop of Santiago Di Compostella, Spain; Arcoverde, Archbishop of Rio Janeiro; De Skrbensky, Archbishop of Olmuth; O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston; Dougherty, Archbishop of Philadelphia, and Begin, Archbishop of Quebec.

The Cardinals are for the time being staying at various colleges and monasteries according to their nationalities. Cardinals O'Connell and Dougherty will probably stay at the American College.

On Thursday the fifty-three Cardinals will enter the Vatican, there to remain until they have chosen a successor to Benedict XV. The Sacred College met today to make final arrangements respecting rules.

The Sistine Chapel has already been fitted with the long stalls in which the Cardinals will sit while the balloting proceeds. Minute instructions have been given for the performance of the ceremonies, and for the dress and conduct of those participating in them. It has been prescribed that all prelates except Cardinals shall wear black vestments.

All those who will remain within the Vatican when its doors are bolted at the beginning of the conclave have been summoned to meet in the Sala Regia, adjacent to the Sistine Chapel, on Thursday to take the oath of secrecy for the duration of the sittings. The Sacred College has appointed a commission to examine the credentials of all the members, attaches and secretaries. This commission is also charged with selecting guards for the conclave, and the appointment of barbers, plumbers, plasterers, carpenters and such other workmen and attendants as may be needed before the doors are again opened to the world.

Devices have been installed at the entrance of the courtyard of St. Damase so that any articles needed may be sent inside, but their operation must be only in the presence of two witnesses. These devices are in the form of cylinders. Opening one of the sections, an object may be placed within and transferred to those in the courtyard by revolving the cylinder until the opening is on the inside.

This method of communication will be allowed only between 9 and 11 A. M. and 5 and 7 P. M. Any communication, whether of word or object, must be in the presence of two witnesses. No reference to these communications must be made to members of the conclave, and any violator of the rule of secrecy is subject to excommunication.

A section of the Sistine Chapel has been fitted with a platform, on which the stalls for the Cardinals are placed. These are covered with delicately embroidered tapestry in finely executed designs and with harmony of color. An altar is placed against the huge mural painting, Michel Angelo's "Last Judgment," and on the altar are six huge candlesticks. In the centre of the platform is an improvised tomb, at which absolution will be given at the three solemn requiem masses.

Prince Chigi, Marshal of the conclave, complying with the rites of the ceremonial, in announcing his orders always enumerates his full title, which is, "Prince Lodovigo Chigi Albani della Rovere, perpetual Marshal of the Holy Church, Custodian of the Conclave, Noble Roman, Conscript Prince of the Holy Roman Empire, Prince of the Farnese of Roriano, Duke of Campagna, Duke of Magliano and Fecorareccio, Seigneur of Castelfusano, of Cesano, of Olgiata and of Scrofano; Noble of Viterbo, Lord of Genos, of Veneto, of orders, &c."

PARIS, Jan. 30.—While the conclave in Rome will open on the date set—Feb. 2—says a Havas dispatch from that city today, it is possible that the religious rites attending the opening may be prolonged so as to permit the American Cardinals, now on their way to Rome, to reach that city in time to take part in the balloting.

REQUIEM MASS IN BROOKLYN

At St. James's Pro-Cathedral, in Jay Street, Brooklyn, yesterday morning Bishop Thomas E. Molloy celebrated a solemn requiem mass for Pope Benedict XV. Assisting him were the Rev. Maurice P. Fitzgerald, rector of St. Gregory's Church, as deacon of the mass, and the Rev. James J. Flynn of St. Agnes's Church as subdeacon.

Every Catholic parish in Brooklyn was represented at the service. In the sanctuary were several monsignori and a number of prominent priests of the diocese. Many of the clergy were seated in the body of the church near the altar. Behind them sat the students from St. John's Theological Seminary and boys and girls from the high school department of St. James's School.

The estate of Julius Kayser, head of Julius Kayser & Co., who died March 3, 1920, was appraised yesterday at $8,982,491, of which $3,228,457 was in securities, chiefly in Julius Kayser & Co. stock. He owned $270,388 in Sears, Roebuck & Co. stock. He left $10,000 each to the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, Mt. Sinai Hospital, United Hebrew Charities, Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society and Montefiore Home, and $25,000 to the Girls' Hebrew Technical School. The will gives an annuity of $75,000 to his wife, $1,851,852 to his daughter, Laura K. Bayer, and $5,009 a year to another daughter, Alice.

ROME, Jan. 30.—The first mass in the Sistine Chapel for the repose of the soul of Pope Benedict XV. was celebrated at 10 o'clock this morning by Cardinal De Lai, assisted by Cardinals Vico, Granito, Pompily and Cagliero. Commendator Sneider, architect of the Apostolic Palaces, designed and erected a monumental white velvet catafalque thirty feet high, on the top of which shone the triple crown resting on a crimson cushion. Forming a semicircle with the catafalque at the centre, there sat in the choir stalls forty-seven Cardinals wearing their scarlet capes over violet funeral robes.

At the feet of the Cardinals were the conclavists—priests who accompany the Cardinals in the conclave as secretaries—in violet robes.

Behind the Cardinals stood Archbishops, Patriarchs, Bishops, Abbots, Generals of religious orders and officials of the Papal Chapel. In the body of the hall at the right was the complete Diplomatic Corps, in full dress uniform, while on the left were Roman Princes and nobles, the men in evening clothes and the women in black dresses with crepe veils. At the four corners of the catafalque, by candles twelve feet high, noble guards with drawn swords stood at attention, motionless as statues.

On the ceiling the gigantic figures in Michelangelo's famous fresco, "The Last Judgment," looked down on those in the hall below, vying with them in brilliancy of coloring.

As Cardinal De Lai began the mass, the wonderful choir of the Julian Chapel intoned the "Dies Irae," singing without accompaniment. The voices of the men and boys filled the huge hall, keeping every one entranced with their rendering of the Gregorian chant.

Suddenly the singing ceased for the consecration, the silence being broken only by the tinkling bell when the Host was elevated by the half whispering voice of Cardinal De Lai officiating at the altar, by the faint rustling of the Cardinals' robes as they knelt and rose and by the click of the spurs of the Noble Guards—who presented swords—followed by the rattling of scabbards as they fell to their knees, bringing their hands to their helmets in salute.

After the mass the Cardinals donned black stoles and copes. Cardinal De Lai sat in the Bishop's chair opposite the cross, while four Cardinals took up positions at the corners of the catafalque. After the "Subscrvite Sancti Dei" had been sung all the Cardinals rose, holding lighted candles in their hands, while the youngest Cardinal, Mgr. Cagliero, preceded by the Cross, twice encircled the catafalque, asperging and incensing it, followed in order of seniority by Cardinals Pompily, Vico, Granito and De Lai, who repeated the ceremony. As the blue incense smoke curled up to the ceiling, the whole audience stood with bowed heads, a picture of grief and devoutness. It was 12:15 o'clock when Cardinal De Lai ended the notable ceremony by pronouncing the final absolution.

The Sacred College is continuing final arrangements for the conclave. The predominating tendency in these arrangements is economy, it being felt that in the present time of high prices the Church ought to give an example to the rest of the world.

In this morning's congregation the Master of the Chamber, Mgr. Caccia, mentioned that in all previous conclaves considerable sums were spent on wines and biscuits. Cardinal Gasperri, the Camerlengo, with the consent of the other Cardinals, decided that this expense be now cut out and that the food be very simple, consisting daily of soup, one dish of meat with vegetables, and fruit, and a quarter of a liter of wine.

Insane Singer Causes Disturbance.

ROME, Jan. 30 (Associated Press).—Suddenly becoming violently insane, a member of the pontifical choir today caused a sensation in the Sistine Chapel while the requiem mass for Pope Benedict XV. was being said by shouting: "Down with the Pope!" He insisted on leading the procession out of the chapel, preceding the Cardinals and somewhat roughly elbowing Cardinal Vannutelli out of the cortege before he was overpowered by the Swiss Guards, arrested and locked up.

The incident was without precedent in the history of the famous chapel.

The demented man will be tried before the Vatican justice, Mgr. Sans de Samper, the Palace Majordomo, on a charge of causing a disturbance, and probably will be sent to a sanitarium. Members of the Vatican household said that the man had been brooding over the death of Pope Benedict and had been suffering from insomnia for a week.

WOMAN OUTWITS INTRUDER.

Through the bravery of Mrs. Helma Salnnen, who lives on the fourth floor of the apartment house at 129 East 130th Street, a man who said he was John Gannon, 25 years old, a chauffeur of 457 West Fifty-third Street, was locked up in the East 126th Street Station, last evening charged with the theft of about $100 worth of jewelry from her apartment.

Mrs. Salnnen said that at about 6 o'clock Gannon called and said he was a gas inspector sent to examine the meter. She heard the man tiptoeing into her bedroom, she said, and hurried into the room to find him picking up her wedding ring, a gold bracelet, and a small diamond-studded stickpin belonging to her husband.

"Put those back, you robber," Mrs. Salnnen said she shouted to the man as she started in his direction with a heavy iron pot.

Gannon fled to the yard, she explained, and she followed. Her screams attracted the attention of other tenants who summoned Policemen Kealty and Koch of the East 126th Street Station. Mrs. Salnnen mounted a barrel and watched the fugitive's flight over half a dozen fences. When Policemen Kealty and Koch entered the yard Mrs. Salnnen told them that the man had just dropped into the yard of a house at Madison Avenue and 131st Street.

Koch ran around the block and reached the yard in time to join Kealty, who had vaulted the fences, in capturing Gannon in the cellar of the house.

PETERS LOSES CLOTHING.

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—Mayor Andrew J. Peters returned to Boston from Washington today in borrowed clothing. He had lost his own in a fire early yesterday morning at the H Street Club, at the Capital.

With Eliot Wadsworth, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and Basil Miles, of the State Department, Mayor Peters escaped to the street in his underclothing and, returning to the burning building, they aroused others who were asleep on an upper floor.

When the blaze had been subdued the Mayor returned to his room and recovered only his watch.

Questions About

A Trust Fund That Cannot Shrink

No. 6—What proof is there of its merit?

It is the one thing needed to have a trust plan give perfect satisfaction. Other plans might do so if they provided the same guarantee, but no others offer it. If it is not better than the old form of trust with its uncertainties as to the outcome of the judgment of the trustee, however honest and wise, in selecting fluctuating investments, then ask him to guarantee that there will be no decrease of principal.

He can do it safely if he will adopt the same trust plan and put the fund into First Mortgages guaranteed by the Bond and Mortgage Guarantee Company. He cannot afford to do it in any other way.

RELIEF FROM SORE THROAT

PEOPLE nowadays recognize that a sore throat is a danger spot, as the inflamed tissues form an ideal soil for germs to multiply.

With Formamint, whether you are at work, or in crowded car, shop, theatre or church, you can dissolve, now and then, one of these pleasant tasting, powerfully antiseptic tablets in your mouth.

An effective antiseptic is released and, carried by the saliva, continuously bathes the tissues, checks germ growth and soothes the throat, possibly preventing laryngitis, tonsillitis, "flu." Relieves hoarseness. Helpful for singers, actors, smokers, speakers, lecturers, etc. Children like them. 60c at all druggists.

WOULD DROP FIGHT FOR I. R. T. RECEIVER

COMPANY ASKS DISMISSAL

Court is Told Interborough's Financial Condition is Sound—Has $2,578,000 in Bank.

The application last August by Clarence H. Venner for the appointment of a receiver for the Interborough Rapid Transit Company will be withdrawn, providing the plaintiff may revive the action any time within five years and that Federal Judge Mayer does not grant the motion of James L. Quackenbush, general counsel for the company, to dismiss the complaint. Argument of the motion is to be heard Feb. 28.

Mr. Venner, in his action for a receiver, represented the Continental Securities Company and the General Investment Company, as well as himself. These interests hold an overdue note issued by the company, which is part of a total issue of $38,144,400. There was a default in the 7 per cent. interest, and the company, seeking an extension, obtained, up to last Saturday, consents from 98.88 per cent. of the holders, but Mr. Venner and the allied interests instituted the receivership action instead. Holders of $22,000 of the notes have not been heard from for so long a period that this part of the issue is marked "unclaimed."

Judge Mayer adjourned the hearing on the application three times, and yesterday Elijah N. Zoline, counsel for the plaintiff, admitted that the delay had been justified by the fact that the Interborough Company was moving rapidly toward a more prosperous period and would probably be able to avoid all danger of bankruptcy. But in order to be safe, the request for permission to keep the suit alive was made.

Mr. Zoline said he wished to present to the officials of the Interborough Company certain questions, and was told by the Court that they would have to be served on the officials by Feb. 17. These will be discussed during the argument on the motion to dismiss the proceedings. It was suggested that these questions would relate to the precise financial condition of the company.

In explaining the changed position of his client, Mr. Zoline said that it was thought that the crisis in the affairs of the company which resulted in the application for a receiver was passed. He thought, however, that there was still some danger.

Mr. Quackenbush told the Court that the retreat of Mr. Venner had taken him completely by surprise and he wished it understood that the request of the plaintiff for leave to withdraw the action had not been made at the request or suggestion of any person connected with the Interborough. For the purpose of showing that the Interborough's financial condition was sound Mr. Quackenbush stated that the company had in the bank $2,578,000 to meet current liabilities of $2,350,000, that all pressing liabilities had been met and that there was no doubt that the company could get along comfortably until the big issue of $38,144,400 in notes matured Sept. 1 next. Thoughts of this day of reckoning, he said, held no terrors for the company. He was certain of getting by this critical period without shipwreck, no matter whether the plan of the Transit Commission failed or was successful.

Mr. Quackenbush said he was willing that a similar action in equity instituted by the American Brake Shoe and Foundry Company be continued, for the reason that it would serve to prevent a raid by creditors in the event of unexpected misfortune befalling the company.

Judge Mayer stipulated that all future hearings in the proceedings should come before him. Leave was given to William D. Guthrie, counsel for the Empire Trust Company, holder of 97 per cent. of the Interborough stock, to intervene in the proceedings.

JERSEY SENATE GETS 5-CENT FARE BILL

Measure Would Make Trolley Rate Mandatory—Gov. Edwards to Support It.

TRENTON, Jan. 30.—Senator Alexander Simpson of Hudson County introduced in the Legislature tonight a bill that would make five-cent trolley fares mandatory in all municipalities where traction companies obtained their franchise rights by an agreement not to exact more than this rate. Governor Edwards favors the measure and may send a special message to the Senate and Assembly urging its adoption.

Frank H. Sommer of Newark, counsel for the State League of Municipalities in various rate litigations, is supporting the bill and a public hearing will be arranged. The Simpson bill is an answer to the action of the Public Service Railway Company in obtaining an injunction by appeal to the Federal Courts over the seven-cent ruling of the State Board of Public Utility Commissioners. The company now has an application before the Federal Courts for a ten-cent fare.

"The State seems to be in danger of losing control over its creatures, the public utility corporations," said the Governor. "In such an emergency, it seems to me entirely right and proper that the Legislature should step in and exercise its original power of rate-making. That power was transferred to the Public Utility Commission in 1911, but now that the commission's rate-making power has been endangered, it is the duty of the State, through its Legislature, to once again exercise that power."

ARREST TWO POLICEMEN FOR FELONIOUS ASSAULT

Arrested on warrants charging them with felonious assault on complaint of Dominick Jacavino, manager and owner of a pocket billiard hall at 449 West Forty-ninth Street, who said they entered his place while in civilian clothes last Wednesday and broke up things in general, Patrolmen William Regan and John Neuweiler of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Magistrate Peter A. Hatting in West Side Court yesterday.

Regan, who is 37 years old and lives at 3,715 Tenth Avenue, Brooklyn, has been on the force thirteen years, and Neuweiler, 32 years old, of 1,858 Cornelia Street, Brooklyn, has been a policeman three and a half years. The patrolmen were on a plain-clothes detail of five days when the alleged offense was committed.

The two patrolmen on hearing that affidavits were to be presented against them by witnesses of the alleged offense were on hand in the West Side Court yesterday afternoon and surrendered themselves as soon as the warrants were issued. They were taken into custody by Warrant Officer Daniel Fisher.

The Magistrate paroled the two men in the custody of Deputy Inspector Dennis K. Foley of the Fourth Inspection District and adjourned hearing until Feb. 7.

TO FREE HETTRICK AND TRY HIM AGAIN

IN PRISON ALMOST A YEAR

John T. Hettrick, the central figure of the building graft exposures of the Lockwood committee, will be released from Blackwell's Island on parole on Feb. 24. This announcement was made by the Parole Board at almost the same minute that a document was handed up by the Grand Jury, twice reindicting Hettrick with others, accused of illegal practices in the business of installing ventilating and heating systems.

There are no other indictments outstanding against Hettrick, but he will be tried at the earliest possible date on the two indictments, it was stated yesterday.

Hettrick was found guilty of coercion last February. The charge was a misdemeanor, subjecting him to penal servitude on Blackwell's Island for an indeterminate period, from six months to three years. The period is made indeterminate by the law to give the Parole Board the power to decide when, in its judgment, a prisoner has showed such signs of reformation as would justify the opinion that his moral weakness was cured. According to Assistant District Attorney Robert S. Johnstone, the exact question in the Hettrick case was to determine when his "combining instinct" had been brought under control by incarceration.

Release on Feb. 24 will mean that Hettrick has been under lock and key for exactly one year since he was found guilty. Hettrick did not actually don his prison suit and cap until April 11, 1921, because he remained in the Tombs for a while after his conviction, in order to be tried on a second indictment.

Hettrick was reported to be a model prisoner. He earned all the good marks which a prisoner can obtain through perfect behavior. He was one of a group of prisoners who last November offered their blood for charity patients in municipal hospitals who needed blood transfusion operations.

On his arrival at the island Hettrick's physical condition was found to be such as to preclude hard work, and he was assigned to clerical duty in the medical record room of the penitentiary.

Mrs. Rebecca Bell, 60 years old, owner of a butcher shop at 241 Seventh Street, told the police of the East Fifth Street station yesterday that she had been robbed of $238 in her shop by a fur-coated woman bandit, who had first posed as a customer and then had threatened her with a revolver.

The gunwoman, according to the victim's story, entered the shop when it was opened at 6:30 yesterday morning and asked for two chickens. When told that the stock for the day had not then been delivered, but would arrive in an hour or two the customer left a deposit of $3, announcing she would return. She appeared again two hours later and selected the fowls.

"She was such a nice looking lady, about 30 years old and blonde, and her fur coat was so fine that I thought I would wrap the chickens so that they would not harm her furs," said Mrs. Bell. "I turned to get paper and twine, and then I heard my nice looking customer say, 'Hands up.' When I looked there she was with a revolver right at my face. I dropped the chickens. Then the robber shifted the revolver to her left hand and slapped me with her right."

Mrs. Bell asserted that the robber had felled her with another blow and fled with the money, which was taken from Mrs. Bell's stocking. The fact that she evidently knew where the shopkeeper kept her money, it was said, indicated that the robber had watched Mrs. Bell or had been told by a confederate.

BATH FOR ELITE PARIS DOGS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 30.—Before the war upset Parisian life and habits one of the picturesque and amusing sights was that along the Seine where there were quays of bathing establishments for dogs. It was there that madame's poodle was shorn, scrubbed and bathed by an expert while the fond mistress superintended the job with interest or soothed the frightened beast's nerves. When the poodle was ousted from the really fashionable circles by Pekingese and other dwarf breeds the riverside bathtubs were given over to more vulgar pets, for the puny little beasts could not stand the rigors of an open-air bath. Besides, the Pekingese probably had their own bathing installations at home.

But fashions change and the latest thing for the really chic Pekingese of débutante or even dowager is to frequent during the afternoon a special establishment recently opened in the Champs Elysees quarter. Here the pet is bathed in scented water by obsequious bowing attendants, rubbed down by an expert masseuse, then manicured and finally examined by a veterinary in order to see whether its health is perfect and unimpaired by the ratigue of the operations.

RADIO MONOPOLY CHARGED.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Charges that the Radio Corporation of America was seeking to obtain a monopoly of press radio communication from the United States were made today before a Senate committee by Joseph Pearson, of The Chicago Tribune, Chairman of the American Publishers' Association Committee on Radio and Cable Communication.

Testifying at hearings on the pending bill to extend for five years the authority of the Navy Department to handle press dispatches by radio, Mr. Pearson said the Radio Corporation had obtained a partial monopoly on the Atlantic Coast and was seeking a monopoly of press radio business on the Pacific Coast.

A protest against the bill was voiced by William Brown and Richard A. Ford, representing the Radio Corporation, and H. H. Adams, speaking for the General Electric Company. They asked that the extension be limited to two years, asserting that if the five-year provision went through their companies would have difficulty in obtaining funds for the extension of their services, so as to take care of the radio press communication business.

COL. EVARTS TRACY DYING.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Jan. 30.—Lieut. Col. Evarts Tracy of Plainfield, who was in charge of the camouflage for the American forces in France during the war and who has been critically ill with heart complications in the American Hospital, Paris, for the last week, cannot recover, according to a cable gram which Mrs. Tracy received today.

Colonel Tracy is a member of the New York firm of Tracy, Swartout & Co., architects. After the war he remained in service and was stationed on Governors Island as an instructor. Later he went to France to confer with the Government about reconstruction work.

IRISH CITIES ELECT REPUBLICAN MAYORS

NATIONALIST FOR DERRY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUBLIN, Jan. 30.—Alderman O'Neill, who visited America last year in behalf of the Irish White Cross, was re-elected today Lord Mayor of Dublin for the sixth time, breaking all records in the municipality. He was elected by a combination of three groups—the Anti-Treaty Sinn Fein, commercial interests and Labor.

O'Neill's attitude toward the two main political parties in the country was asked by a Labor member. He said Griffith and De Valera were bosom friends of his and that it would be his earnest effort to bring them together.

There was a straight issue between the Pro and Anti-Treaty Sinn Fein members, but O'Neill's personality brought commerce and Labor to his side, thus turning the scale.

In Cork Alderman O'Callaghan, and in Limerick Alderman O'Mara, both of whom were in America last year and both of whom oppose the treaty, were unanimously elected Lord Mayor and Mayor respectively.

The Chairman of the Urban Council of Tipperary is a Mr. Maloney, an Anti-Treaty Dail member, and he, too, was unanimously returned, but these three results have no political significance.

In Drogheda Mayor Monahan asked for a direct vote on the treaty, which he supported, and was elected.

CORK, Jan. 30.—Daniel O'Callaghan was today unanimously re-elected Lord Mayor of Cork. Although he opposed the Treaty, he was nominated by Liam Deveiate and the nomination was seconded by Barry Egan, both of whom favor the treaty.

LONDONDERRY, Jan. 30.—The Sinn Fein Extremists today withdrew their opposition and voted for the re-election of Mayor O'Doherty, Nationalist, who recently refused to accept a resolution pledging alliance to the Dail Eireann. O'Doherty, who was returned by a majority on a party basis, proposed a resolution, which was carried, protesting against partition. He said the citizens of Derry would not allow themselves to be driven out of the Free State like sheep, notwithstanding any agreement signed by Craig and Collins.

EVACUATION OF IRELAND FASTER THAN EXPECTED

But People Show No Sign of Rejoicing or Regret at the Departure of the Troops.

DUBLIN, Jan. 30 (Associated Press).—The British evacuation of Ireland is proceeding more speedily than was anticipated, giving plain proof of the adherence of the British Government to the terms of the Anglo-Irish treaty setting up the Irish Free State. Each day sees a large batch of troops depart not only from Dublin, but from other ports. Departure of the Dublin garrison is due to begin this week and the newspapers are speculating as to how the vacated barracks will be utilized. It is suggested they might be used to relieve the pressure of the housing problem.

It is noteworthy that the evacuation of the British has occurred everywhere without manifestation whatever from the people; there has been no sign either of popular rejoicing or regret. In some cases departure of these troops will be a serious loss to towns, which benefited largely from the money spent by the soldiers.

The transition from one Government to another has been rapid, but, as was to be expected, criminals have done their best to take advantage of any confusion arising from the change. There have been daring bank robberies and many holdups throughout the country, even in Dublin city, but the new Government is dealing vigorously with the criminal element. The Republican army has acted energetically in parts of Tipperary where the lawless element seemed about to get out of hand. Martial law was proclaimed, and serious penalties threatened for the unauthorized carrying of arms. The army authorities even imposed a rigid curfew law, compelling everybody to remain indoors after 8 o'clock in the evening. People who bitterly resented the British curfew law as a mark of subjugation have welcomed the Republican curfew as one imposed by their own representatives for the protection of the public.

Although the evacuation of British troops is to be complete, it is only from Southern Ireland. For the purposes of the treaty in this respect, Northern Ireland counts as though it were England, and accordingly large bodies of troops are fulfilling the promise to evacuate simply by marching across the border into Ulster. The announcement by Premier Sir James Craig in Belfast that the British Government had promised him it would leave twelve battalions in Northern Ireland is regarded suspiciously in Sinn Fein quarters.

The newspaper, Irish Republic, in tomorrow's issue commenting on the Craig-Collins agreement will say:

"Full comment on this agreement is impossible until we hear what is behind it. The only definite fact that emerged from the agreement was that an order to stop the boycott on Belfast goods had been made by the Dail Government without consulting the Dail Eireann and on the strength of this pledge illegally given in London by Mr. Collins, not as a Dail Minister, but as a Free State leader.

"For this valuable concrete concession there is no definite quid pro quo on the part of Sir James Craig—only the shadow of a conditional promise about the reinstatement of expelled workers in the Belfast district, a joint Ulster action on the railways and the prisoner question and two clauses, the first and the fourth, which strangely enough imply that the six counties are going to elect for partition. These clauses, moreover, necessitate an amendment, good in itself, of the treaty, every word and line of which, we nevertheless have heretofore been told, is so sacred that even Eamon de Valera in the Dail could not move an amendment to it.

"Sir James Craig's speech on Jan. 27 leaves us little wiser; some passages are beyond comprehension, but it seems to confirm the choice for partition, while evincing a sharp distinction between Unionists in the south, who have gone with Britain and the British Empire, the Free States, we suppose, and the Rotheads who wish for a republic—a distinction which should give Mr. Collins cause to reflect; maybe some of his speechers at the Dail.

"Here as elsewhere we plead for a clear issue and understanding. That the leading Unionists of the North and South should amicably discuss matters of common concern is a fact which every one must welcome in principle, but we are bound to reserve judgment on these discussions until we know whither they are leading us."

Noting the election of delegates from the Sinn Fein clubs to the general convention called for Feb. 1, the Irish Republic will claim successes for the Republicans throughout Ireland. The paper says:

LONDON, Jan. 30.—It was officially stated from Dublin tonight that the committee appointed by the Provisional Government expects to complete the draft of the Constitution by Feb. 3. The evacuation of British troops from Ireland continued today; detachments from Tuam, Cahir and Fermoy embarked at Dublin for English ports. In addition to the troops, numerous pieces of artillery were sent away.

CATHOLIC WORKER IS SHOT.

Man Who Returned to Belfast Shipyards Is Attacked.

BELFAST, Jan. 30.—What is regarded as a grave development in connection with the resumption of work by expelled Catholic employes in Belfast was an attack tonight on James McCullough, who returned to work in one of the shipyards today.

Five shots were fired at him as he was leaving Queen's Island gates. One bullet lodged in his shoulder, and he was hit on the head by a bolt.

Says Ulster Government Now Has Promise of Success.

BELFAST, Jan. 30.—Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, speaking today at a luncheon given by the Lord Mayor, said that the Ulster Government was making good progress in getting under way and that the promises of success were brighter than some time ago.

"By all there is an absorbing desire for peace," he continued, "and peace is bound to settle upon our land. Owing to the country's formation we are the head of Ireland, but as the head of the community—and I say this in no offensive terms to any other section—it places upon us great responsibility that the head should show grave wisdom. A slip or an error in statesmanship today can never be recovered in the future."

This is the first instance of a conference between Ministers of the Northern and Southern Governments since the recent meeting between Sir James Craig and Michael Collins.

AMERICAN PLOTTERS WARNED BY OBREGON

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 30.—The Mexican Government will prosecute any Americans who attempt to disturb the Mexican public order by means of plots or otherwise, President Obregon stated this afternoon at the National Palace. The Government, said President Obregon, has knowledge of a number of attempts to foment new movements against the peace of the republic by Americans and Mexicans. He said there was no distinction between the two nationalities from the legal point of view, and added that the Mexican law would be applied whenever the Government obtained the evidence.

Regarding the present discussions between oil men and bankers and the Mexican Government over the payment of special export taxes, President Obregon stated that the oil group had received an extension of time, as several minor difficulties were yet unsettled. The negotiations, he said, were progressing in good shape, but as this money from the special taxes was not to be in the hands of the Mexican Government, the extension of time made no difference. What the Government wanted was to start payment of the debt.

Regarding the general situation in the country, he said he had been able to rest the entire week, as he had not received a single urgent message from any part of the republic.

He joked about the possibility of war with Guatemala, saying that the relations were good between the two countries. He said he knew of nothing that was likely to arise to rupture these friendly relations.

The entire Cabinet, he said, would be completed within the next few days by the appointment of new Secretaries of Industry, Commerce, Agriculture and War. The President intimated the possibility of other changes in the Cabinet, presumably in the Foreign Relations Department, where it is expected that Albert Pani will be ousted.

When leaving the President ordered a drink served to the correspondents, who seized upon the opportunity to ask his ideas on the establishment of prohibition in Mexico. He answered that, while he thought a dry state would be a good thing for Mexico, he personally believed in eliminating vice through education rather than force. He saw no possibility of Mexico's going dry, but through Government restriction of the sale of liquor other vices could be lessened.

FINDS A NEW SKY VAGRANT.

Professor Frost Discovers Asteroid With Orbit Around Saturn.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—A new vagrant of the skies was discovered last night rambling around Saturn.

The discovery was reported by Professor Edwin B. Frost, head of the department of astronomy of the University of Chicago, who was in the Yerkes Observatory at Lake Geneva.

Although no very perfect view of the wanderer was obtained, it is believed it is an asteroid, which is similar to a small comet. This asteroid is unusual in that it appeared to have an orbit around Saturn instead of around Mars or Jupiter.

OBJECTS TO TAPESTRY LOAN

PARIS, Jan. 30 (Associated Press).—The Hungarian Government, which recently protested against the use of the famous Gobelin tapestry collection by Austria as security for an American loan, renewed its protest to the Allied Council of Ambassadors in a note received here today.

The note claims that the tapestries are owned jointly by Austria and Hungary, and that they cannot be advanced as security without Hungary's consent.

EMMA GOLDMAN IN SWEDEN.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Jan. 30.—Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman, the radicals, have been in Stockholm for the last two weeks, trying to have their passports visaed to Austria. Premier Branting has twice prolonged permission for them to stay in Sweden, where, apparently, they will remain, as it does not seem likely at the present time that any country is ready to admit them.

PAT. APPLIED FOR
The correct cuff for a gentleman's shirt

A shirt with a new, smart, yet comfortable cuff

HERE is a new shirt cuff that combines all the neatness and smartness of the uncomfortable, stiff cuff, with the ease and comfort of a soft cuff.

It is the first real improvement in men's shirts in twenty years.

Made like the VAN HEUSEN Collar, of a single-ply material that cannot wrinkle or wilt, the new PHILLIPS CUFF takes the fetters off men's wrists, just as the VAN HEUSEN Collar took the yoke off their necks.

It keeps fresh twice as long as the ordinary cuff and will wear longer than the shirt itself.

It is easier to keep clean, easier to adjust, easier to wear and easier to launder. It has no lining or artificial stiffening, yet, like the VAN HEUSEN Collar, it is laundered without starch.

This new PHILLIPS CUFF Shirt is made in seven different styles of quality fabrics, all white, from $2.50 to $7.50.

WHY ROCKEFELLER CUT FUND STRINGS

Made Principal Available for Education Now to Help Posterity.

BIG GIFT FOR MEDICINE

$48,000,000 of the Total Contributed Was Made Available for Medical Schools, if Needed.

A "pressing need for funds required by new demands and unexpected opportunities" in education and a feeling that these needs should not be neglected "in order to relieve posterity of a responsibility that will mature a generation or more hence" are the reasons given by the General Education Board in its annual report, an extract from which was made public yesterday, for John D. Rockefeller's removal of restrictions on the board's power to dispose of the entire principal of all gifts made by him to the board.

Beside the entire annual income from Mr. Rockefeller's gifts more than 33 per cent. of the principal has already been expended for education, the report discloses. The total of the gifts, estimated at their book value at the several dates when the gifts were made, is $120,788,-000. The capital funds held by the board on June 30, 1921, were $94,825,052, showing that the capital, up to the middle of last year, had been decreased to the extent of $42,122,442. Of Mr. Rockefeller's gifts, the report says, $45,000,-000 was given with the suggestion that it be added to the general resources, but, if the board thought wise, for medical education.

"In due time," says the report, "the objects of the General Education Board will have been achieved. The General Education Board will then have ceased to exist." Had the restrictions not been removed before Mr. Rockefeller's death, it was pointed out yesterday, the perpetuation of the board would have been compulsory.

Rising Prices Threaten Institutions.

In telling of the need for funds that led Mr. Rockefeller to increase the resources of the General Education Board the report says the "rise of prices threatened the very existence of our endowed educational institutions," and "to stimulate giving, Mr. Rockefeller placed at the disposal of the board securities valued at the time at approximately $50,000,000; this gift has enabled the board to assist substantially a large number of institutions, with results that are described in this report."

Mr. Rockefeller's attention also was directed, says the report, to the situation in medical education. Medical schools had never successfully appealed on a large scale to the general public or to individual donors, despite the fact that the proprietary spirit of medical schools had been generally eliminated. So a general campaign for the proper endowment of medical schools was inaugurated.

"Toward this end Mr. Rockefeller has given the General Education Board funds aggregating in value approximately $48,500,000," says the report, "with the suggestion that they be added to the general resources of the board, though he would approve if the board thought it wise to devote them to medical education."

The report shows that up to and including 1909 Mr. Rockefeller had given to the General Education Board approximately $51,000,000, of which only the income of $11,000,000 was to be distributed. But in making his gifts for medical education and teachers' salaries within the last two years he said he would "cordially endorse a decision to use the principal as well as the income." Then in a letter dated Dec. 15, 1920, he removed all restrictions on the power of the board to dispose in any manner it sees fit of the principal of all gifts which he had made.

Should Meet Pressing Needs.

"An organization like the General Education Board is in a different position from a college or university," continues the report. "Institutions of learning should undoubtedly protect their capital and preserve it inviolate from generation to generation; for no single generation can provide the sums needed for the equipment and maintenance of endowed colleges and universities. The people of the day do well if they keep these institutions financially adequate to the increased demands made upon them. But there is no reason why giving organizations like the General Education Board or why a benevolent giver should decline to meet a pressing need today in order to relieve posterity of a responsibility that will mature a generation or more hence.

"Of course, there should be no reckless distribution of large funds; there is abundant room for the exercise of far-sighted caution and discrimination. But subject to such considerations, a body like the General Education Board should be trusted in its discretion to devote its resources—principal and income—to purposes of weight and importance.

"The General Education Board was created in order to aid in accomplishing certain ends that can at this time be perhaps best accomplished through a specific type of agency. But it will not go on forever, regardless of changes of a social, political, educational or economic character. In due time, its objects will have been achieved; new problems will have emerged. The General Education Board will then have ceased to exist. The statesmen and benefactors of the next age will invent the organizations and provide the means then requisite."

WESTLING TRIAL POSTPONED

Court Grants Delay to March 6 to Get Insanity Evidence.

The trial of Alric J. Westling for the murder of Carl Moller in the Bronx on Dec. 22 last was postponed again yesterday to March 6, at the request of Ernest L. Anderson of Worcester, Mass., Westling's counsel.

Mr. Anderson asked for additional time to obtain information from Sweden concerning the imprisonment of Westling's uncle in an insane asylum. He had asked the aid of the Swedish Consulate and sent a wireless to the American Consul at Stockholm, but had not received the information. A history of the uncle's case was to be mailed from Sweden to the Clerk of the Bronx County Court.

Supreme Court Justice Richard H. Mitchell in granting the request said:

"This is an exceptional situation. I dislike these delays in murder trials, but to preclude a possible application for a new trial later, on the ground that needed testimony and needed evidence was not available at the time of trial, I'm going to give the accused man's counsel just time enough to secure the information he thinks necessary."

Portugal and Monaco Drop Passport Charges for American Tourists.

The Consuls of Portugal and Monaco in this country have been notified by their Governments that the charge of $10 for visas on the passports of American tourists has been waived. The Greek Consul has been instructed to charge $1.25 instead of $10 for tourists booked for cruises to the Mediterranean.

The European Governments made an agreement last October to charge American citizens $10 for visas, as this country was charging that sum to all foreigners wishing to enter the United States.

"I know my competitor is a quitter"

LAST spring, when his business was very bad, a man decided that he would cut out all the booklets, catalogs, and sales helps he had used in other years.

"I suppose I am a quitter," he told his printer.

A second later he said, "Wait a minute. I know my competitor is a quitter—I am going ahead."

He did. He put his printed messages before every prospective customer he could afford to reach. It cost money. It took nerve. It brought business.

This year is the first year that he has done more business than anybody else in his line.

Better paper produces better printing. Better printing means better seeing, and better seeing means better selling.

SAYS ENO REFUSED AID TO WAR UNIT

HIS AGENTS DEFEND HIM

Dr. Elizabeth Johnson Van Slyke, formerly of the Woman's Hospital, was a new witness yesterday for the contestants who are seeking before Surrogate Foley and a jury to break the will of Amos F. Eno on the ground that when he made his last will just before his death, in the Fall of 1918, he did not possess testamentary capacity.

Dr. Van Slyke said she talked with Mr. Eno in the Fall of 1914 in an effort to enlist his support for nurse units she was sending to France. She said his conversation was "jerky" and that he refused to help, although she told him she had $600 contributions from Mrs. August Belmont, Mrs. John B. Paresa, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and others socially prominent.

She saw him again in 1915 and she found him so feeble that he had to support himself by leaning on the table when he walked to his chair in the library of his Fifth Avenue home. He again refused to aid the witness, saying he was "doing a great war work" by financing a unit in England through his niece, Lady Alan Johnstone, sister of Gifford and Amos Pinchot. She thought from his talk at the time that he was "irrational," she said.

Gifford Pinchot, nephew of Mr. Eno and one of the contestants, who is now Forestry Commissioner for Pennsylvania, as an interested party to the suit was permitted to testify only that his aunt, Anna Marie Eno, sister of the decedent, who died many years ago, was mentally unsound and had to be restrained at times.

Clarence J. Shearn, chief trial counsel for the executors under the will being contested, read in evidence testimony given at the first trial by the late Charles W. Kohlsaat, Mr. Eno's real estate and business manager, and by his friend, Eugene Southack, to prove that Mr. Eno still retained his grasp over his property.

A letter to Mr. Kohlsaat stated that Mr. Eno had been a member of the Church of the Ascension for years but that he was opposed to the growing socialistic tendency manifested by the church and disliked the rector, the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant.

The trial will continue today.

FIND RICH HOBO DEAD IN 'HAUNTED' HOUSE

NYACK, N. Y., Jan. 30.—Apparently weakened by hunger, a wanderer and "hobo by choice" was found frozen to death in a "haunted house" in West Haverstraw yesterday, with $126 in cash in his pockets and bank books showing deposits of $4,000 in Poughkeepsie banks. The body was identified as that of Charles D Graff of Highland, N. Y., who disappeared from his home last September.

The body was found by a crowd of adventurous small boys, who resolved that they would explore the abandoned "House of Blazes" in the "Hell's Kitchen," or negro section of West Haverstraw.

The first floor yielded little thrill for the "gang." There was no sign of a ghost there, and the rooms were bleak and filled with musty cold. Upstairs they went. The first room held no adventure, and the trip was losing its spice, when one of the boys stumbled into the second room.

In a cramped position in a corner was the body of a man of 55, clad in rags, frozen and dessicated. One look at the blue face and the heroes of the "gang" became swift runners.

Edgar Fiender, Coroner of Rockland County, returned after the village had heard the breathless story. He identified the body quickly by bank books showing deposits of $4,000 in the First National Bank of Highland, the Poughkeepsie Savings Bank, and the Poughkeepsie Trust Company. In another pocket he found six twenty-dollar bank notes and $6 in notes and silver.

He said that the wanderer apparently had entered the house as a refuge from the storm and there, weak from hunger, had perished in the cold without strength to start a fire. Others who visited the "House of Blazes" agreed in this conclusion, and the official verdict was "frozen to death," some time in the last four days.

The authorities learned that Mrs. August Gersch of Highland, N. Y., was a niece of De Graff, and August Gersch came here to claim the body.

Police Radio Veteran Retires.

His home is at Steinway, L. I.

Successful Actress Says "Invest Where You Can't Lose"

A successful actress, who has lost considerable money in stocks, was advising a younger member of her profession on the care of money. "It is not enough to save; you must invest where you won't lose. If I had only known about Guaranteed Mortgage Certificates when I first began to put away small sums, I would not have years of work still ahead of me when I ought to be retiring from the stage before my popularity wanes.

"Begin buying these certificates just as soon as you can and when you are my age you will still have all you saved. People in our profession cannot afford to risk money on investments that promise a great deal but are not absolutely safe."

THE PLAY

By ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT

Enter Marie Lohr.

Andrew Fabian	Herbert Marshall
Selim	E. Rayson-Cousens
Father Elsworthy	C. M. Hallard
Evelyn Caryll	Marie Lohr
A Jemadar	Jacques Chapin
Mrs. Fabian	Vane Featherston
Miss Judd	Content Pakenham
A Waiter	Evan Baldwin
Sir Leslie Caryll	Edmund Gwenn
Astley	E. Rayson-Cousens

The stage of the Hudson Theatre was given over last evening to a play from England called "The Voice from the Minaret," an uncommonly pompous piece by the same Robert Hichens, who once wrote "The Garden of Allah."

Knowing Mr. Hichens as you do and snatching at the Mohammedan implications of his title, you would be justified in going to the Hudson under the distinct impression that you were about to see something pretty continuously levantine in the way of a romance. You would expect to behold a drama quite reeking with atmosphere, with hautboy music sounding off-stage and no end of muezzins calling on the faithful at eventide. As a matter of fact, "The Voice from the Minaret" does begin bravely with a liaison between two English runaways in Damascus. But that is by way of prologue. Thereafter, the play is fought out on the steps of a provincial English pulpit and emerges as a recognizable piece of theatricalism belonging to the early Henry Arthur Jones period.

What we have here is the romance of a young Englishman, who sets off for Palestine as a means of making up his mind on the question of whether or not he should go into the church. En route, at Damascus, his path crosses that of an unhappy beauty in headlong flight from her Anglo-Indian home which an offensive husband has made quite uninhabitable.

The ensuing love affair is spoiled, however, by the young man's sensitiveness to the muezzin's call to prayer, and so they part, to meet again when he is a famous young preacher and she a still unhappy and somewhat older woman. Their old scandal stalks them, her husband is hastily summoned to provide the requisite third act excitement, and the lovers are considerable ructions. But in the end we leave them serene, with the woman more or less definitely resolved to love him from the vantage point of her pew, where she can help him a lot just by believing in him hard.

All this is told in highfalutin locutions with scarcely a line of simple, untheatrical speech in all four acts. It was no doubt this quality in Mr. Hichens's text which began in the director's mind the notion that it would be best to have it played with all the old-time devices of rolling eyes, solemn pauses, bated breaths and swelling utterance usually discarded in the more modest acting of our time. Certainly the company imported with the play in order to do it justice in New York lays it on thick.

That company is headed by Marie Lohr, thereby making her first appearance in New York after a long record of achievement overseas. Miss Lohr has been playing leading roles in London ever since many years, first attracting general attention by her performances with Sir Herbert Tree at His Majesty's back in 1909. Now she is trying her luck on the path which so many (though not all) of her English predecessors have found prosperous.

The company she has been able to bring with her is rather inferior in grade to the English companies we see recruited here in New York every season, but it has one excellent player in Edmund Gwenn, a forthright and interesting actor who was uncommonly successful in "The Skin Game" in London, and who now lends "The Voice from the Minaret" what momentary lifelikeness and interest it possesses.

MR. FAUST, a play in four acts, by Arthur Davison Ficke. At the Provincetown Playhouse.

Brander	Byron Feuiger
Oldham	Robert Bell
Mr. Faust	Maurice Browne
The Butler	Jack Gide
Nicholas Satan	Moroni Olsen
The Holy One	Henry O'Neill
Midge	Janet Young
The Doctor	Harold McGee

Being occupied for the moment with grand plans for the presentation of a new O'Neill play, the Provincetown Players last night turned over their Macdougal Street theatre to Maurice Browne and Ellen Van Volkenburg for their production of a play entitled "Mr. Faust." The Brownes, who came out of the West a few seasons ago, are by this time reasonably well known here; the play that they have elected to put upon the Provincetown stage is one that they had previously presented in Seattle, and which, presumably, they had discerned some merit.

Briefly, the new piece is not very important. Its author is Arthur Davison Ficke, a poet, and the play is a somewhat hollow, though high-sounding inquiry into the purpose and meaning of life. To this end Mr. Ficke takes a variant of the Faust story as the basis of his play, with his hero a jaded soul who has tasted all of the experiences of life and found them similarly empty.

Hence the compact with the devil, and a long and winding journey over the earth, all in the attempt to find out what it is all about. The play is repetitious, undramatic, and only very occasionally interesting. It is acted well in spots, with Moroni Olsen an excellent devil, and Mr. Browne himself giving a reasonably good performance in the title role. Miss Van Volkenburg, on this occasion, figures only as producer.

Opera Benefit for Civil Service.

A matinee for the benefit of the Civil Service Reform Association will be held on Thursday afternoon by the Metropolitan Opera Company. The operas selected are "Cavalleria Rusticana," with Jeritza in the leading role, and "Pagliacci," with Bori, Kingston and Titta Ruffo. The performance is in the hands of a special committee, including Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Mrs. George McAneny, Mrs. Ezra P. Prentice, Mrs. George M. Tuttle, Mrs. Otto H. Kahn, Mrs. Charles H. Ditson, Mrs. Walter E. Maynard and many others.

Sunday School Teacher Puts Up Bail for Woman, Who Vanished.

Charles A. Snowden, a Sunday school superintendent of St. Luke's Church, 141st Street and Convent Avenue, who put up $100 cash bail to obtain the release of Mrs. Helene Sullivan in Washington Heights Court last Wednesday, was again in Heights Court yesterday. But Mrs. Sullivan was absent. Magistrate Charles N. Harris declared the bail forfeited.

Mr. Snowden said that he had first met Mrs. Sullivan when introduced to her by her husband in 1915, and had met her at various times since. The trouble started when Mrs. Sullivan seized Romain Beuneto, a magazine editor, in a moving picture theatre week before last and told a policeman that he had pinched her leg. In court Mr. Beuneto was exonerated by the Magistrate and Mrs. Sullivan held, charged with having made similar approaches to several men at various times and places. The men were in court yesterday prepared to testify.

Mr. Snowden said that as far as he could learn Mrs. Sullivan had left her former address, 3,605 Broadway, a half hour after leaving the court room last Wednesday, and had not even thanked him for putting up the $100 bail on which she had been released.

UNVEILS WILSON PORTRAIT.

Public School 39 B, in East 128th Street, in keeping with the dedication exercises last night, will be known as Woodrow Wilson School. A portrait of the ex-President, which he autographed last Thursday at Washington, was unveiled in the auditorium before a large crowd. It was the gift of the Parents' Association.

The speakers included Hamilton Holt, Executive Director of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation; Thomas W. Churchill, former President of the Board of Education; John T. Nicholson and William S. M. Silber, Chairman of the Local School Board. Harry Levy, the principal, presided. Mr. Holt said:

"They attacked Washington, and they maligned Lincoln, as persons who were alive just after the Civil War will tell you. They have attacked the man who took a group of different ideals and welded and focused them into one ideal, that of true and pure Americanism. Woodrow Wilson's Idealism was the most practical ever suggested."

ROZSA MAKES OPERA DEBUT.

Hungarian Baritone Appears in "Lohengrin"—Miss Jeritza as Elsa.

Mme. Jeritza sang for the third time as Elsa in the restored German version of "Lohengrin" at the Metropolitan last night, with the usual sold-out house and many persons standing. Mr. Bodanzky conducted and Mme. Matzenauer, Messrs. Sembach and Blass reappeared, while the rôle of Telramund introduced for the first time in opera here the Hungarian baritone, Louis Rozsa, heard but once in concert before.

Mr. Rozsa in presence and action realized much of the traditional character of the dark warrior of Brabant who plotted against the swan knight and his bride. Vocally, too, he displayed considerable power, and in particular an agreeable use of the voice in its upper register. His début, made at short notice in Mr. Whitehill's place, was cordially received by a brilliant subscription audience.

Marguerite Volavy, Pianist, Heard.

Marguerite Volavy, pianist, gave her annual concert at Aeolian Hall last evening, with a program of short works by more than a dozen composers. Besides the classics from Bach to Brahms, she played an early minuet of Martini, a sonata of Scarlatti and "The Cuckoo" of Daquin, adding later Debussy's "Girl With Flaxen Hair," Smetana's "On the Seashore" and Carpenter's "American Tango."

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Frank Fay's "Fables" will open at the Park next Monday, instead of this week.

"The Cat and the Canary" will have its premiere at the National on Tuesday, Feb. 5, to avoid conflict with other openings on Monday.

Emanuel Reicher will produce "Magda" at the Fifteenth Street Theatre tomorrow and Thursday nights, with himself in the cast. Schnitzler's and other plays will follow, and Mr. Reicher plans a Broadway season later.

Last night's performance of "Captain Applejack," at the Cort, was a benefit in aid of St. Joseph's Day Nursery.

There will be extra matinees of "Bulldog Drummond," "A Bill of Divorcement" and "Good Morning Dearie" next Feb. 12.

"The Man Who Was Dead," by Sholom Asch, will be given its first performance at the Yiddish Art Theatre on Feb. 2.

OPERA

"L'Amore dei Tre Re" at Manhattan.

Flora	Mary Garden
Archibaldo	Virgilio Lazzari
Manfredo	George Baklanoff
Avito	Edward Johnson
Fiamina	Ludovico Oliviero
A Youth	Jose Mojica
A Handmaiden	Pauline Palco
A Young Girl
An Old Woman	Anna Correnti

Conductor, Giorgio Polacco.

On account of the illness of Lucien Muratore and the necessity of an immediate operation upon him, the opera announced for performance at the Manhattan Opera House by the Chicago Opera Company last evening was changed. For Février's "Monna Vanna" was substituted Montemezzi's "L'Amore dei Tre Re." The change was announced in time for the audience to be informed of it before it came to the performance. Opera for opera, it is much the best of it. The substitute work is one well known to New York from performances by both the opera companies which the opera-going public of this city has been privileged to hear, and it has already been given this season at the Metropolitan.

A performance in many ways excellent was given last evening under the direction of Mr. Polacco. Yet there was a more or less obvious subversion of the whole meaning of Sem Benelli's beautiful piece through the misapprehension of the character of Flora by Miss Garden, who sang the part of the heroine.

She is no longer, as the poet represented her, a woman enmeshed in the web of fate and helplessly, hesitatingly, unwittingly swept away from her husband to the arms of her lover. She appears at the outset to have a very good understanding of her feelings toward Avito, embracing, in fact, and pawing him with an obvious end in view. She shows an equally obvious aversion to Manfredo, a stony and implacable attitude toward him, without hesitations, without reticence.

Hence the struggle with herself and with Avita's passionate imploring on the balcony in the second act loses its significance, and the poet's finely delineated emotional climax goes for nothing. Miss Garden sang in better voice than she often has sung. Her acting was not free from the mannerisms that are familiar.

Edward Johnson made an ardent and romantic figure as Avito and sang admirably in quality of voice and passionate expression. Georges Baklanoff as Manfredo was rather inflexible in action and in voice as well, and Virgilio Lazzari was a sufficiently vindictive Archibaldo, and was as rough in voice as he was in his treatment of Flora.

Julius Richter, Violinist, Plays.

Julius Richter, a young Polish violinist who came from Warsaw to this city about a year ago, gave a recital at the Town Hall last night, assisted at the piano by Maurice Narelle. The newcomer made friends by a simple, quiet demeanor on the stage, and he played with taste and good tone the genial concerto of Saint-Saens, in B minor, and the more technical F-sharp minor of Ernst. He gave also pieces by Wieniawski and Paganini, as well as a theme of Gluck arranged by Manen.

MUSIC NOTES.

Amelita Galli-Curci, Titta Ruffo, Harrold and Didur, will sing Rossini's "Barber of Seville" tonight in the Metropolitan company's series at the Brooklyn Academy.

Richard Schubert, who created the tenor role in "Die Tote Stadt" in Vienna, makes his Manhattan debut tonight in "Tristan," with Beatrice Kottlar, Eleanor Reynolds, William Beck and James Wolf.

Willem Van de Wall conducted at 437 Fifth Avenue yesterday a test of the "therapeutic value" of music such as he has given in various hospitals of this city and State.

Frank La Forge, the pianist, has arranged a concert of vocal and other music tomorrow to which admission is free.

"GALLEYS" OF THE REPUBLIC.

Fuller accounts in the French papers of M. BRIAND's resignation show more plainly than did the telegraphic dispatches the reasons for his action. Directly after leaving the Chamber, where he had spoken the abrupt and unexpected words, "This is what I have done, let others do better," he was approached by the astonished newspaper men. They told him that he would surely have had a majority in the Chamber. "Possibly that is so," replied M. BRIAND, "but it would have been whittled away as soon as I had gone back to Cannes." He went on to explain that the Parliamentary committees would all the while have been bombarding him with protests and demands, and that he would have given much the impression of being a Prime Minister with his neck in a noose. His last words to the reporters, uttered, as they recorded, with a certain bitterness, were as follows:

> I never knew what it was to row in the royal galleys, but I know now what it is to row in the galleys of the republic, and I do not wish to continue in that business any longer.

The reference of the fallen Premier was obviously to the conduct of foreign affairs. His suggestive figure of speech raises the question whether those charged under republican institutions with such high concerns have not to confront difficulties and meet criticisms unknown to the practitioners of diplomacy under monarchical rule. It is easy to read in BRIAND's own experience during the last six months the story of the obstacles thrown in his way and the exasperations which attended his work. A part of the constant attacks in the rear from which he suffered was due no doubt to political animus. But a still larger part arose from the impatience of citizens in a democracy. They more and more demand immediate results from their leaders. They have not the information upon which to form a sound judgment regarding delicate negotiations with foreign countries; yet they insist that their agents shall attain instant and overwhelming success. If they are called upon to be patient and to weigh carefully all the elements entering into the case, they are apt hastily to conclude that their representative is incompetent and ought to be replaced at once by an abler man.

The consequences of all this are seen in the tendency of republics to look to their Presidents and Foreign Ministers for a series of tours de force. The world has seen this illustrated in the instance of Mr. LLOYD GEORGE. He has been driven by the democratic forces behind him in England to attempt one glittering "stunt" after another in foreign affairs. He has on the whole been brilliantly successful up to the present time, but his friends are growingly apprehensive lest he attempt to leap a hurdle too high for him and get a bad fall.

Nor have American officials been ignorant of what it is to row in the galleys of the republic. If the President and Secretary of State in Washington have been showing latterly signs of fatigue and nervous worry, it may well be due to the fact that they have been driven to undertake an enormous labor under too great pressure from a public that has cherished too sanguine expectations of what might be accomplished. It is undeniable, for example, that during the last two or three weeks the Administration has had a "bad press" in what relates to the Washington conference. Foreigners here have noticed this and wondered at it. They ask if Americans really expected their Government to win instantly a complete victory at every point. In fact, it looks very much as if they did. They have too little consideration or even mercy for the agent rowers in their diplomatic galleys. As for those straining oarsmen, the only continent of comfort that can be given to them by their friends is to sit tight, pull as hard as they can, and trust to a fair verdict from the public when the time comes to pass upon their entire work.

COST OF PROHIBITION.

Wet wickedness never dies. The State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York says that the sons of Belial are planning to carry the House of Representatives in the next Congress, and are sure that they can do it. It is hard to believe that even alcoholic fatuity goes so far as that. The political situation is complex and confused, but other issues than the maintenance of the sacred Volstead act, already supplemented so as to add a new reading to and extension of the Eighteenth Amendment, stir the voters. The people are taxed to death, and their taxes are about to be raised. In their collection of grievances and dissatisfactions, prohibition, though active in the great contemporary art of bleeding the public, is perhaps a little less important than it looks to the professionals.

The Superintendent tells us that it costs about $100,000,000 to enforce prohibition; half of that sum to enforce it in this State. It would take a good deal bigger figures to indicate what it costs in lost excise and license taxes, national, State and local. The Government, for instance, could easily raise as much as the customs yield by a tax on beers and wines; but the Volsteadians have solemnly determined that any drink with more than one-half per cent. of alcohol is intoxicating and accursed. They might just as well have ordained that two and two make seven. The Superintendent graciously says:

> Whilst we can compel the Wets, who are in the minority in numbers, but represent much money, to pay their share of the more than $100,000,000 of public funds spent in giving prohibition a fair trial through the operation of Government, Federal, State and local enforcement, we cannot expect the Wets to contribute the $1,000,000 a year that will be necessary for some years to come to get the facts to the people so that they can continue to cooperate effectively in retaining control of the Government machinery.

This is a generous concession. If the Wets are in the minority and have the money, they should be compelled to pay the necessary $1,000,000 a year "to get the facts." Still—if the word is permissible—this would be unkind to the faithful, who burn to subsidize the cause. They, too, must "represent much money"; and the Anti-Saloon League and the Allied Citizens of America represent them. If the people are co-operating effectively already, why do they need to be fed with new "facts" in order to continue their co-operation? It is not for laymen to penetrate these mysteries. The great thing is to continue to manufacture and disseminate the "facts."

THE SCHOOLS IN PERIL.

There is in the Department of Education of this city a Board of Superintendents consisting of the City Superintendent and eight Associate Superintendents. Their function is to recommend appointments for all positions on the teaching and supervising staff of the city schools, from the lowest to the highest. It is essential to the soundness and efficiency of the school system that this board should be kept of such competency, single-mindedness and integrity in its personnel as to make certain that its decisions shall always aim at the selection of those best fitted to teach our children.

The present system was built up by that able administrator, Dr. WILLIAM H. MAXWELL, and has been maintained by Dr. EGGLESTON against insidious, and sometimes open, political attacks. It is now in special peril. The terms of two Associate Superintendents, both of unquestioned ability and fidelity in service, are about to expire. It is credibly reported that their reelection is endangered by their very conscientiousness, by their unswerving devotion to their duties, by their disregard of their personal interests and by their refusal to let other motives than the good of the children influence their recommendations. If the integrity of this board is impaired, there will be no adequate and continuing protection against the political manipulation and control of a service that, above all others, should be kept free from such influence. Unless public opinion, either directly or through legislative enactment, prevents the carrying out of this menacing plan, such independence as the schools now have (fought for through so many years) will be at an end, and what seems now to be clearly within the purpose of Tammany Hall will be within its power.

Dr. EGGLESTON, retiring from a position in this Board of Superintendents after long years of faithful service, gave clear warning out of his own experience last Saturday in the presence of a thousand teachers. The public should heed the signs. There have been ominous delays on the part of the Board of Education in filling certain vacancies in the Board of Superintendents when there were apparently no good reasons for the delay, and, on the other hand, there has been disquieting celerity in a recent action. The "funeral baked meats" did not "coldly furnish forth the marriage tables"; they were used in advance of the last ceremonies. But whatever the motives may have been for this slowness at one time and swiftness at another, it is to what the Board of Education is about to do in filling other vacancies that the public should now give instant heed.

NATIONAL DIFFERENCES.

One of the marked differences between Englishmen and Americans is the strange reluctance of the former and readiness of the latter to pay high taxes. Englishmen have been grumbling and fuming most indecently for years over the size of their tax bills. They refuse to be reconciled to paying some 23 1-5 per cent. of their incomes in taxes. They howl for economy in Government expenditures. For months by-elections have turned on the issue of "anti-waste." Sir ERIC GEDDES is at the head of a committee that has been going over Government expenditures with an axe. Apparently, Englishmen really believe that a budget ought to balance and taxes ought to be reduced.

Americans look at these little matters in a different light. At least, Congress assumes that they do. Secretary MELLON tells Congress that expenditures must be decreased to the tune of $330,000,000 in the next two years, if deficits are to be avoided and the budget is to balance. Instead of trying to save $330,000,000, Congress is in hot haste to throw away $536,000,000 or more in the next two years by extraordinary expenditure, in a bribe for votes. Evidently, Congress holds that the American people love waste and dote on unnecessarily high taxes.

THE PORT BILL HEARING.

Today there is to be a hearing by the Legislature on the Port Authority bill. Mayor HYLAN thought that citizens ought to send a delegation to Albany in protest. The Mayor could not lead them personally, for he has more urgent business at Palm Beach. He is not grudged his holiday, and the city will be represented both by his written words and by officials taking the Mayor's view. Former Governor SMITH, whose views are different, will also be heard. Mr. METZ urges combination of the city and Port Authority plans.

The difficulty is that the city plan starts by antagonizing New Jersey. But the work will hardly be done without the consent of New Jersey. It is clear that the city tunnel under the Narrows would be in the sole control of New York, although the traffic passing is both interstate and national. Control of such a facility should be in hands favoring neither New York nor New Jersey. The city plan is disqualified by the partisanship which it boasts, and which is the basis of appeal to New Yorkers at the expense of the alienation of New Jersey.

Narrow views are as characteristic of the city plan as breadth of view is characteristic of the Port Authority plan. Thus, the city plan starts with intention of developing Staten Island and a section of New Jersey at the expense of Newark and the river side of New Jersey. The Port Authority plan starts with the intention of developing Joint interests, while leaving local interests to develop themselves inside the larger plan. Thus, under the Port Authority plan Newark Bay and Jamaica Bay might both expect such development as they could procure by offering facilities to commerce, without prejudice to the port as an entirety. The city can develop its local interests alone, but it cannot develop the port as a unit without assistance. The city plan will not suffer by the Mayor's absence on his holiday, for it is beyond hope. The Port Authority plan will benefit by the support of Governor SMITH and of all local interests which are in sympathy with it—meaning all except the odd juror who thinks that the other eleven are unreasonable.

LABOR SELF-OUTLAWED.

There is more than meets the ear in Mr. SAMUEL GOMPERS's outgiving with regard to Justice WAGNER's now celebrated injunction against the Suit and Skirt Manufacturers. Into "the chorus of delight" that acclaimed labor's use of the courts against errant capital Mr. GOMPERS hurls what he admits to be "a harsh note." In his own right and majesty he outlaws both of the mighty opposites. "There is nothing any Judge can do" to make the injunction as used in "industrial disputes a lawful process. "There is nothing he can do to excuse it or varnish it with loveliness." Both employer and employed may break contracts solemnly signed, sealed and delivered; both may resort to violence and the destruction of property values, involving the whole community in loss; yet the act remains as private and personal as an eighteenth century duel. Neither the rights of the public nor the ancient laws of the land have anything to do with it.

This deliberate statement by the head of the American Federation of Labor can be rightly read only in connection with certain manifest tendencies of the times. Workmen no less than employers, if they are intelligent and thoughtful, are striving to get away from the old waste and violences, to make their differences a source of new understanding and mutual helpfulness. In two virtually national industries during the past few months old-line unionism has given way to employee representation, under which "collective bargaining" is conducted by representatives who are quite literally of the laborers' "own choosing"—with the result that American workmen are advancing in knowledge of their industry even while they are safeguarding their own rights and the rights of the public. In the case of both the Pennsylvania Railroad and the packing industry, old-line union leaders did their utmost to defeat the new order. Now there is talk of the industrial court or commission. This is pioneer work for human freedom as difficult as it is momentous. Not merely the rights of labor and capital are involved; the rights of the public are primary and paramount—a consideration highly perplexing. Yet in the face of all difficulties, and with many vital problems as yet unsolved, the Kansas court is making good. In twelve States the Legislatures are endeavoring to follow its lead, and Senator KENYON promises a bill to provide for the Federal regulation of the coal mines. Yet the Federation of Labor stands across the way of advancement, breathing defiance.

All who, like Mr. GOMPERS, utter harsh notes may as well make ready to hear them. There can be only one reason why labor leaders are opposed to the rational development of law. Just as soon as order and justice step in, the fulminating and belligerent leader will step out. In the past his services were unquestionably necessary. Nor can any future come in which leadership will not be needful. Only, it must be of a new kind, adapted to the new conditions that are already upon us. It must be leadership which comprehends the primary fact that in the complex modern State neither labor nor capital can advance except by serving the other, and that the welfare of both is part and parcel of the welfare of the nation. In the future labor strife must not be class war, but an effort of constructive co-operation.

SIR ERNEST SHACKLETON.

It was the irony of fate that Sir ERNEST SHACKLETON, engaged in the least dangerous of his expeditions, should die at anchor in a harbor off South Georgia Island. Across the snow-covered mountains of the unknown inte-rior he and his companions had fo ght their way in 1915 to secure relief for the other men of the ill-starred Endurance, marooned on Elephant Island in the Antarctic. SHACKLETON was always an idealist. The traversing of South Georgia Island was a desperate but necessary undertaking. Arrived on the beach of the whaling station at last, the adventurers presented themselves like ghosts to the manager. "Our beards," wrote SHACKLETON, "were long and our hair was matted. We were unwashed, and the garments that we had worn for nearly a year without change were tattered and stained." The story told by these strangers who seemed to have fallen from the skies was almost incredible. They had endured the most terrible privations. But their commander was in a state of mental exaltation. "We had pierced the veneer of outside things," he said. "We had suffered, starved and triumphed, groveled yet grasped at glory, grown bigger in the fullness of the whole. We had seen God in his splendors, heard the text that Nature renders. We had reached the naked soul of man."

That expedition, the chief object of which had been to cross the Antarctic Continent, was as much a wreck as the Endurance, shattered by the ice floes, dismantled, her masts twisted out of her, her smokestack down. As SHACKLETON turned away from her to hearten his men for the long drift on the ice, he tore the fly-leaf out of the Bible that Queen ALEXANDRA had given the ship, "with her own writing on it," and also he saved, for they had to travel light, the page of Job that contained the verse:

> Out of whose womb came the ice?
> And the hoary frost of heaven, who hath gendered it?
> The waters are hid as with a stone,

It was doubtless his idealism and the religious strain in him that made SHACKLETON a Captain to be loved as well as obeyed. All could see and feel the genuine worth of the man. When the crew of the Endurance at last reached Elephant Island in their three frail boats the honor of being the first to land where man had never set foot before was assigned to the youngest of the party, who happened to be so frostbitten that SHACKLETON had to lift and push him ashore. As a subordinate on Scott's Discovery expedition SHACKLETON was the life of the party and always the handy man, doing the hardest work and never sparing himself. "SHACKLETON," SCOTT says in "The Voyage of the Discovery," "is editor of our monthly journal, The South Polar Times; he is also printer, manager, typesetter and office boy." Strong as he looked, indomitable as was his spirit, SHACKLETON fell ill at last and scurvy threatened him. SCOTT wrote in his diary: "His breathing has become stertorous and labored, his face looks pinched and worn, his strength is very much reduced, and for the first time he has lost his spirits and grows despondent." At the first opportunity SHACKLETON had to be invalided home.

But he was soon back in the Antarctic, this time as leader of the Nimrod expedition. The South Pole was his objective, but, previously falling, he was stopped 100 miles short of it. In his next adventure, with the thoroughly equipped Endurance, fate again dealt him a cruel blow. His last enterprise, with the Quest, was to comprise everything that was still worth seeking in the Southern Pacific and the Antarctic Circle. Every man aboard was a dreamer as well as a man of science, and the record when made up was to transcend in interest either "The Heart of the Antarctic" or "South." But SHACKLETON had endured too much. His strong constitution failed him on the very threshold of the new adventure.

HE WOULD HAVE IT.

At the end of Senator GLASS's powerful speech in defense of the Federal Reserve Board he replied to a minor misrepresentation made by Senator HEFLIN of Alabama. The latter, in the course of a railing attack upon the Governor of the Reserve Board, had asserted that "W. P. G. HARDING voted the Republican ticket in 1920." Though nominally an Alabama Democrat, after the election he "howed and smiled like a Republican." But Senator GLASS read a letter from Governor HARDING setting forth that he did not go home to vote at all in 1920, being tied to his desk in Washington by important official work. He added that he knew that there was "not the remotest possibility of my failure to vote having the slightest effect upon the election results in Alabama."

This gave the alert HEFLIN his chance. Governor HARDING did not need to go home in order to vote. "Under the laws you can vote by mail." Thereupon the remorseless GLASS:

> Yes; that is true, and thus I am prompted to say that there was one paragraph in this letter from Governor HARDING I purposely omitted to read and did not care to read. I would not state it but for the provocation offered by the Senator from Alabama. Governor HARDING states in his letter that he was not particularly eager to go home to vote or to send a ballot by mail, because he would have had to vote for the Senator, and he did not want to vote for the Senator.

Thus GEORGES DANDIN HEFLIN would have it, and got it!

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

They Have Power to Reform.

Apparently, college Presidents are acquiring a dislike for college students, or at any rate a strong disapproval of their manners and methods. President BUTLER of Columbia and President LOWELL of Harvard are only a little more emphatic in criticism of their young charges than are the others in like position who have written or spoken on this subject of late. Only the heads of the girls' colleges seem to be content, or at any rate silent, in regard to those to whom they are supposed to be teaching wisdom and virtue.

In theory, at least, however it may be in practice, college Presidents are personages with great power over their respective institutions, and if they do not like the way things are going in them, why do they not institute the necessary reforms? It would not be altogether fair, perhaps, but neither would it be altogether unfair, to say that the college students of today are what the college Presidents have made them, or allowed them to become, and if, as one of these critics says, the colleges have come to be "merely pleasant country clubs," where the boys devote their time to the smoking of cigarettes and the wasting of time and their fathers' money, why don't the lords of all they survey do something about it? Why, indeed, haven't they done something about it long ago?

If what is is bad, it surely will become worse if the student bodies are left to their own guidance, for the young of the human species do not, and seemingly never will, enjoy the study of books and the hearing of lectures as much as they enjoy "extra-curricular activities," to use a new popular euphemism for football and hockey.

Really, the college Presidents, instead of being the first to scold the students, should be the last, and they well might look nearer home for objects of reprobation.

Universities Ancient and Modern.

History tells us—or is it only legend?—that the first of European universities consisted merely of a group of young men so eager to acquire the learning of their time that they combined their small resources and hired certain Wise Ones to teach them. It is easy to believe that the maintenance of discipline in that school was easy, as such young men would want to get the worth of their money, and if they thought any of the Wise Ones was not giving it, his dismissal would be prompt.

Nowadays things are different. College power is in the hands of adult authority, and at least a majority of the students go to college with the queer idea, not of getting there as much as they can, but, by the selection of easy courses, of getting as little as is compatible with graduation. There are exceptions, indeed, but they are not very popular and they acquire no fame. That may be partly the fault of the newspapers, which pay so much more attention to football stars than to the winners of scholastic honors, but if superiority in learning made a man famous in college it would do so out of it as well.

As for collegiate athletics, the usual defense of sports and games is that they make for health and physical development. Is it not strange, however, that three months in an army post will turn every one of a company of recruits into a fine, upstanding, clear-complexioned soldier, though many of them have been slouching boys with pasty faces, while no such effect is produced on a whole student body by four years of college athletics?

He Cannot Really Think So.

As admirable example of the "rhetorical question" is presented by one of THE TIMES's readers. He has been thinking about the case of HULLOCK, the American negro whom the Canadian authorities have refused to extradite on the really absurd ground that he has behaved himself well ever since he smuggled himself across the border.

What the reader wants, or pretends that he wants, to know is why the Canadian Government does not say, frankly, "We cannot return HULLOCK, or any one else accused of crime unless we believe that he will be fairly tried and punished by law, and we do not believe that this man would be so tried and punished in North Carolina."

And again he wants to know why the United States Government should not reply to that of Canada: "Right you are, and we will not insist that any Government return any fugitive from justice to be tried in any State unable to hold its prisoners safe from lynchers."

That, in our correspondent's opinion, would be an open recognition of truth on both sides, and it would be a start toward "putting behind us the miserable, submerfuging, bad-feeling-creating, war-breeding system of international communication hitherto known as 'diplomacy.'"

Would it indeed? The chances are that it would be the beginning of something quite different—an interchange of protests and recriminations the end of which easily might be of the utmost seriousness.

Truth is too precious to be used carelessly, and much is known that is better left untold. Anybody who expresses all of his little animosities, suspicions, dislikes and prejudices is sure to have a bad, hard time, as he should, and "diplomacy," in the sense of tact, courtesy and consideration, has its manifest merits in both public and private affairs.

Quite certainly Canada is not going to tell us that in this country accusation means lynching, even in North Carolina, for it does not, and quite certainly we are not going to admit it.

Justifying Animal Experimentation.

Anti-vivisectionists will note with joy the admission by Dr. PARK of the Health Department that 500 monkeys have been used in Washington and have in an attempt to get the better of influenza and that the disease still remains a deep mystery—as deep as any that continues to puzzle the medical profession.

Not one of these animals, however, has been "vivisected" in the true sense of that word, nor have such of them as have perished died in vain, from the human standpoint. For though the bacillus of influenza has not been isolated or a serum for its prevention or cure yet found, progress toward the conquest of pneumonia has been made as a result of these researches, and it is of a subsequent pneumonia that the victims of influenza most often die.

Lighting Under Elevated.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While the question of transit improvement is occupying the attention of our officials, I wish to call their attention to a condition which I am sure will be of immeasurable benefit to the community. This improvement will not only add attractiveness to the city but more fundamentally will prevent serious accidents.

The street lighting system is none too good, and with the structures of the elevated roads preventing this light from being fully diffused it makes travel particularly dangerous. This danger is sold only too grimly in the number of accidents that are officially recorded every day—accidents of such irreparable nature that no compensation can adequately repay the loss.

Since the elevated structures cannot be removed, the next best thing to do is to illuminate those parts of the street which now suffer from lack of light. This can be done by installing lights beneath the elevated structures and between the pillars of them. This improvement will sufficiently illuminate those necessary parts of the streets which are now denied light because of this condition. When sufficient light is thus diffused the motormen of street cars and the drivers of automobiles will not be the terrifying figure of the skull at death to persons crossing the streets.

An observation at any of the corners where there is an "L" station will forcibly convince any one of the imperative necessity of putting into effect my suggestion.

Sixth Avenue and Thirty-eighth Street will offer a good illustration of this need, as travel between the hours of 5 and 7 P. M. at this crossing is particularly hazardous. A careful observer of any of the avenues where the elevated structures stand cannot help but realize the significance of doing something to ameliorate this dangerous condition.

The only cost to effect this urgent and necessary improvement would be the cost of fixtures and the labor of installation. The current to illuminate the lamps could very easily be taken from the power generated by the "L" trains.

With this improvement in effect, pedestrians would be less liable to harm, automobile travel would be greatly facilitated and the avoidance of accidents occasioned by the multi-numerous "L" pillars would be appreciably obviated. JOSEPH LEWIS.

Statement by Nathan Straus.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An article which recently appeared in the public press and has created much comment purported to give a list of the very rich men of this country, and my name was erroneously included in that list.

During my whole life I have maintained that wealth, whether moderate or great, creates an obligation upon the holder to use it for the benefit of mankind, and I have lived up to this obligation myself even beyond what I felt was just to myself and my family. I have tried to do all the good I could possibly do myself and by my example to inspire others of greater means to use their wealth and influence as freely as I do mine for humanity rather than for themselves. I regret that my fortune is only moderate and that I am not a man of large wealth, only because large wealth would enable me to give more. Others measure my fortune by what I give—I give what I can and not merely in proportion to what others who could do more are giving. I would be ashamed to adopt such a standard. I would be ashamed to give what I now give if I had any considerable part of the wealth which is accredited to me.

"Choose Your Exit."

Today, at a matinee, I attempted to leave the balcony by means of the fire exits and was unable to budge either door.

Both doors had heavy bolts and bars and even if they were not locked it is certain that no one in the audience could have succeeded in opening them. It would have needed the services of an usher.

The house was crowded and every seat in the balcony apparently filled. There were no printed programs, but I saw some slips stating "On being seated look about and choose your exit"—words which under the circumstances had an ironic, somewhat grim, suggestiveness.

I hope others will make it a habit to try fire exits. It is amazing how many are found locked.

MY LITTLE FLOWER.

So long I waited for your little hands
To hold my lonely heart with giving hands;
A World that filled with flowers seemed to be

So long I waited that beneath my smile
A misery was hidden for a while;
A misery whose shadow softly lies
Within the wistful beauty of your eyes.

So long!—and now the days are all too swift
While you are here—and yet some dearer gift,
Perhaps, I gave to you of charm, or song,
Or greater soul—because I waited long.

"CHARMING PERSONALITIES."

Thinks Well of Harding and Hughes in Conference.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In all the splendid articles which have been appearing in your paper from time to time in connection with the conference, I have not noticed any which touch on the charming personalities of our President and Secretary of State, and the effect their attitude has had on the conference.

It seems to me that the outstanding characteristics of the conference have been its urbanity, its serenity, its patience. All these things reflect the qualities of our President. He is so honest, direct and human that he inspires trust in all who meet him. He radiates a positive and active quality of the spirit that generates in others an inspiration to good works.

Mr. Hughes, too, contributed in no small part to the success of the conference proceedings. His intellectual powers were never more brilliantly utilized nor his skill as an advocate displayed to better advantage. But in his case, as in Mr. Harding's, the finest part of the performance was its exhibition of a sound character and of the profound influence which character in one man wields over the actions of other men.

The representatives from other countries seemed to feel the spirit of good-will which pervaded the whole conference, and this feeling went a long way toward banishing old fears and suspicions.

The results gained from the conference might have been far from satisfactory if, as in our former Administration, the political news from Washington had been expressed in the vocabulary of ultimatums, of minimum demands and maximum demands, of strong reservations, weak reservations and no reservations.

While at this time it would be rash to forecast that all danger in the Far East has been removed, yet at the least all apparent danger has been eliminated, and the mutual misunderstandings and apprehensions of the United States and Japan have been enormously reduced if they have not been finally banished.

These splendid results show what can be accomplished when we have men representing us in Washington who are calm and impersonal; who do not fall into pride of their own opinion, but think of the common good of all.

PROPAGANDA.

Advocates Publicity in Japan Against Japanese Militarism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If, twenty years ago, any nation or several nations had had it in their power to discredit the German militaristic junkers in the eyes of the German people, can any one estimate the futile sacrifices and retarded progress that the German people might have avoided?

If the militaristic Japanese junkers of today could be discredited in the eyes of the Japanese people before they attain the degree of influence that the Prussians had, can any one estimate the service that the world would be rendering to the future generations of Japan? Whenever a group of militarists goes too far, the principle of "balance of power" swings into force and down they go. But their own people suffer for their acts, even more than the rest of the world.

The friends of China who argue that Japan's policy of militaristic conquest is unjust to the Chinese tell only half the story. It is even more unjust to the Japanese, for it will use the Japanese people, their art and their civilization for its own evil ends.

The so-called friends of Japan who aver that she should be allowed to follow her own methods, because she needs the resources and territory of China, are not her friends, but her enemies. They would sacrifice the ultimate opportunity of the Japanese nation to achieve an enviable position in the industrial world, and for what? Merely to further the immediate interests of a small group of self-centred militarists. Japan is entitled to take every advantage of the resources and trade of China, but let her do it on a square, industrial basis, independent of her martial lords.

There will never be a better opportunity than now to impress upon the Japanese people, and upon those military gentlemen themselves, the fact that the world is through with Prussianism, Western and Eastern as well.

Proud of Army and Navy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In a recent issue of your estimable paper a Donald Gates takes advantage of the opportunity offered by the somewhat rash statement of an officer of the Naval Reserve to express a poorly conceived rancor against military and naval officers in general. His reference to the existence of "military authorities in peacetime," and to "him and his crowd" seem to indicate that, for some undivulged reason, he harbors a sorrowful distaste of anything pertaining to the military service.

I am not in a position to know the facts concerning the Jacob Riis Park question, although it seems to me that in all probability it would be of greater benefit to the possession of the people of New York than of the Navy Department. Certainly the quoted statement of the Reserve officer was ill-advised. But Mr. Gates exhibits a rather childish petulance, hardly deserving of a reply, in his stirring allusions to men who are doing sincere and self-sacrificing work in the service of their country.

It does not seem necessary to mention the fact that he and millions of his fellow-countrymen would not be enjoying the unequaled privileges of this great nation of ours were it not for the unappreciated presence of the military authorities in peacetime.

War, deplorable as it is, does not promise to be a relic of the past, and should it come I venture to say that Mr. Gates and his ilk will be glad of the existence of at least a skeleton army and navy.

I happen to have a rather wide acquaintance in the service, and, although army and navy officers are no more paragons of virtue than are the members of other professions, all I believe to be very proud of them as fine representatives and defenders of our country's honor. D. C. WILDER.

The "Triplets."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Anti-Saloon League is making a great noise over three bills introduced in the Legislature, which it vulgarly calls the "triplets." These bills provide, it is claimed, for local enforcement of prohibition in cities, towns and villages. As we already have two complete laws, the Volstead act and the Mullan-Gage act, in full force and effect in every city, town and village of the State and covering every phase of prohibition enforcement, the proposed measures seemed to me to be superfluous and I took the trouble to examine them. The joker is in the last sentence of each bill. It is a provision that Courts of Special Sessions shall have exclusive jurisdiction of all alleged violations. In simple language this means that the cases are to be tried without a jury.

The only object of these bills, therefore, is to deprive defendants of the right to a jury trial. The bills have no other logical should for being. In the literature which the league is handing out to the press, the public and the public, the real purpose of the bills is carefully concealed. How long, we wonder, will the public put up with this chicanery? M. G. F.

WATER PROBLEM.

Suggests "Ozone Method" of Purification.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The attention of the public and of the authorities should be directed to a permanent solution of the water problem which confronts New York City at this time. The presence in the water of single cellular forms which cause unpleasant tastes can occur at most any time, and it is by no means impossible that dangerous pollution might find its way into our water supply considering the enormous area drained by the New York watershed and the numerous potential sources of pollution which exist in the territory drained by the supply.

The presence in the water system of certain unicellular organisms producing disagreeable tasts may be distressing and for that reason alone worthy of action directed to their elimination. The presence of pathogenic bacteria, on the other hand, would entail a serious problem for New York, attended by most painful consequences.

It is true that New York City water is now subjected to chlorination at the Kensico reservoir, which operates to minimize the danger from infection. It should be pointed out, however, that while chlorine is a powerful chemical capable of destroying bacteria it can be used only in minimum quantities owing to the unpleasant taste and odor it produces. In a water containing a large amount of organic matter the use of chlorine becomes impractical owing to the unpleasant taste it produces. It was for this reason, indeed, that the writer, experimenting at the research laboratory of the New York Department of Health, attempted to utilize other well-known methods of water purification and adapt them to swimming pool purification. In swimming pools the pollution is apt to be very great and automatic methods of controlling the pollution are requisite. After a number of years of experimentation, an ozone process was adapted for swimming pools, a process that has stood the test of time and has proved itself the best method so far introduced for swimming pool purification.

In water purification the ozone method has proved itself long since, being the sole method of purification in many large European cities. In Paris, for example, it is used extensively and has competed successfully against every other system of water purification.

Ozone is a gas which is not soluble in water and for that reason can be used in maximum quantities, and it is that respect is absolutely opposite to its application to that of chlorine. There is no limit to the quantity of ozone that can be applied, since it is insoluble in water and does not remain in the water after application. Ozone will oxidize the organic matter in water and thereby completely remove odors, tastes, colors as well as bacteria and protozoa. It is, indeed, the only safe method of oxidation that can be used for intensive oxidation of a drinking water.

The installation of the necessary equipment for operating a large water supply is comparatively inexpensive, and the cost of operation is low, especially where hydroelectric power is available. The ozone process is very flexible, and proved both in swimming pool purification plants and in large water systems where special emergencies must be met. As in the present crisis in the water system, large amounts of ozone could be introduced into the water, completely destroying the disagreeable taste. After the emergency is passed, the normal application could be reverted to without the necessity of any unusual procedure.

In the case of any pathogenic contamination of the supply, the ozone process could be relied on to effectually protect the public. Ozone would improve the water at all times and render our system the finest in the world.

It should not be too much to expect our great city to make the necessary expenditures which will pave for all safeguard our water supply from emergencies such as the present or dangers far greater which might occur in the future.

The Sullivan Law.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In some of the morning papers District Attorney Jack H. Banks states that one of the first acts of the conference of District Attorneys at Albany day before yesterday was to form an association and get behind the bill now before the Senate Judiciary Committee which has for its purpose the regulation of interstate shipments of firearms. "Years ago," says Mr. Banks, "it was recognized that the sale of firearms was a great cause of crime." When it originated, the Sullivan law was a good thing, and until the war broke out it was a great benefit to criminals. In recent years it has been a great benefit to criminals. It deters an criminal from carrying a revolver, but it does deter honest men from providing themselves with at least a measure of protection against the gun-totters.

Under the circumstances, there is only one thing to do with the Sullivan law, and that is to wipe it off the statute books, amending by at the earliest possible moment. This would give every honest man his rightful chance to learn how to shoot in self-defense and to carry the means with which to do it. In every city schools for the teaching of self-defense should be established and boys and families should be regularly instructed in the management and use of portable firearms.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I see that the Rev. Dr. Slattery suggests social ostracism for offenders against the eighteen commandments of society.

Well and good. But in what world will differ from the dozen of those under lock and porary or permanent fiscal embarrassment. As the Chinese say to the missionary, "We must love our enemies, what is left of our friends."

I know whereof I speak, for at 65 I earned age I find myself, through no fault of my own, a "one-horse" man, through no fault, but from a "one-horse" and the enforcement of those who would impose ostracism for this category without a bit of it is not only amusing but painful.

100 COLLEGES HELP IN WILSON DRIVE

WOMEN'S SCHOOLS AIDING

More Than 2,000 Voluntary Contributions Received to Date by Mail —Entire Faculties Pledged

More than 100 colleges have organized committees among Faculty and students for gathering the $1,000,000 fund to establish annual prizes for public service in honor of Woodrow Wilson. Stephen P. Duggan, of the College of the City of New York, is chairman of the Educational Committee of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation promoting these schools.

At Yale committees have been formed in every graduate and undergraduate school. The Connecticut campaign is being directed by Professor Irving Fisher and Professor Ray Westerfield of Yale. The Harvard committee is headed by Professor Ernest Hocking of the Department of Philosophy.

Dean Henry S. Fine is to inaugurate the movement at Princeton after the mid-year examinations, but large numbers of subscriptions have already been made by the student body in tribute to Princeton's former President. The clubs at Princeton will aid in the work there. At Johns Hopkins the movement is being directed by Dr. John H. Latane. President E. A. Alderman is Chairman of the committee at the University of Virginia, and also a member of the national Board of Trustees of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation. At the University of Chicago the movement is directed by William R. Dodd.

President F. L. McVey has reported to the University of Kentucky overscribed its quota within twenty-four hours after the opening of the campaign. The University of the South also reported that its quota had been oversubscribed by 25 per cent. Haverford has sent in subscriptions for its entire faculty. A large sum has been contributed at the University of Oklahoma. Women's colleges are also entering the movement. Committees have been formed at Radcliffe, Smith, Vassar, Wellesley, Goucher, Mount Holyoke and Bryn Mawr. Dr. Duggan said that it was not planned to raise large sums in the colleges, but rather to gain wide interest in small subscriptions.

At national headquarters of the Foundation, 150 Nassau Street, it was announced yesterday that more than 2,000 subscriptions had come in by mail without personal solicitation.

Among the early contributors yesterday were Edmund L. Bayles, $100; Robert S. Bobo, $100; F. M. H. Dalley, $100; Joseph A. Kellogg, $100; Charles F. Rollstede, $100; Cornelius A. Pugsley, $100; and Isaac M. Turner, $100. Other contributors were:

Margaret R. Ayer, Jr., Mrs. Joseph F. Bloom, Mary E. Bolton, Cornelius A. Bowley, T. M. Laura B. Morris H. Paul D. Ruth Sampson, Rev. W. F. Mrs. W. F. Bewley, C. B. John A. Grace, Harry A. Edward and Mrs. J. Gertrude L. Harriet Mary E. William T. Herbert M. Mrs. M. Alice E. Howard S. MacKellar, George M. MacKellar, Helene S. Malone, Peter. Mawson, Charlotte M. Mazon, Edward. Maxon, Marie. McKeon, Josephine L. McRae, Frances. Mendelson, Dr. and Mrs. Walter. Meyer, Carl H. Platt, Joseph. Radley, John J. Remers, Leonia F. Rewley, C. B. Shepard, Ella B. Sitne, M. D. Stockwell, Mrs. L. C. Strahlin, Joseph N. Vail, Mrs. H. C. Van Raalte, A. Wakeman, Samuel S. Walburn, Hattie B. Wasson, E. K. Weaver, Mrs. E. L. Weltman, Mrs. White, J. A. Willard, Jennie. Zeda, August.

Hugo F. Wohlhagen, a son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Wohlhagen of Montclair, N. J., and Miss Hazel M. Muth, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Muth of 409 West 129th Street, this city, were married yesterday in St. Andrew's Church, 127th Street and Fifth Avenue, by the Rev. Dr. Riebould. The Misses Anna Phelan and Lillian Nicolaus, classmates at Hunter College of the bride, were the bridesmaids. Miss Muriel E. Muth was the maid of honor and little Miss May G. Muth was the flower girl. H. E. Crounse was the best man. A breakfast and a reception followed at the McAlpin.

Tschirky—Hiltebrandt.

The marriage of August Tschirky, the younger son of Oscar Tschirky, maître d'hôtel of the Waldorf-Astoria for the last twenty-eight years, and Miss Elsa Hiltebrandt, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hiltebrandt of Kingston, N. Y., took place last Saturday in the English Lutheran Church of the Redeemer at Kingston. The Rev. William T. Nelsen, pastor of the church, officiated.

Lichtenstadter—Belgard.

The marriage of Miss Birdie Lichtenstadter and Isaac J. Belgard of this city took place last Sunday at the home of the bride's brother, Isaac Lichtenstadter, at 725 Riverside Drive. The Rev. Dr. Aaron Eiseman officiated. The wedding was to have taken place on Jan. 15, but was postponed on account of illness. Mr. and Mrs. Belgard will make their home in this city.

Legg is Chairman of the committee in charge, which includes Mrs. Oren Root, Mrs. G. A. Hurd, Mrs. Newell W. Tilton, Mrs. Julius F. Workum, Mrs. Henry E. Meeker and Mrs. John Byers Holbrook.

HEAR BORIS WILL WED PRINCESS YOLANDA

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—A dispatch from Rome quotes the Sofia newspapers for the report that the betrothal will be announced shortly of Princess Yolanda of Italy to King Boris of the Bulgars.

For religious as well as political reasons, a confirmation of the story from Sofia that Princess Yolanda of Italy is to marry King Boris of the Bulgars will arouse divided opinion in Italy. In Bulgaria it might strengthen the position of the dynasty and the Government, the latter of which finds it extremely difficult to maintain its prestige in the council of nations, with its good faith constantly questioned by Jugoslavia, Rumania and Greece.

Princess Yolanda, the eldest daughter of King Victor Emanuel III. and Queen Helena (daughter of the late King Nicholas of Montenegro), was born at the Quirinal, June 1, 1901, and is a Roman Catholic. King Boris III. was born Jan. 30, 1894, and is the eldest son of the former King, or Czar, Ferdinand, who abdicated Oct. 4, 1918, and was last heard of in Vienna. Boris was christened in the Roman Catholic faith, but two years after his birth, owing to Russian influence, he was received into the Bulgarian congregation of the Greek Orthodox faith. On his father's side he is the great-grandson of King Louis Philippe of the House of Bourbon-Orléans, who reigned in France from 1830 to 1848, and on his mother's side he is a nephew of the former Empress Zita of Austria.

So dynastically Italy had never been sympathetically inclined toward Bulgaria. Since the end of the war, however, and the abdication of Ferdinand, Italy has manoeuvred for a position in the Balkans which should counteract both the influences of France, exercised through the "Little Entente," and of the new State of Jugoslavia. Thus there have been the dynastic phases of these influences, illustrated by the marriage a year ago of the Crown Prince of Rumania to a Greek Princess and the marriage of her brother, the Duke of Sparta, Crown Prince of Greece, to her sister-in-law, and a few weeks ago the announcement of the engagement of King Alexander of Jugoslavia to a sister of the Crown Prince of Rumania.

East Side Music School Benefit.

The music school of the East Side House Settlement, which is under the management of David Mannes, will give a benefit performance in the grand ballroom of the Plaza next Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Madelaine du Carp will be the pianist, and Rafaele Diaz will sing. Donald Brain is to give some sketches. The school comes in touch with the children of more than twelve nationalities, and has a wide influence in bringing these children into close relation with American ideals and standards. Tickets for the benefit may be had of the Plaza.

FRENCH MODERNISTS' ART READILY SOLD

That there is a demand in this country for the work of modern French artists known as extremists was shown at the opening sale of the collection of French pictures belonging to Dikran Khan Kélékian, under the auspices of the American Art Association, at the Hotel Plaza last evening. Eighty pictures brought returns of $38,765 and many of them were pencil sketches and very small. There was a good audience, which included many dealers and well known people, but was, as a whole, of a different class from that brought out by the Plaza art sales Greenwich Village was apparently well represented.

What the result of the sale would be every one had been in doubt. It was the first of its kind in this country.

"You must make your bids," said Thomas E. Kirby, from the auctioneer's bench, putting up the first picture, "we have no previous records to go upon in this sale."

The feeling for the pictures was shown in an interesting way in two of the sales made. A portrait of a woman in an armchair, No. 65, by Henri Matisse, the modernist, a strong-featured woman, with sinuous black ringlets, in an orange chair against a green background, having the appearance of an exaggerated houri of some Eastern tale, but much less lovely sold for $1,125, while the next picture, with a similar subject, a pretty young woman, seated, No. 66, by Mary Cassatt, American living in Paris, well known and well liked here, sold for only $1,000. Both went to galleries, the former to the Bourgeois and the second to the Ferargil. Another portrait by Matisse, No. 27, brought a burst of laughter when it was put up. It was a small picture, a little girl with red hair, a green-and-black frock, orange bow on her hair, painted against a brilliant green background. The portrait had most characteristics of the work of a child on her slate, but it started at $100 and went up to $300. Arnoled Gentha was the purchaser.

A distinctly cubist picture, by Picasso, No. 4, Little Still Life," No. 53, brought $450, going to Arthur B. Davies, the artist, one American artist well represented in the sale. Careful examination of the "Still Life" might discover in it either fruit or game scene—there looked in one part to be a bird's head and a basket—or a collection of Chinese porcelain, there being something in it having the appearance of a vase. The writer of the catalogue, having no guide but his eye, described it as "a confused mass of geometrical forms of very definite, but erratic, outlines."

There were many beautiful things in the sale and others which, while quite negroid, seemed to bring prices out of proportion to their beauty. A water-color, by Cazanne, No. 31, "Geranium," was simply a flourishing geranium with green leaves, not even a blossom, as some one said, in a light-toned flower pot against a buff background. It was a small picture, altogether about the size of a small pot of geraniums—13½ inches tall by 9½ inches wide. It brought $650 and went to the Fearon Galleries. There is little intrinsic value to a picture—its value is the skill of the artist and his appeal to the people. Sixty hundred and fifty dollars would have bought a large garden of geraniums, but the sale of the picture shows that the work of the French modern artists appeals to Americans.

Of the higher prices given, the Metropolitan Museum of Art gave the best of the evening, $2,700, for No. 53, "a marine by Gustave Courbet, "La Mer," a picture which was shown at the Museum in its Courbet exhibit in 1919. No. 10, a charming 9 by 7 inch lead pencil portrait of Paganini by Ingres, went to the Fearon Galleries for $1,300, and another seven ounce charming portrait of Berlioz, in lead pencil, small, only 7 inches by 5½, by the same artist, went to P. W. French & Co., $1,950. A small and delicate painting by Renoir, "Roses," 10½ inches by 8½, sold to the Durand-Ruel Galleries for $1,625. A Corot portrait, "The Little Seraphine," went to a buyer giving the name of Pendergast for $1,800. Durand-Ruel paid the second highest price of the evening, $2,000, for a softly toned Pissarro, "The Seine at Rouen," No. 63.

Included with the French pictures was a large group of the interesting work of Arthur B. Davies, largely sketches. For one of the more important of these, "The Summit Thicket," a study in nudes, Bernet, agent, paid $1,500.

There has been an exceptionally large attendance at the American Galleries during the exhibition of the pictures, an average of 1,000 a day, and an unusual group, including many artists and many children of artists, little people having an extraordinary interest in the pictures they saw.

Brilliant in the splendor of Oriental color and rich in the deep blue of Palestine nights are the paintings of the interpretation of the "Song of Solomon," by Claggett Wilson, shown in the second-floor drawing rooms of Chamberlain Dodds, 28 East Fifty-second Street, at Madison Avenue, the exhibition of which opened yesterday. The private view of the paintings was given Sunday evening, when a large number of well-known people were present. Many of these repeated their visit yesterday, and already two of the paintings have been sold. There are only twenty in all, not including a small framed head, loaned by Adolph Lewisohn.

Mr. Wilson's inspiration for the paintings came to him one wakeful night, he says, when, reading the "Song of Solomon," he was thrilled by its picturesque imagery and immediately set about fixing in concrete form the visions which filled his mind. He has used the "Song" not in its symbolic significance but as a Jewish idyl of love, written in a high key and with all the Oriental splendor of color at his command. Each picture is an individual study in color.

Verses of the "Song" are used as titles for the pictures. "Thou art beautiful, O my love, as Tirzah, comely as Jerusalem, terrible as an army with banners," Mr. Wilson illustrates with a fair young form reclining upon cloud-like effects in orange and soft violet. "My beloved is like a young roe or a young hart" drops into a minor tone, a soft iridescence in landscape. "Awake, O north wind, and come thou south; blow upon my garden, that the spices thereof may flow out," is again in a totally different key, a garden, moonlight and deep rich blue.

Among the visitors Sunday night and yesterday were Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Carpenter, Miss Elsie de Wolfe, M. Maurice Dambois, Miss Marie Doro, George B. Ford, Adolph Lewisohn, Miss Anne Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Rossin and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt.

MRS. VANDERBILT HOSTESS AT DANCE

Mrs. Vanderbilt entertained last evening with a dance at her town house, 2 West Fifty-eighth Street, the guests including many of her older friends, young married people and a number of the debutantes. Several dinners preceded the dance, the largest of which had Mrs. Vanderbilt's daughter, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, as its hostess. It was one of 75 covers in the old W. C. Whitney house at Fifth Avenue and Sixty-eighth Street.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. George D. Widener, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Strawbridge of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. John Russell Pope, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Iselin, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, 2d, the Misses Elizabeth Kountze, Adele Hammond, Joan Whitney, Shiela Burden, Florence Lowe, Eunice James, Jane Sanford, Shiela Byrne, Dorothy Duncan, Barbara Murray, Ellin Mackay, Iris Cutting, Mabel Gerry, Mary Hoyt Wilborg, Hu Carey Morgan and D. O'Donnell Iselin.

Other guests at the dance were Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Hammond, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Osgood Field, Mr. and Mrs. Henry White, Mrs. H. McK. Twombly, Mrs. W. A. M. Burden, Miss Ruth Twombly, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Burden, the Misses Emily Hammond, Muriel Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. W. De Lancy Kountze, the Count and Countess Szechenyi.

Dance Aids Blue Ridge School.

The annual dance for the benefit of the Blue Ridge School in Greene County, Va., took place last night in the Della Robbia room at the Vanderbilt. Members of the committee arranging it were the Princess Pierre Troubetskoy, Mrs. H. Snowden Marshall, Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Mrs. James Brown Potter and Mrs. Buchanan Schley. Mrs. George Gordon Battle was its secretary. There was a large attendance.

CAPT. JOHN PRITCHARD DEAD

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The death is announced of the famous Atlantic seaman, Captain John Pritchard, ex-Commodore of the Cunard fleet. He commanded no fewer than fourteen big Cunarders. As captain of the Caronia he took soundings of Ambrose Channel at the entrance to New York Harbor and this channel was officially opened by him.

COLGATE HOYT DIES IN OYSTER BAY HOME

Colgate Hoyt, senior member of the Stock Exchange house of Colgate Hoyt & Co., died at 1 o'clock yesterday morning at his country home, Centre Island, Oyster Bay, L. I., having been ill since New Year's Day with a complication of ailments. At the bedside were his wife and four children of an earlier marriage: Colgate Jr., Charles Sherman, Anne Sherman, and Elizabeth Sherman Hoyt, all residents of this city.

Funeral services will be held at the Centre Island home at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning and will be conducted by the Rev. Dr. C. Woelfkin, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, of which Mr. Hoyt was for many years a Trustee. On Thursday the body will be taken to Cleveland for burial, when Bishop Leonard of the Baptist Church will officiate.

The honorary pallbearers at the services tomorrow will be Judge E. H. Gary, Charles M. Schwab, Ralph Peters, Frank D. Underwood, John D. Rockefeller Jr., Dr. Walter Lambert, Austin B. Fletcher, George Bullock, W. H. Nichols Jr., Franklin Remington, Nicholas F. Brady, L. R. Lemoine and Dr. Leland E. Cofer. Special cars will be attached to the train leaving the Pennsylvania Station tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

Colgate Hoyt was born in Cleveland March 2, 1849, a descendant of Simon Hoyt, who landed in Massachusetts in 1628 and settled at Windsor, Conn.

In 1881 he came to New York and became associated with Colgate & Co., thereafter maintaining for many years an increasingly important position in the affairs of Wall Street and railroad transportation. After two years as Government director of the Union Pacific and two years as company director he resigned when Charles Francis Adams took the Presidency of the road. He had served on the Executive and Financial committees of the Northern Pacific, was Vice President of the North American Company for several years, also a Trustee of the Wisconsin Central. He helped reorganize the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, for a time holding the First Vice Presidency.

The organizations of which he was formerly President are of much or little present importance to his direction: the Ohio Society of New York, which gave a dinner in his honor three years ago, and the Automobile Club of America, which erected the present clubhouse in Fifty-fourth Street in his régime. His other clubs included the Union League, Metropolitan, Piping Rock, and New York Yacht. He was also interested in Brown University, where he built a large swimming pool.

Mr. Hoyt's first wife, whom he married in 1873, was Lida W. Sherman of Cleveland, daughter of Judge Charles T. Sherman and niece of General W. T. Sherman. She died in 1906 of injuries received when struck by a swinging door in a hotel in Richmond, Va. On July 20, 1912, he married Mrs. Katharine Sharp Cheesman, a widow, of 19 East Fifty-seventh Street, daughter of the late Judge Sharp of San Francisco.

SOLON H. BORGLUM DIES AFTER OPERATION

Solon H. Borglum, head of the school of sculpture of his name in this city, and brother of Gutzon Borglum, also a sculptor, died at 7 o'clock last night in the Stamford (Conn.) Hospital, following an operation for appendicitis performed Saturday night. The operation was decided upon after a sudden seizure that morning in his residence in Cove Canaan, near Stamford. It is believed that his power of resistance was fatally lowered by the two gas wounds he received in the war.

Mr. Borglum received the Croix de Guerre for his work with the Foyer du Soldat, the citation stating he "did not cease for several months to organize foyers directly back of the first line and even in bombarded villages, showing the soul of an apostle." Only his age of fifty years at the time had prevented his enlisting as a soldier.

Mr. Borglum was born at Ogden, Utah, Dec. 22, 1868, and lived for years with cowboys and Indians, studying American frontier life. His greatest achievements as an artist were in this field, particularly his group of Indians and bronchos. He had also a thorough preparation abroad and won honorable mention at the Paris Salon of 1890 and at the exposition of 1900.

Among a score of works in various parts of this country may be mentioned the statue of "The Pioneer" at the San Francisco Exposition of 1915 and the five colossal portrait busts of Civil War Generals in the Vicksburg National Park. Surviving are his wife, who was Miss Emma Vignal of Paris, a daughter, Monica, and a son, Paul, who arrived at Stamford from Dartmouth College too late to see his father alive.

Strapless Knickerbockers.

A golf knicker just introduced has a knitted cuff which holds the trouser legs over the knee. No straps, buckles or buttons are required for the purpose and there is, therefore, no binding. The name has been registered. The knickerbockers are made of linen, homespuns, tweeds and lightweight fabrics. Buyers are said to have taken hold of the new idea and believe it has good possibilities because of the comfort feature.

Cotton Drop Hit Gray Goods.

Although a fair amount of business was transacted in the local gray goods market yesterday morning, the drop in cotton put an effective check on trading later on. Some business was transacted in printcloths on the basis of 9¼ cents for 39-inch 68-72s, and there were also some limited sheetings sales on the basis of 9¼ cents for four-yard 56-60s. Fine-yarn goods and specialties were quiet and featureless.

More Call for "Shot" Hosiery.

An increasing demand is reported here for mottled or "shot" effects in women's high-grade silk hosiery for wear with Spring sports togs. The goods most affected by this demand run in price from $6 a pair at retail for plains to $7 a pair for "clocks." Several new color combinations in these goods are offered here by a well-known concern, including gray and gold, white and green, royal blue and gold, and royal blue and gray. These are in addition to combinations which have previously been put on the market.

Popular Prices Rule.

In women's ready-to-wear the manufacturers find buyers intent upon the purchase of popular-priced goods. Even those stores which have previously favored the higher values are now increasing the proportion of their orders on the medium class of merchandise. In response to this tendency quite a few of the manufacturers of the high-priced lines have included some popular numbers, and they have found this decidedly to their advantage. Competition is said to be keener than ever among all the garment houses. Styles have increased in importance, it is said, but price continues to be the chief factor.

Silks Held Back.

The price uncertainty which exists in the raw material market has caused a cessation of activity in the silk goods trade until more is known of future values. Some manufacturers decry the effects which have followed the criticism of raw silk prices. They believe that, if the matter had been given less attention, the trade as a whole would be much better off. As it is, buyers took hold a while back, but now appear to have let go again. Loom occupation at Paterson has grown less and hovers around 56 per cent. The attitude of buyers is that they may take up other fabrics in which there is less price uncertainty.

Twills Find Favor.

A good deal more activity has been noted by dress goods factors in the demand for fine twills. These fabrics are required for manufacture into the better class of garments. A factor held responsible for this new interest is said to be the growing tendency among garment manufacturers to consider that tweeds are too competitive. The latter materials take very little trimming and, according to the manufacturers, are largely a "price proposition," on which the smaller houses and jobbers excel. The better class of manufacturers is, therefore, rather skeptical of the future in tweeds and is showing a preference for less competitive lines.

Put Size Chart in Window.

One of a well-known chain of shoe stores has adopted a simple means of making known to prospective customers the amount of stock of a certain nature it is offering at special prices. This is done by means of a size chart, which is displayed in a show window and which gives not only the lengths and widths of the lot being offered, but the number of pairs as well. The chart seen yesterday gave information concerning a special lot of interest to men with big feet. Its purpose apparently was to save time for busy men by letting them see at a glance whether or not their sizes were included in the offering.

Wages and Clothing Prices.

According to a clothing salesman just returned from the road, wages paid in different sections of the country constitute the most important factor to be considered. Merchants are keeping a sharp eye on the earnings of their customers, and require merchandise values in keeping with the estimate of the purchasing power of their trade. "It is useless," said this salesman, "to argue the high cost of manufacturing with a retailer who knows just how much his customers are prepared to spend on new clothing. In certain sections the wages for unskilled labor have declined to 25 and 30 cents an hour. The man with only $15 in his pay envelope is not going to spend $40 on a suit, though that might have been the price he paid a year ago when he was earning $30 a week."

Black and White Hats Returning.

Elaborate preparations are being made in the local millinery trade to meet the return to vogue for black and white effects that is so widely predicted. Prominent among the materials used in the leading lines are milan braids in both dull and shiny effects. Hemp and haircloth also are made use of for the same combination. Most of the trimmings are of the tailored variety, with ribbon playing a prominent part. Both belting and satin lacquered ribbons are employed, being twisted into fans and cockades or tied in wide-spread bows. Black and white striped ribbons, naturally, are much in vogue for the purpose. Other trimmings consist of highly lacquered cherries, wings, birds, feather fancies and pompoms.

Are They Having Reverse Effects?

The question was raised here yesterday as to whether or not the numerous sales that have been put on by the retail trade, in the hope of stimulating business, are not having the reverse effect. According to one trade authority, there has never been a time when the public has done as much shopping, with as little actual buying, as at the present time. He asserted it is because the prevalence of markdowns has destroyed consumers' ideas of values and has made them afraid to buy because they feel they may do still better by waiting. "If a woman sees a pair of shoes marked down to $9.50 in one store, an apparently similar pair at $7.50 in another and a third pair at $6.50 in a third store," this man said yesterday, "she naturally expects to find a fourth store offering them at $4.50. Consequently she does not 'buy' until she does or, failing to find them, she does not buy at all. The same thing is true of the average man, and will continue so until some stable price basis is reached."

FACTORY HELP EARN MORE.

December Weekly Averages 59 Cents Above 1920.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 30.—Improved business conditions as well as reasonable activity were seen in the increase of 59 cents in the average weekly earnings of New York State factory workers from November to December, State Industrial Commissioner Henry D. Sayer announced today. Reports from 1,046 representative manufacturing plants were taken in compiling the average.

The average weekly earnings of factory workers in the State in December last were $24.01, or 12 per cent. less than the average of the preceding December. The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics reported it was said, that the cost of living in both Buffalo and New York City from December, 1920, to December, 1921, declined 12 per cent. It would appear, therefore, the Commissioner said, that factory workers during the year lost through unemployment rather than reduced earnings, as factory payrolls in the aggregate were nearly 28 per cent. lower in 1921 than in 1920.

E. C. BENEDICT'S ESTATE.

An appraisal of the New York estate of Commodore E. C. Benedict, who died a resident of Greenwich, Conn., on Nov. 23, 1920, was filed here yesterday showing that he left only a New York Stock Exchange seat worth $96,000 which is taxable here. The total personal estate is $3,913,043.

Commodore Benedict gave $100,000 each to the Ophthalmic and Flower Hospitals in New York, and the Greenwich Hospital. He left from $500 to $1,000 each to family servants, and divided the residuary estate among his daughters, Martha B. Turnbull, Helen B. Hastings and Louise B. Harmon.

A Selling Argument That Crowds Our Showrooms

PRICE

Backed by STYLE & QUALITY

—First we design a clever style.
—Then we use a good, staple, dependable fabric.
—Then we tailor it, trim it, finish it, examine it and pass on it to make sure it is perfect.
—AND PRODUCE IT IN BIG VOLUME
—at the lowest possible production cost
—and at minimum profit.

SUITS, COATS & CAPES

—the greatest VALUES in the market.
—That's what crowds our showrooms.

FOR A PERMANENT EXHIBIT.

To Follow the Present Temporary One for Ready-to-Wear.

Following the present exhibition of ready-to-wear for wholesale buyers at the Hotel Imperial, it was stated yesterday by officials of the National Retail Merchants and Buyers' Association that a permanent exhibit of ready-to-wear samples will be installed at the hotel. This exposition will be opened on March 13, after the Toy Fair is concluded. The present ready-to-wear show indicates, according to an association representative, that buying is confined largely to the popular priced lines.

"Silk underwear might be put down as a leader in the orders received here," said an official yesterday, "and waists, house dresses and silk sweaters follow. The system used in the exhibition is to have a sample or two from each line displayed in the Red Room so that the buyer can take in everything at a glance. If a fuller showing is desired, the buyer visits the separate display room of the manufacturer and sees the entire line. The association comprises 3,500 merchants and buyers, and courtesy cards to the exhibition have been issued to 3,000 others.

"The present exhibition will be followed by the sixth annual Toy Fair. In 1920 we hung up the enviable record of receiving $8,000,000 worth of orders. The permanent ready-to-wear exhibit is to be installed right after the Toy Fair. We will have only samples of the latest style merchandise in the different booths, and prizes will be offered for the best display each month in order to stimulate manufacturers to include their finest designs. The Red Room will be used for this purpose and, while there will be competent salespeople in charge, no selling will be done. We do intend, however, to feature job offerings by having manufacturers who advertise such merchandise mention that samples are displayed here. If the buyer wishes to purchase these jobs or part of them, his reservation will be telephoned to the wholesale house. This will save buyers a good deal of time and trouble in visiting crowded showrooms and perhaps not finding just what they want."

E. M. Anderson Estate Sale Opens.

Pieces of old English silver were the first numbers of the sale of the estate of Elizabeth Milbank Anderson which opened yesterday at the American Art Galleries and which is largely composed of antique Chinese porcelains, rugs, &c. A pair of Seventeenth Century silver candlesticks, No. 34, sold to J. S. Bache for $125 and to the same buyer went No. 64, a set of four Georgian silver fruit baskets, for $190. No. 48, a pair of Georgian silver fruit baskets somewhat larger, were bought by Harry Gleaby for $220. Auguste Hutchins paid $180 for a 1771 Georgian silver hot-water kettle and to Bache went No. 49, a 1776 silver cake basket, for $145 and the same buyer paid $270 for No. 52, a pair of Georgian silver candelabra. The returns of the day were $7,604. Table linen, textiles and rugs will be sold today.

Achievement
THO success is invariably alluded to in the form of dollars and cents, in reality it is the road "paved with achievement" that leads to success.
AT the time of our inception, we were interested primarily in making our merchandise as fine as it could be made and only secondary were we interested in profits.
THIS honor, integrity and trustworthiness has guided us along the "road of achievement" for a quarter of a century and has ultimately won for us international recognition for supremacy in the Sweater and Knitted Outerwear field. The reputation earned by America's Largest Sweater House for uniformly dependable values and fair pricing, passed on from one merchant customer to another, is a constant spur to co-operative endeavor on our part.
The World's Greatest Assemblage of

A single insertion of a page advertisement of the Kargo Laboratories, Inc. (refrigerating system), in The New York Times produced over 5,000 letter inquiries, mostly of a high-grade type, and some 150 telegrams and several long-distance telephone calls.

This experience was a further evidence to us of the vitality of The Times and big space, when intelligent and influential men are to be reached.

FLU CASES DROP 143; PNEUMONIA KILLS 35

Eight More Deaths From Influenza, but Much Less Fatal Than in 1918-19.

GERMS GO THROUGH STONE

Dr. Cecil Warns to Keep Feet Dry and Call Physician at First Symptoms.

Influenza cases reported yesterday total 332, or 143 fewer than the previous day, when 475 cases were reported, the largest number in any one day since the end of the epidemic of 1918-19.

Eight deaths from influenza and thirty-five from pneumonia were listed. Since the first of this year 2,400 cases and 1,054 deaths from pneumonia have been reported.

In spite of the extreme deadliness of pneumonia, which kills nearly every other person who contracts it, there has been but little call for the vaccine, according to Dr. William H. Park, bacteriologist and vaccine expert of the Health Department. Only forty applications have been made since it was announced that the Health Department was prepared to supply it to all who asked for it.

The mild type of influenza now prevalent does not run into pneumonia, as did the influenza of 1918-19, which killed millions all over the world, because the influenza attack broke down the resistance of the lungs and paved the way for the pneumonia onset.

The ability of the influenza germ to make its way through stone has been shown in experiments in the Rockefeller Institute of this city, where it was found that the virus made its way through a stone filter. This does not mean that the bacillus will pass quickly through an ordinary wall, but that it is so minute that it will pass through the minute air-holes in many types of stone.

Proof of this was obtained by placing liquid containing the influenza virus in the filter and then injecting the filtered product into rabbits. They contracted influenza and died from it. The filtration is done by the so-called Berkfeldt filter, which applies a heavy suction to the outside of the stone container, drawing through water drops and certain infinitely fine organisms.

The virus of poliomyelitis, sleeping sickness, measles and a few other diseases will also pass through stone. The influenza bacillus, however, is so fine that it has been impossible to detect many grades of it, even by the use of microscopes of the highest power.

"The investigations into the 'flu' since the last epidemic have shown that it is spread mainly by talking and sneezing," said Dr. Russell L. Cecil, who has been in charge of the experiments, carried on by the United States Health Service, on monkeys. It can be caught merely by talking to one who is sick or who is a carrier without being sick. It may be possible occasionally to catch it merely by breathing still air where the victim of the disease has been. It may also be contracted occasionally by the touch.

"The situation today is satisfactory," he said. "The clear weather will probably be beneficial in stopping the spread of the disease, and I do not think that the excessive number of pneumonia and influenza cases will continue long. Every one is again warned, however, to keep their feet dry and call a physician if they have any symptoms of the 'flu.'"

TEN OF CREW LOST WHEN THE MOD SANK

Survivors Brought to St. John Tell of Battle With Shifting Cargo in Raging Sea.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Jan. 30.—The story of a grim battle with shifting freight was told today by twenty-three survivors of the crew of the new, electrically-driven Norwegian steamship Mod, which foundered in mid-ocean on Jan. 22.

The survivors were brought into port aboard the steamer Melmore Head, which arrived on the scene just as the Mod gave her last lurch. Captain Waaril, four of his officers, the steward and four firemen were drowned when their lifeboat capsized.

Chief Engineer Peter Iversen said that the cargo first began to shift Jan. 17. Heeling hard to port, the Mod continued to make progress until she turned over on her side Jan. 21, after being hit by a terrific sea. The crew kept her afloat with pumps as long as possible, but were clinging to wreckage when the Melmore Head came to the rescue.

Those who perished with Captain Waaril were First Officer Knudsen, Second Officer Iracsen, Third Officer Hilgieson, Third Engineer Bendikson, Chief Steward Arnson and Firemen Kolsen, Stranstead, Ole Olsen and Solberg.

Chief Engineer Iversen told of the struggles of the crew after the Mod turned on her side on Friday, and said:

"Sunday at noon the Melmore Head have in sight, and at about 3:30 o'clock came as close as possible to us. They launched a boat, and just had three men in it when the Mod suddenly gave a lurch and then pitched over and sank.

"We were all on the deck, and were pitched into the sea. It was just a mass of struggling humanity amid wreckage and freight.

"Some of us secured hold of wreckage and other pieces of freight and kept afloat until picked up by our rescuers. The water was terribly cold, and, in a weakened condition for lack of food, we had a hard time struggling until we were eventually landed safely on the Melmore Head."

NEW HEAD FOR WEST POINT.

General Sladen Will Succeed General MacArthur on June 30.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Brig. Gen. Fred W. Sladen, commanding Fort Sheridan, Illinois, was today appointed Commandant of West Point Military Academy, to succeed Brig. Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

General MacArthur will be relieved next June 30, and assigned to duty in the Philippines.

Little and Big in World-Life

"Click-click," says the telegraph key. It is telling of a new country just born, of a startling buckle on la Parisienne's slipper, of an Emperor imprisoned, of a European Bluebeard's romance, of cabbages and kings.

Now the key doesn't tell you these things. It tells them to the newspaper man, who writes, prints and sells you for as little as two cents, a daily history and view of the world's life.

The eyes through which you see the earth and its men and places and doings are in the pages of your daily paper. Let it be biased or even innocently prejudiced, and your view of world-life becomes blurred and distorted.

A newspaper should be like a clear glass through which your eye sees things as they are.

Among the great achievements of modern times is the human and physical equipment for gathering news. But the real burden of editorial responsibility is to present the moving picture truly. Vividness you want, and lack of tediousness you should demand; but your supreme right is that your newspaper shall exhibit the life of your world as it really is.

To help you to see life steadily and see it whole is the good newspaper man's job.

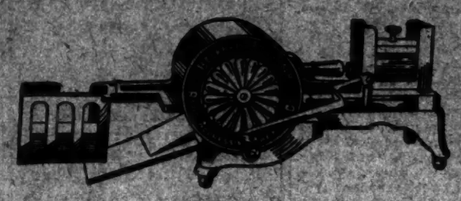
Start Your Addressing System This Way



This is the No. 4 Rotary Belknap Addressor, a hand machine for small businesses. Speed 1,500 to 1,400 per hour.

This is a Belknap 15-Drawer Metal Cabinet in which the Printing Stencils are filed

FOR the business of modest size, or the one whose addressing requirements are limited, a Belknap Hand Addressor and a single filing cabinet will provide the correct start for an efficient addressing system.

We are going out of our way to emphasize this point, because some business men still persist in considering the important subject of Addressing only in terms of large equipments and lists of a million names.

It is not necessary to be a Curtis Publishing Company, or a mail order house like the National Cloak & Suit Company to employ the Belknap System of Addressing profitably.

If the handling of lists and the writing of names on envelopes, wrappers, statements, order forms, shipping tags, tax notices, receipts, etc., is a part of the day's work in your business you need a Belknap System.

More than that you are paying for one, too—continually, unendingly and uselessly—in leaks and losses due to old-fashioned, time-and-money wasting methods that ought to be stopped.

Stop them! If you own a typewriter, and employ a stenographer to operate it, you are half-equipped for a Belknap System. If your business isn't too big, one Belknap Hand Addressor and one filing cabinet as pictured above will round out an efficient system of addressing for you.

And even if your business calls for a larger machine like the Belknap Indexograph, with an addressing speed of 2,000 to 4,000 an hour, you ought to know it and own it. You are paying for it anyhow, and will continue to do so until you install one and it begins to earn its cost times over—and save.

Thousands of concerns in over 250 different lines of business, some big concerns and some small, have applied Belknap Systems to their Addressing problems with economy and success.

One of our expert Service Men will be glad to call and discuss the adaptability of our system to your business—without cost or obligation to you.

Phone Gramercy 6363, or write today for an appointment with one of these men. There's a descriptive book that is yours for the asking, too.

GOMPERS REJECTS RAILWAY TRIBUNAL

Tells Hooper of Labor Board That Project Would Renew Barbaric Conditions.

PENALTIES PLAN DEBATED

Labor Board Member Insists That Mandates Should Be Enforceable.

SAYS ROAD WOULD OBEY

Transportation Act Has Settled 1,222 Disputes in Two Years, Mr. Hooper Declares.

The question of adjudication of railway labor disputes precipitated a lively clash between President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor and Ben W. Hooper, Vice Chairman and public member of the United States Railroad Labor Board, at yesterday's session of the annual convention of the National Civic Federation at the Hotel Astor.

Replying to Mr. Hooper's declaration that a competent tribunal should have power to settle railway disputes, whose decision "shall be enforceable by suitable penalties," President Gompers said that organized labor would never submit to such a proposal for compulsory labor as "it is a resuscitation of a barbaric condition under conditions of unfreedom."

Mr. Hooper said that it was not his intention to cast reflection on Mr. Gompers nor the "labor movement as a whole," but insisted that there were many radicals in the movement.

"The only practical, effective and just method that the Government can set up for the adjustment of railroad labor controversies," he said, "is adjudication by a competent tribunal, whose decisions shall be enforceable by suitable penalties." Getting down to brass tacks, the public should know at this moment that the Railroad Labor Board needs the power to inflict penalties for the violation of its decisions a hundred-fold more on account of the carriers than on account of the employes.

Employes Not to Blame.

"So far there have been practically no violations of the board's decisions by employes. Just now I recall only the one instance, in which one class of employes on one road in Texas actually went on strike last October. If this is not the only instance in which the employes have ever violated the board's decisions, my memory is at fault. The instances in which carriers have flouted the decisions of the board are too numerous to mention. As a rule, these violations have been perpetrated by small or second-rate roads. Nearly all the large railroads have shown commendable zeal in their co-operation with the board. I said nearly all. If the Congress of the United States would confer upon the Railroad Labor Board the power to enforce its decisions, there is not a railroad in the United States that would not be brought into prompt compliance with the rulings of the board.

"The Transportation act will never be repealed. It has already accomplished a world of good in the readjustment of the country. It has prevented railroad strikes for nearly two years. It has settled 1,222 disputes of all sorts, and, if the disputes from the various carriers as to wages and working rules are considered as separate disputes, which they in fact are, the board in about twenty-two months has disposed of 6,073 disputes between carriers and employes. The country will never go back to a system that has no tribunal of any character for the adjustment of railroad labor disputes.

Dependent Upon Public Opinion.

Speaking of the inability of the board to carry out its mandates at the present time, Mr. Hooper said: "The decision of the board is solely dependent upon public opinion for its enforcement. The board may upon investigation find that its decision has been violated, and may point the finger of scorn at the violator by making public its finding. The victim may then place his thumb on his nose and wriggle his fingers at the board. There are many ways the railroads can violate the board's decisions. There is only one way the employes can violate the decision of the board, and that is to strike.

"Speaking in general terms," he continued, "only two plans have ever been devised for the settlement of railway labor controversies: by economic warfare, strike and by adjudication. I purposely omit mention of such expedients as mediation, voluntary arbitration, &c., in their varying forms. The difference between the strike and adjudication is the difference between force and law.

"The strike is industrial war. It represents several of the characteristic phases of military conflict. It destroys wealth, wastes labor, disorganizes industry, retards progress and inflicts suffering on innocent noncombatants. While the railways and their employes fight out their differences, they incidentally 'shoot up' the neighborhood in general.

"Declaring against placing the question of wages in the hands of the Interstate Commerce Commission, Mr. Hooper said: "The prevalent propaganda to the effect that rates and wages should be fixed by the same body is fallacious. Wages cannot be made contingent on rates. The ability of the carrier to pay cannot be treated as a primary consideration in fixing wages. If that were done, men might be required to work for nothing."

Says Roads Seek Profits.

Mr. Gompers, in reply, declared that the railroads were not conducted simply for public service, but for private profit. "The employes on the railroads are in the service of these corporate monopolies," he said. "They are not in the employ of the Government, and the conditions under which they give their service must be considered but from that viewpoint."

"I venture to express the opinion," he continued, "that the greatest boon that can come to the people of our country and for the safety and perpetuity of the Republic of the United States must depend upon freedom and the principles of democracy.

"Attacking the tribunal suggested by Mr. Hooper, Mr. Gompers said: "If compulsory labor, wages and conditions fixed by a Government agency, is to be the means by which labor shall be compelled, that is not a New Ideal. We might as well endeavor to stifle the yearning and aspirations for better conditions in any walk of life. Let me say this also, that you cannot enforce compulsory labor upon the part of the people of the United States and let the other free. If they are going to have compulsory labor then we shall endeavor to help enforce it upon all.

"I should like to know, if not now at some time when convenient," said Mr. Gompers, turning toward Mr. Hooper, "whom we had in mind when we spoke of radical and conservative leaders, for I want you to know that my associates in the labor movement and I are designated by some patriots as most radical and by radicals as reactionary and conservative."

Accuses Russian Propaganda.

Mr. Gompers said that the American labor movement was fighting radical propaganda and movements, adding: "Let no one go back to normalcy to such a degree as to imagine that we are entirely safe here. A propaganda has been carried on to destroy the American Republic and to destroy the American Federation of Labor as a condition precedent to it. Not only is it directed from Russia, but from throughout the world." Declaring that more than 5,000,000 working people are unemployed in the country, Mr. Gompers said: "Where have we heard a word of constructive policy to relieve this situation? When men and women willing and able to work cannot find work to support themselves and sustain their dependents it is well for us to consider and ask ourselves, Whither we are drifting? The attack on the toilers is surcharged with propaganda that has been going on against the men and women of toil, and particularly directed at two branches of industry—the railroad men and the coal miners. The coal miners have worked less than four days a week in any part of the country, with wages about $1.40 and $1.50 a ton and coal sold to the consumer at $15 a ton. I wonder if it is generally known that the railroad managers have placed to the labor wages cost of the railroad employes $1,250,000,000 more than was paid for wages for labor in the railroad service in their presentations to the board."

In concluding Mr. Gompers charged that public opinion had been prejudiced against the workers by the "poisoned arrows of the paid agents of big business."

Glenn Plumb, as the representative of B. M. Jewell, President of the Railway Employes Department of the American Federation of Labor, argued for the abolition of the Railroad Labor Board.

Matthew Woll, Vice President of the American Federation of Labor, said that the Constitutional Convention never intended to confer upon the courts the power to enforce or annul legislation. Under the injunction process," he added, "the courts assumed the right to enact criminal laws. When we condemn the Supreme Court of the United States for usurpation of power we merely state the position taken by Jefferson and Lincoln. In no other country is such legal power upon legislation invested in the courts."

Judge Alton B. Parker took exception to Mr. Woll's remarks, and said that the speaker's statement was not supported by the authorities. Gilbert H. Montague and Jeremiah W. Jenks of the Alexander Hamilton Institute spoke against Government regulation of trade associations as proposed by Samuel Untermyer.

MAN IN A ROWBOAT MISSING SINCE SUNDAY

John Rogan of New York American Believed Lost in the Ice Off Rockaway Point.

John Rogan of the Brooklyn edition of The New York American has been missing since he left the Sheepshead Bay Rowing Club alone in a rowboat at 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon. It was feared yesterday that his boat had been crushed in the ice floes and Rogan drowned. Rogan lived with his brother, George, in 54 Stratford Road, Flatbush. George was to have gone in the rowboat, but was dissuaded by his wife, who was afraid that something might happen in such heavy weather.

The trip was to have ended at Rockaway Point, seven miles from the starting place. Rogan had an appointment there with John Kennedy, proprietor of a hotel. About 5 o'clock in the afternoon Kennedy walked down to the shore to look for Rogan and some distance out saw a rowboat which appeared to have been caught in the ice. A man was standing up in the boat trying to push the ice away with an oar. The distance was too great for Kennedy to identify the man, but he believed that it was Rogan.

Running back to the hotel, Kennedy telephoned the police. Then he returned to the shore front, but the boat and the man had disappeared. Searchers could find no trace of Rogan.

Rogan was 38 years old. In 1917, when towing seventeen canoes from a power boat over the same route he was traveling Sunday, he rescued five persons who had been thrown overboard when two canoes capsized. He took the five into his motor boat, but the extra load caused his own boat to sink when it was struck by a big wave. Seven persons were drowned, but Rogan brought four safely to shore.

REINE DAVIES WINS SUIT.

Gets $12,500 Verdict in Action for Injuries in Auto Collision.

The jury before Supreme Court Justice Finch that heard the $500,000 suit of Miss Raine Davies, former film actress, against the Briarcliff Lodge Association, because a car owned by Sime Silverman, in which she was riding, was in collision with the Briarcliff bus through the alleged negligence of the bus driver, gave a verdict for $12,500 yesterday after being out four hours.

Mr. Silverman, publisher of a theatrical paper, was also named as a defendant, but when the case opened Miss Davies's attorney said that she blamed the bus driver, but would leave it to the jury to determine which should pay her for the injuries which now bar her from appearing in the movies again. The jury gave the verdict against both defendants.

TOWNLEY OUT OF JAIL.

Non-Partisan League President Will Answer New Charge Next Week.

JACKSON, Minn., Jan. 30.—A. C. Townley, President of the National Non-Partisan League, completed today a ninety-day jail sentence for violation of the Minnesota Espionage law and was released. He was convicted of making speeches against the Selective Service act.

Townley has promised to appear at Fargo, N. D., on Feb. 4 to answer a charge of complicity in the alleged embezzlement of $2,000 by J. J. Hastings from the Scandinavian-American Bank of Fargo. Hastings, a former officer of the bank, which is now closed, is being sought at Seattle.

Mrs. Sanger Says Superman Is the Aim of Birth Control

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30.—Creation of a superman is the goal of birth control, Mrs. Margaret H. Sanger of New York today told delegates to the Pennsylvania Conference of Birth Control. Police "observers" attended the session. An attorney had been retained by the conference in advance of the meeting, and the announcement was made that there would be no occasion for objection by police.

"Japan in the last year and a half," she said, "has sent twenty-five men to America to determine what she can learn of advantage from her neighbors. Twenty-one of them have reported that the most interesting subject to Japan is birth control."

ALCOHOL-SIPHONING SKIPPER SENTENCED

BIGAMIST BLAMES BOOZE

Judge John C. Knox in the United States District Court yesterday sentenced Daniel Docherty, Captain and part owner of the tramp steamer Javary, to a year and a day in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., for violating the Volstead act. Docherty was convicted by a jury two weeks ago.

It transpired at the trial that the Javary put into this port on Jan. 10, ostensibly to take on oil for fuel purposes. The vessel's cargo consisted of 250 steel drums, each filled with 100 gallons of grain alcohol taken aboard at Baltimore for shipment to Constantinople. The Government introduced evidence showing the alcohol had been cleverly siphoned ashore by means of a hose leading from the drums to barrels on the dock.

The old temperance slogan "booze done it" is regaining popularity. Yesterday Max Yachynowigs gave one drink of bad booze as the reason why he committed bigamy. Yachynowigs, who lives at 162 Attorney Street, was held by Magistrate Max S. Levine in the Essex Market Court to await the action of the grand jury on complaint of Anna Schwartz of 140 Lewis Street, who alleged that Yachynowigs had married her on Dec. 3 last, disappearing the next day. She said she learned he had a wife living at the Attorney Street address.

Prohibition Enforcement Director Ralph Day and his local staff of several hundred spent their first day here yesterday in the new headquarters on the fifteenth floor of the Albemarle Building, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-third Street. The new offices are much more commodious than the Twenty-seventh Street suite, with plenty of space to meet the growing requirements of enforcement work.

Roy Haynes, Prohibition Enforcement Commissioner, announced in Washington yesterday the appointment of three new enforcement agents in this State. They are: Frank E. Sayer, Oswego; John H. Kelly, Yonkers, and John S. Brown New York.

Federal Judge Harlan B. Howe of Vermont, who has been sitting in Brooklyn, started in yesterday to clean up the calendar of prohibition cases, some of which have been waiting decision for more than a year. Fifty cases were disposed of in less than two hours and then Judge Howe asked for more. When he learned there were no more, he ordered 100 cases put on the calendar for today, and said he expected to clean up 700 cases by the end of the week.

Pleas of guilty were entered in twenty-one of fifty cases, fines ranging from $25 to $100 being imposed. The bail of eleven defendants who failed to respond was forfeited. Several cases were dropped because the prohibition agents who made the arrests have left the service.

Frequently Judge Howe consulted with the Assistant District Attorney as to what would be an appropriate fine. In one case the judge asked how much the defendant could pay. When the man's lawyer said $50 was about the limit of his means, Judge Howe said that would be all right and made it $50.

Owners Cannot Use Warehouse Liquor.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Intoxicating liquors stored in Government bonded warehouses cannot be withdrawn by the owners for their own personal use, the Supreme Court held today in a decision delivered by Justice McKenna, and dissented to by Justice McReynolds. Such liquor can only be transported from the bonded warehouses, Justice McKenna stated, "to a wholesale druggist for sale to him for purposes not prohibited."

The court held in a previous decision that owners could withdraw their private warehouse liquor for their own consumption or for use of their family or their bona fide guests. Today's ruling marks a wide distinction between private and bonded warehouses.

Justice McKenna said in this point that "mere ownership was not equivalent" to possession and declared that under the Volstead law "there must be ownership and possession in one's private dwelling, and that character cannot be assigned to the bonded warehouse of the Government." The cases before the court did not, he said, have the effect of depriving those who held warehouse certificates of their property without due process of law, nor did it amount, he added, to the taking of private property for public purposes without just compensation.

Referring to the contention that the prohibition amendment and the Volstead act, if applied to liquor manufactured and lawfully acquired before the amendment and the law became effective, would be void, as taking from property its essential attributes of the right to use it, possess it and enjoy it, Justice McKenna said that he was "not disposed to trace the elements of the contentions minutely," as they were all answered by the former decision of the court in the national prohibition cases.

HYLAN TO LEAVE FOR PALM BEACH TONIGHT

Will Be Accompanied by Mrs. Hylan and Commissioner Whalen —Won't Worry About Snow.

Mayor and Mrs. Hylan and Grover A. Whalen, Commissioner of Plant and Structures, will leave tonight for Palm Beach, Fla., the Mayor's favorite vacation place. It was at Palm Beach, in his first term, that he met William R. Hearst, when Hearst saved a toad from the furious clutches of a jelly fish. For this deed the editor received the unstinted praise of the Mayor.

The Mayor was scheduled to go to Albany today, with other members of the Board of Estimate, to appear against the Port Authority plan for developing New York harbor, but he arranged to have his speech before the legislators read by Francis P. Bent, Director of Finances for the Board of Estimate. The Mayor has not taken a vacation in two years and was looking forward to two or three weeks at the Florida resort.

During his absence, Murray Hulbert, President of the Board of Aldermen, will be Acting Mayor. On Sunday the Mayor made an inspection of the snow-removal work, being carried on by Alfred E. Taylor, Commissioner of Street Cleaning. He said he found Commissioner Taylor's work very satisfactory, and felt that he could leave the city without worrying about snow storms.

SPEEDED IN STILLMAN CAR

George Colar, chauffeur for Mrs. Anne Urquhart Stillman, was fined $25 in Traffic Court yesterday for speeding. Motorcycle Policeman Harry Brennan served a summons on Colar last Friday, when he said the chauffeur drove twenty-eight miles an hour in the East Drive, Central Park, between Sixty-seventh and Sixty-ninth Streets. Colar was alone in the car.

Long Island Ducks Hatch So Few Eggs They Must Go on a Diet to Gain Strength

FARMINGDALE, L. I., Jan. 30.—A new game of "ducks and drakes" was started at the State Agricultural Institute today, with 120 feathered participants, the object of the game being to determine why the famous Long Island duck lays such unsatisfactory eggs.

D. A. Ahrens, head of the poultry department of the institute, said that the experiment—which is in diet—was inspired by dissatisfaction of Long Island duck raisers with the low percentage of incubation. However ardently a duck may brood over her setting of eggs, she never brings forth more than one duckling for two, he said.

A committee of duck raisers, headed by A. J. Halleck, known on Long Island as the "duck king," got together with Mr. Ahrens and planned the experiment on the theory that it was a case of poor nutrition. Comparing notes, they found that there was almost unanimous disagreement as to what ducks and drakes should be fed.

Six diet formulas were drawn up, the duck men contributed six "sets" of ducks and drakes—seventeen ducks and three drakes to the pen—and they were put on diet to determine what food produced the best results. The experiment will continue until the incubating period ends next October.

CHORUS GIRLS USED TO SMUGGLE DRUGS

CUSTOMS OFFICERS AIDED

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Jan. 30.—Revelations recently made in this city concerning the operations of a drug smuggling ring between this country and the United States have come as a shock to police officials who have been engaged in the investigation for months. It was known in a general way that a large amount of drugs was being brought into this country, both by way of the American border and through Pacific ports, but there was no idea at municipal, Provincial or Federal headquarters that operations of this ring were so extensive.

It appears that the ring used chorus girls in burlesque companies touring Canada and the United States and not only had them carry drugs into Canada, but also employed them to carry hard liquor out into the United States. The American customs officer, Mr. Dicose, who was dismissed, used to mark the trunks of the chorus girls with an "O. K.," it is said, when they came to him by arrangement and said: "I have forgotten the keys, but the trunk belongs to my brother."

The trunks were addressed to the managers and proprietors of various theatres in New York City and upon arrival in New York were conveyed to their various destinations by special carriers and either distributed to various dugouts awaiting further disposition by the customers or conveyed to the customers direct.

Actors' Club the Headquarters.

The Montreal headquarters for this game was an actors' social club, of which the sister of a well-known woman of burlesque stage reputation was manager. The former is now a fugitive from justice and is believed to be in New York City.

For the conveyance of drugs into Canada the chorus girls would be handed a small hand satchel by the ring and asked to take it across the border to a certain party, generally a woman who would be identified by the wearing of a certain distinguishing hat and who would meet them on the arrival at the station in Montreal.

The chorus girl, Dorothy Wardell, who died a few days ago was known to have brought drugs over in this manner on several occasions and was herself a victim of an overdose of heroin.

It is not suggested by the authorities that the theatre managers either here or in New York were acting in collusion with the heads of the ring of this drug ring, but the fact remains that trunks have been endorsed by American customs officers at this end of the line and have gone through to New York unexamined, which were known to have contained a large quantity of intoxicating liquors.

Girls Were Sent Aboard Ships.

Before the close of the navigation season, it was a common practice of the agents here to send girls to the steamers to meet people coming from Europe. The girls would come off the boats carrying bags containing drugs, take them to the customs officials for marking and send them across the borders.

Bottles would be packed in trunks, sometimes as many as two cases of one dozen bottles each to a trunk, carefully placed in straw and with a layer of heavy articles on top. These trunks would be shipped and passed by American customs officials. Sometimes as many as four to six trunks would be sent at a time to New York addressed to such men as Marcus Loew, Joseph Schenck and others and stencilled "theatre props."

The revelations made last week have caused a general shakeup in customs circles and new and intricate systems of double checking have been devised with the object of combating any new plans which the ring may devise to outwit the authorities, now that their old system is no longer practically operative.

CHALONER GETS ONE CENT.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—John Armstrong Chaloner of Merry Mill, Va., got a verdict of 1 cent damages today in Circuit Court No. 2 against The Washington Post Company, publishers of The Washington Post, for libel.

The suit, which has been pending since Sept. 28, 1910, is the result of an alleged libelous story in The Post concerning the manner in which John Gillard of Cobham, a place near Merry Mills, met his death. Chaloner contended that Gillard was shot accidentally when a struggle took place between them. Gillard, it was claimed, being intent on shooting his (Gillard's) wife. The newspaper story, Chaloner held, stated positively that he killed Gillard.

The first trial of the suit resulted in Chaloner's getting a verdict for $10,000 damages. The paper appealed and the case went all the way to the United States Supreme Court and was remanded back to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia for retrial.

DIG FOR RUSSIAN GOLD.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—The gold fever has smitten the East Prussian town of Ostrolenka.

The countryside populace, irrespective of age or sex is digging in and around a cemetery as a result of a report that a former Russian soldier converted to the Catholic faith had told a priest in the confessional that his regiment in its retreat with the Russian Army had buried 100,000 gold rubles near the cemetery.

According to the report, this information reached the ears of the authorities, who instituted an official gold hunt, with a Russian ex-soldier as guide, but without success.

VETERANS' BUREAU TO GET $377,474,622

$100,000,000 TO SHIP BOARD

Amendment Adopted That Only Six of the Board's Salaries Shall Exceed $11,000.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The Independent Offices Appropriation bill, carrying a total of $404,304,238, most of which is for use by the Veterans' Bureau, was passed today by the House and sent to the Senate. For the bureau the bill appropriates $377,474,622, and the only change in this feature was the elimination of a provision which would have limited the number of camps at which training schools might be established to Camp Sherman, Ohio.

Some of the items making up the $100,000,000 appropriation for the Shipping Board came in for sharp attack, the house declining 171 to 17, a Democratic motion to recommit the bill for the purpose of restricting the board's advertising expenditures to $500,000. In addition to $900,000 carried for advertising the board has available $800,000, thus giving it $1,700,000 for advertising.

The motion to recommit, offered by Representatives Byrnes, Democrat, of South Carolina, a member of the Appropriations Committee, would have eliminated also a section providing $50,000,000 for payment of claims.

An amendment by Representative Byrns, Democrat, of Tennessee, directing that not more than six officers or employes of the board receive a salary in excess of $11,000 was adopted, as was an amendment by Representative Walsh, Republican, of Massachusetts, limiting such salaries to $25,000.

Mr. Walsh offered through an amendment stipulating that no part of the appropriation should be used by the board for publication of its own newspapers, bulletins or periodicals of any kind.

WARD LINER FED SUGAR TO FURNACE IN STORM

NORFOLK, Va., Jan. 30.—With moderating weather off the coast, shipping returned to normal today, and many craft which were in jeopardy between Cape Henry and Cape Hatteras came in to safety. Commanders of vessels which entered Hampton Roads yesterday and today say that the storm was one of the worst of recent years. The schooner Blanche C. Pendleton and the barge R. W. McDonald, are believed to have been lost.

With twenty-five passengers aboard, the Ward Line freight steamer Morro Castle due in New York Sunday, arrived at Cape Henry today with her bunkers empty. Three hundred bags of sugar were fed to the furnaces of the liner to enable her to reach port. Captain Blackadder said that the storm was the worst in his experience. It struck the Morro Castle the first day out of Nassau, and when the ship reached the vicinity of Cape Hatteras the wind and sea were so high that no headway could be made against them. The last fifty tons of coal were reserved to bring the ship into Norfolk when the storm subsided and the sugar was used to keep steam up while she was here.

The coast guard cutters Seminole and Yamacraw, which have been towing the naval fuel ship Arethusa toward Cape Henry, arrived here today to replenish bunkers and obtain new hawsers. The Arethusa, in tow of the naval fleet tender Carrabassett, was near Cape Hatteras tonight.

FIXES LENGTH OF SKIRTS.

Salvation Army Puts Limit at 7 Inches Above Street.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—The skirts of Salvation Army lassies must not be more than seven inches above the street level, according to an order issued here today by Commissioner William Peart, leader of the organization in fifteen Mid-West States.

"A few years ago we were trying to persuade our women to wear them shorter," said Commissioner Peart in commenting upon the order. "The skirt that trails in the dirt gathering germs is a menace to its wearer's health; but the skirt that flaps around the knees is pretty much of a menace to the modesty of the women who wear it. The skirt is about the only thing which doesn't appear to be coming down these days and a back to normalcy drive on the too short dress will do a lot to protect the morals of the rising generation."

Commissioner Peart stated that the order would affect every Salvation Army member in seventy-seven countries and colonies where the organization operates with the possible exception of China and Japan, where most of the women wear trousers.

SLAYER GETS LIFE TERM.

Negro Escapes First Degree Verdict by Illness of Juror.

Special to The New York Times.

NYACK, N. Y., Jan. 30.—While lawyers were waiting today to make their final pleas to the jury in the case of Allen Curry, a negro, charged with first degree murder, they received word that one of the jurors, James Jones of Piermont, was too ill with pneumonia to appear.

Rather than put Rockland County to the heavy expense of a retrial District Attorney Morton Lazow informed Judge Arthur H. Tompkins that a plea of guilty to second degree murder would be acceptable to the prosecution. The defense agreed and Judge Tompkins immediately sentenced the prisoner to a life term and hurried him off to Sing Sing.

BERLIN ACTORS THREATEN.

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—Actors have threatened a strike, demanding a minimum of $15 monthly with 70 per cent. additional as a high cost of living allowance.

The managers say that such a strike would ruin most Berlin theatres, their business already being in a bad way.

SHACKLETON'S BODY IN WHALERS' COFFIN

Explorer Will Be Buried in Box of Unplaned Deal Made by Antarctic Islanders.

HONORS FROM URUGUAYANS

Was Stricken on Eve of Search for Enderby Land, Sighted 90 Years Ago, but Never Found.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Jan. 30 (Associated Press).—The body of Sir Ernest Shackleton, the British explorer, lies in a hospital here in a rough wooden coffin that was made for him by Norwegian whalers of the Island of South Georgia, where he died on Jan. 5. A squad of Uruguayan soldiers acts as guard of honor, and until the body has been sent to England, probably on Feb. 11, the guard will be maintained by the Uruguayan Government, which plans also to render other honors.

In this handiwork of simple-living Antarctic islanders—a strong box of unplaned deal wood, lined with corrugated zinc—the famous explorer will be buried in England.

"I am sure that is what he would wish—in keeping with his own simplicity, and because these whalers of the South Seas, whom he loved, made it for him," said Captain L. Hussey, meteorologist of the steamship Quest and close friend of the explorer, who arrived with the body here last Sunday on the Norwegian steamer Professor Cruvel.

As described by Captain Hussey to The Associated Press correspondent today, Sir Ernest's death was sudden. It occurred at 2:30 o'clock in the morning in his cabin the day after the arrival from Rio Janeiro at the principal whaling station of South Georgia, a place called Grytviken, a town of 200 inhabitants. All the way from Rio Janeiro the explorer had suffered neuralgic pains in his chest and back, but he insisted that the attack was unimportant. He fought off all suggestions of returning for treatment, confident that the pains would disappear.

Planned Enderby Land Trip.

The Quest reached Grytviken on the afternoon of Jan. 4, and Sir Ernest immediately went ashore and arranged for provisions and coal.

The explorer planned to proceed direct to the ice barrier in a day or two for the first exploration trip in search of Enderby Land. He returned to the ship at 9 o'clock that evening in the best of spirits, and laughed and joked in his accustomed way. He retired early in the evening apparently in perfect health.

Shortly before 3:30 o'clock the next morning Dr. Alexander Macklin, the principal medical officer of the expedition, was summoned by Sir Ernest. The physician found him suffering severe neuralgic pains again in the back and chest.

"Give me something to stop this, and in a few minutes I'll be alright again," he said. At this moment another medical officer, Dr. James McIlroy, entered the cabin. Before the two doctors could take any measures to relieve his pain he died, three minutes after he had called for assistance.

"How long he had struggled that night against these pains we do not know," said Captain Hussey today. "But he died as he wanted to die—suddenly and without any lingering illness."

Later in the day the body was brought ashore and placed in the English church of Grytviken, and the Norwegian and British flags of the island were half-masted. The rector was visiting another whaling station and consequently there were no funeral services. The best efforts were made to embalm the body, although the proper fluids were lacking. This is now being done at Montevideo.

Captain Wild in Command.

The steamer Professor Cruvel, which calls at South Georgia for whale oil, was the only other vessel in port besides the Quest, and after taking her cargo she sailed with the body for Montevideo on Jan. 20. Her wireless apparatus broke down and she was unable to communicate the sad news until her arrival here.

Captain Frank Wild, who assumed command of the expedition, proceeded with preparations to continue in accordance with a written agreement with Sir Ernest that if he should die Captain Wild should carry on.

The Quest departed on Jan. 14 in search of Enderby Land, reported to have been seen by Captain Enderby ninety years ago, but which nobody since has succeeded in finding. The expedition probably will return in March, when it will be decided whether further explorations will be continued. This will depend upon John G. Rowett of London, one of the patrons of the expedition.

Captain Hussey was detached by Captain Wild to accompany the body to England "because you stood very highly in the boss's estimation," as Captain Wild wrote in his letter of instructions. Mentioned Captain Hussey to buy a wreath for Sir Ernest's funeral, the cost of which each member of the expedition will share equally.

Captain Hussey said today he had no doubt that the entire program of the expedition would be carried out. He said he expected to rejoin the expedition. He was officially made a guest of the Uruguayan Government, which also extended condolences to the British Minister.

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 30 (Associated Press).—More than three weeks elapsed between the death of Sir Ernest Shackleton and its announcement to the world. The delay, it is learned in Montevideo correspondent telegraphs, was ascribed by Captain Hussey as due to a series of wireless mishaps. Captain Hussey bore a death certificate made out at South Georgia Island, reading:

"I, Alexander Macklin, certify to my best knowledge and belief that the cause of death was atheroma in the arteries of the heart. Before death he had not suffered an infectious or contagious disease."

The certificate was signed by Dr. Macklin as surgeon of the expedition.

Captain Hussey told to Nacion's correspondent that the Quest arrived at South Georgia Island with her main wireless plant out of commission due to damage by heavy storms during the voyage, which otherwise was uneventful. When asked why the Quest did not inform the Falkland Islands with her minor wireless set, Captain Hussey said it was not sufficiently powerful.

Condolences From Royal Family.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—Messages of condolence with Lady Shackleton in her bereavement have been sent to her by the King and Queen, Queen Alexandra and the Prime Minister, among thousands of others.

Sir Ernest used to declare himself as always fit, but Professor Skiolas, of Edinburgh University, whose wife is Lady Shackleton's sister, says Sir Ernest had received several warnings recently against the strain of repeated journeys to the polar regions.

Ernest Mills Joyce, who accompanied Shackleton on two expeditions and served under him on the Discovery, concurred by the late Captain Scott, in an interview today said:

"Sir Ernest's death came as a terrible shock to me. I can trace the cause to an accident that befell him years ago. Sir Ernest was thrown by Scott to accompany him on the memorable sledging journey, because of his cheery disposition. He insisted on doing the greatest share of the pulling on the way back when others were suffering from frost and exposure. The load was a fearfully heavy one and Shackleton burst a blood vessel. For a long time he was an invalid. He always felt the strain of that accident, yet he never would give in."

Joyce was the last man to leave the Quest before she sailed from the Thames. He expressed the fear to Shackleton that he might not see him again. Shackleton retorted, with a laugh: "Remember the old antarctic saying which has helped us both many times, 'Chance it and trust in Providence.' Don't you worry about an old sledge like me."

Rush Aid to 25 Motor Parties Stalled in California Snow

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., Jan. 30.—More than 100 persons, comprising men, women and children in 25 automobiles, have been isolated on the ridge route between Bakersfield and Los Angeles by snow since yesterday. They have been without food or sufficient clothing, as their machines became stalled while they were making pleasure trips.

Officials of the Automobile Club of Southern California have ordered tractors and drags sent to the highway to clear the drifts of snow.

BOSCH SALE INQUIRY RESUMED IN BOSTON

Federal Attorneys Confer There on the Evidence—Grand Jury Call Expected Today.

J. E. JOYCE TO DIRECT CASE

Plan to Investigate the Transfer, Contracts With Air Service and Income Tax Returns.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 30.—After two conferences with Government officials from New York and Washington, it was made known late today by United States District Attorney Robert O. Harris that the investigation into the sale in 1919 of the Bosch Magneto Company to the American Bosch Magneto Company will be made in this city.

The names of A. Mitchell Palmer, former United States Attorney General and former Alien Property Custodian, and Francis P. Garvan, chief of the Bureau of Investigation under Mr. Palmer, have been involved in charges that the sale of the company, recommended and approved by these officials, to Martin E. Kern, of Allentown, Pa., was "not all right."

The case will come before the Federal Grand Jury here and it is believed that that body may be called tomorrow or the day after.

John E. Joyce, Assistant Federal Attorney for the Southern New York district, came to this city today. He will have charge of the investigation of the sale of the company under the direction of District Attorney Harris.

An all-day conference was held in the New Haven offices. Those who took part were: Mr. Joyce, Thomas W. Miller, Alien Property Custodian; William W. Wilson of Illinois, Chief Litigation Counsel for the Alien Property Custodian; Paul Smith, Chief of the Corporation Bureau of the Alien Custodian Office, and Thomas F. Lane, legal adviser to the Chief of the Air Service.

Mr. Miller and the other officials of the Alien Property Division completed their consultation with Mr. Harris at noon and departed for Washington early this afternoon. Mr. Miller, the only one in the group willing to comment, said:

"In response to a subpoena issued by the Federal Grand Jury, I came here with certain books and records requested by that body. These I have furnished and am leaving for Washington at once."

Time to Audit Records.

This afternoon a second conference took place in Mr. Harris's office, attended by Mr. Lane. The latter said he intended to remain in the city several days, but his comment extended no further.

The case is before the Federal Grand Jury of this district at the present time, as it was summoned for the purpose several weeks ago. After a few sessions the jury was dismissed, subject to call at any time. The jury, it is generally understood, was to give the Government authorities time to check and audit the records of the company and of the Alien Property Custodian.

The Bosch property at Chicopee, Mass., was seized in April, 1918, by Mr. Palmer as Alien Property Custodian, being sold eight months after to Mr. Kern for $4,500,000. Allegations that the property transferred, including stock in other concerns and debentures, was worth a much larger figure and that advertising was not right about the sale, were made and investigated when Mr. Palmer's nomination as United States Attorney General was before the Senate for confirmation.

It is declared that Mr. Joyce has been allowed carte blanche in this case with instructions to have all the facts.

Three Phases of Inquiry.

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—The scope of the Department of Justice investigation of the sale of the Bosch Magneto Company was learned today coincident with the arrival here of Thomas W. Miller, Alien Property Custodian, with Government records of the transfer. The documents were discussed at a conference of Federal attorneys held with the view to preparing the information contained in them for presentation to a Federal Grand Jury.

Officials indicated that the investigation would follow three main channels. The first of these is the sale of the Bosch Magneto Company by A. Mitchell Palmer, as Alien Property Custodian, to Martin E. Kern. In this connection, it was said, the question of Kern's citizenship at the time of the transfer is involved.

The Government is interested also, officials said, in looking into the Bosch Company's contracts with the Army Air Service, involving $420,000.

The third phase under investigation, it was said, involves income tax returns filed by the company. Internal revenue agents are understood to be checking up these returns now.

MARY PICKFORD CASE UP.

Nevada Court Hears Arguments in Attack on Her Divorce.

CARSON CITY, Nev., Jan. 30.—Oral arguments on a motion by Attorney General Leonard C. Fowler to have the divorce decree of Mary Pickford from Owen E. Moore dissolved as illegal were made here today before the State Supreme Court by Fowler and by Miss Pickford's attorney, Gavin McNab of San Francisco. Briefs have been submitted by both sides and a decision by the Court is the next and final step in the case.

Fowler attacked the divorce, which was granted by Judge Frank P. Langan in the District Court at Minden, March 2, 1920, "in the interest of the State of Nevada," on the ground that Moore and Miss Pickford were guilty of fraud and collusion and that Judge Langan had no jurisdiction, since the parties were bona fide residents of Los Angeles. He declared the courts of many States had held the State to be a third party in divorce cases.

McNab replied that the Attorney General could not have appeared in the divorce trial on the side of either plaintiff or defendant, nor as an independent intervenor, and that the District Court's judgment was irrevocably final, since neither party to the divorce had ever appealed.

The Court has three months in which to make a decision, unless the case is resubmitted before that time.

Court Clerk Sentenced for Forgery.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 30.—J. William McClellan, a clerk in the Appellate Division, Third Department, for more than twenty-five years, was sentenced in from three to six years in prison today after pleading guilty to an indictment charging forgery in the third degree. It

DEMPSEY TO MEET BRENNAN IN GARDEN

BOUT SET FOR MARCH 17

Articles will be signed this afternoon for a twelve-round bout at Madison Square Garden in which Jack Dempsey will defend his world's heavyweight title for the second time against Bill Brennan, Chicago heavyweight. The contest is scheduled for the night of March 17. Preliminary details have been satisfactorily arranged, and there remains but the formal signing of contracts for the bout to complete the negotiations.

Brennan has resumed training in anticipation of the championship bout. Leo P. Flynn, the Chicagoan's manager, declared he had accepted terms for another Dempsey bout and was prepared to affix his signature to a set of articles. Jack Kearns, for Dempsey, stated that he was prepared to sign today. Tex Rickard, when questioned on the matter, announced that he expected to close details for the bout this afternoon when he meets Kearns.

Brennan will receive his third chance at the title unless unexpected developments crop up to change present plans. The Chicagoan has suffered two knockouts at the hands of the champion. In 1918, when Dempsey was fighting his way to the title, he knocked out Brennan in six rounds. In 1920, when he was champion, Dempsey disposed of his rival in twelve rounds. This latter bout was held at Madison Square Garden. It is on his accomplishment in remaining twelve rounds before the titleholder that Brennan's claims for another title bout have been advanced.

While the proposed Dempsey-Brennan contest is regarded practically as a certainty, plans for a bout between the champion and Harry Willis, New Orleans negro heavyweight, have not been abandoned. William A. Brady, who has offered a purse of $200,000 for a Dempsey-Willis contest, plans today to submit his offer directly to Kearns. Regarding his offer and the attempt to promote the Dempsey-Willis contest, Brady issued the following statement:

"I have no desire to embarrass Messrs. Dempsey and Kearns. My past dealings with them must surely convince them of that fact. I think I proved to them many times that I was their friend. About the match with Willis, Mr. Kearns has repeatedly stated in print that Dempsey would be glad to meet Willis if a sufficient guarantee were offered. I think the match a good business proposition, and so I made my offer. If, however, I am shown that there is no public demand for such a contest, I would be the last one in the world to stir up racial feeling. I do not believe such feeling exists. Quite the contrary, it seems to me that the bout would create world-wide interest, for it must be admitted that Willis is an equal match for the champion and would give him the battle of his life."

Kearns stated that he had not been in direct communication with Brady, but added that he was prepared to consider any offer for a bout in which Dempsey's title would be involved.

MARS GETS DECISION.

Jimmy Mars of Long Island City carried off the decision over Billy Prince, Bridgeport featherweight, last night in their twelve-round bout at the Broadway Exhibition Association, Brooklyn. Prince substituted for Sammy Sieger, East Side featherweight, who was unable to box, it was announced. Because of an injury to his right ankle. The Bridgeport boxer proved a willing foe, but was inferior to the fast, clever and experienced Mars. Several times as the battle progressed, Mars shook his rival with stiff left hooks and right crosses to the jaw, but Prince resumed the mauling without flinching and sought to return his rival's five.

Happy Mahoney and Nick Foley, Brooklyn lightweights, slashed in the semifinal of ten rounds and furnished a hurricane encounter. It was a return bouting between the two boxers and a slugfest from start to finish. Mahoney received the decision.

In the other ten-round bout, Billy Levine, former amateur boxer, won the decision over Marty Silvers after an interesting battle.

SPENCER OUTPOINTS DALY.

Willie Spencer, east side featherweight, added Frankie Daly to his list of vanquished rivals last night. The boxers clashed in the principal bout of twelve rounds at the Coliseum A. C., Staten Island, and Spencer received the decision. Daly, a veteran of many stiff encounters, forced the fighting courageously throughout the contest, but his attack was erratic and the majority of his blows missed. Spencer countered cleverly with left jabs and right crosses to the face as Daly tore in, and in this manner accumulated a convincing advantage in points. Spencer floored his rival in the eleventh session, but Daly jumped to his feet without waiting for a count and resumed milling.

MARKS SCORES KNOCKOUT.

Canadian Boxer, in Local Debut, Defeats Eddie Walsh Handily.

Sid Marks, claimant of the Canadian lightweight championship, made an auspicious local ring debut at the Star Sporting Club last night, when he knocked out Eddie Walsh of Harlem, in the tenth round of a scheduled twelve-round battle. Marks floored Walsh in the first round and again in the third. The Harlem boxer exhibited admirable recuperative powers and renewed the mauling after each knockdown, but soon after the tenth session opened Marks landed a powerful right to the jaw and the bout was over.

KNOCKOUT FOR CHANEY.

Baltimore Boxer Outclasses Carlson in Boston Bout.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30.—George Chaney of Baltimore tonight knocked out Harry Carlson of Boston in the fifth round of a scheduled eight-round bout. Chaney outclassed the Boston boxer, staggering him and forcing him to hold in nearly every round. Shortly before the knockout blow, he sent Carlson to the floor for a count of nine. Chaney weighed 136 pounds and Carlson 134.

STEWART CHECKER VICTOR.

GLASGOW, Jan. 30.—Robert Stewart, the Glasgow expert, today scored a brilliant victory over Newell W. Banks of Detroit, Mich., in the second day's play for the world's checker championship. This was the first victory of the series, which will consist of forty games. The score now stands: Stewart, 1; Banks 0; drawn, 3.

Gaudin Wins Foils Match; Gives 50,000-Franc Purse to Charity

PARIS, Jan. 30.—M. Gaudin, the French champion, tonight defeated Nedo Nadi, the Italian champion, for what was regarded as the unofficial amateur foils championship of the world. Gaudin scored twenty points against eleven for Nadi. The match was for a purse of 50,000 francs. Gaudin has contributed the purse to charity and will remain an amateur. Nadi, however, has turned professional and purposes to go to Buenos Aires. The bouts were violently contested, Nadi rushing his opponent repeatedly. There were frequent heated disputes between the Italian and French judges and spectators.

COLLINS IMPRESSES IN JERSEY MATCHES

Mickey Collins, Jersey City boxer, stood out as the most conspicuous figure last night in the heavyweight carnival held at the Fourth Regiment Armory, Jersey City. A total of seven bouts made up the program which scheduled thirty-six rounds of milling. Less than sixteen completed sessions were witnessed. When the smoke of battle lifted from the ring, it was found that Collins had survived two bouts for as many victories. Collins knocked out one of his rivals and gained the decision over another.

Not so much the number of victories he scored as the manner in which he attained his successes, attracted attention to Collins. For the most part the contests were more humorous than exciting. At times the actions of the men in the ring bordered on the burlesque. Collins, however, exhibited more latent ability than any other boxer on the card, and gained many friends in the crowd of 2,000 which witnessed the bouts.

Barney Finetob, Brooklyn heavyweight, and Young Rockerfeller of Long Island City, were other boxers who scored double victories, but the triumphs of this pair, though they held the distinction of knockouts, nevertheless lacked the convincing atmosphere which surrounded the work of Collins.

Collins knocked out Dave Rowan, a local 183-pounder, in the first round of his initial contest, which was scheduled for six rounds. A right to the stomach folded up Rowan like an accordion, and he took a count of nine. Arising, Rowan almost immediately toppled back to a reclining position on the ring floor, and the battle was over. In his second scrap Collins went through six warm rounds with Smoke Jones of Toledo, and at the final bell the Long Islander was entitled to the verdict. Collins took the first, second, fourth and sixth rounds, and in the process knocked out some of Jones's teeth with lusty rights and lefts to the face. Jones took the third session and held his rival even in the fifth.

Rockerfeller was a participant in two bouts, each scheduled for six rounds. Actually, however, the embryo ring champion with the wealthy name, went through less than three full rounds. In his first scrap Rockerfeller, weighing 210 pounds, clashed with Mike Tohlar, who tipped the scales at 204 pounds. The affair was crowded with humorous efforts on the part of the embattled rivals for 1 minute 40 seconds, when Tohlar went down with a left to the face, and the fighting ceased. Rockerfeller engaged Mexican Pete in his next bout, which was stopped in the second round, giving Rockerfeller another knockout victory.

Finetob was credited with two one-round knockouts. He disposed of Steve Jerome in the first round of a scheduled four-round tilt after 2:20 of action, and in the first of the scheduled six-round bouts Finetob forced Georgie Holmes to submit in the first round.

In two other scheduled four-round bouts Referee Harry Ertle, who officiated in the Dempsey-Carpentier battle last Summer, was forced to exercise his discretionary powers. Ertle gave Herbert Link a one-round knockout victory over Joey Nelson by stopping the contest, and intervened in the third round of the bout between Eddie Sullivan and Frank Corbett, awarding victory to Sullivan.

CANNEFAX BEATS CERDA.

Outscores Spanish Player, 60 to 32, in N. Y. State 3-Cushion Tourney.

A start was made yesterday in the three-cushion billiard tournament for the New York State professional championship at the National Recreation Academy in Brooklyn. Robert L. Cannefax, former world's champion, defeating Pedro Cerda, champion of South America, by a score of 60 to 32 in seventy innings. This was in the afternoon match. In the evening John Layton, the national champion, met defeat at the hands of Ray Palmer by a score of 60 in 44 in sixty-seven innings.

His match against Cannefax marked Cerda's debut here, and he seemed nervous. Consequently, he may have failed to do himself full justice. The two played evenly in the early part of the match. Cannefax was leading by only 30 to 31 at the end of the sixtieth inning, but made a strong finish, scoring 29 points in the ten concluding innings. Cannefax had a high run of 9 and Cerda one of 7.

Layton was somewhat off form in his game with Palmer, while the latter was in exceptionally fine stroke. Both had high runs of 8.

ACKERMAN CUE VICTOR.

Defeats Rosenwasser in Pocket Billiards by 75 to 44.

In that section of the Greater New York amateur pocket billiard championship which is being played at Doyle's Academy, Martin Ackerman defeated J. Rosenwasser last night by a score of 75 to 44. In the opening game of the Class B English billiard tournament at the same rooms, James Brown defeated Bert Montgomery 200 to 164 in twenty innings. The winner had a high run of 54 and his opponent one of 18.

MERRILL TAKES LEAD.

Defeats Rice and Breaks Three-Cornered Tie in 18.2 Tourney.

H. C. Merrill broke the three-cornered tie for first place in the national amateur Class C 18.2 billiard championship at Crangell's Billiard Academy last night by defeating Indian Rice 200 points to 189 in a close and well-played game. Merrill had a high run of 42 and an average of 8 8-24. Rice had a high run of 38 and an average of 7 13-24. Merrill plays C. T. Mathews tonight in a game that will decide the championship.

Canadian Champion to Box Here.

Moe Herscovitch, claimant of the Canadian welterweight championship, will make his local debut at the Star Sporting Club next Monday night against Jimmy Kelly, Bronx welterweight. In other of the scheduled twelve-round bouts Willie Foster will tackle Charley Snell in another twelve-round encounter. Tony Dorando and Tom Flannigan are prospective rivals in a third contest.

AMATEUR BILLIARD CHAMPION BEATEN

C. Heddon	0	1	85	8 21-33	.000
T. H. Clarkson	0	0	—	—	.000

Charles Hedden, defending champion, made a poor start in the national amateur Class A 18.2 balkline billiard championship tournament, which opened yesterday at the Crescent Athletic Club in Brooklyn. In the least skillfully played of the three games of the day, the Michigan cue artist lost to Edgar W. Gardner, five times holder of the Class A title in former years, by a score of 300 points to 196 in a game that was drawn out to thirty-three innings.

Neither man was near his best game and the exhibition was not up to the standard displayed by the contestants in the afternoon contests, in which the Appleby brothers carried off the honors with good high averages. In the evening match between Heddon and Gardner there were more blank innings than there were high runs. The titleholder managed to accumulate four such scoreless innings in a row in the middle of the game. This did not tend to help his confidence any, and Gardner obtained a commanding lead which he never lost.

Gardner himself played inconsistent billiards, making some championship shots and then falling down on angles that would be easy for a player of lesser calibre. The quality of the game may be judged from the fact that the average of the winner was 9 2-33, while that of the defending champion was 5 31-33. Gardner's highest run was a cluster of 37 points, while the best that Heddon could do was two runs of 36.

The score by innings:

E. W. Gardner—0 0 2 32 22 4 6 37 31 7 0 2 4 1 31 0 2 1 5 0 4 2 12 3 0 5 5 12 30 0 5 15. Total—300. High runs—37, 32, 31. Average—9 2-33.

Edgar Appleby Beats Colling.

The first match of the tournament was the early afternoon contest in which Edgar T. Appleby of the New York Athletic Club took the measure of Percy Collins, former titleholder in this class, by the score of 300 points to 270. The Mercury Footpus wielder had to overcome a big lead to run out his winning string, but he was more than equal to the task. His excellent handling of the ivories showed what a vast improvement he has made in his game lately by assiduous practice.

Collins got away to an early lead over his more youthful opponent, and held it for sixteen innings of the eighteen-inning game. The former champion ran 94 buttons in two innings while Appleby was collecting the meagre total of 6 points. They ran fairly even up to the tenth inning, with Collins holding a slight advantage, but at this point Appleby scratched and his opponent took advantage of a set-up to nurse the ivories along for a count of 61 points. Following this with another run of 27, Collins held the comfortable lead of 252 points to 141.

It looked like a lost cause for the N. Y. A. C. billiard player, but a cluster of 46 in the thirteenth inning gave him a little hope. When he took up his cue in the sixteenth inning his opponent needed only 41 points to run out, while he was 109 points away from the goal. Playing each shot with great deliberation, and squinting along the cloth from every direction like a golf professional on a putting green, Appleby clicked off point after point with cross-table, double-bank and masse shots until it seemed as if he would end the game then and there. He failed by 15 points, running 94 before he missed on an open table shot. Still within striking distance of the end of his string, Collins ran 11 points before he missed a comparatively easy shot. He left the ivories in a difficult corner and Appleby just missed the second ball for a blank inning. However, the ivories were still in an awkward position, and Collins lost his last chance when he missed a difficult bank shot in an attempt to gather the balls. Appleby then ran out his string with 15 points and registered the first victory of the tournament.

The score by innings:

Appleby—6 1 85 4 1 5 47 24 11 0 13 1 46 1 2 94 0 16—300. High runs, 94 47 46. Average, 16 12-15.

Collins—41 15 10 2 8 1 40 12 1 0 61 27 1 26 0 3 11 0—270. High runs, 61, 41, 40. Average, 15.

Francis Appleby Also Wins.

In the second game of the afternoon Francis S. Appleby engaged Emil Renner. Appleby was originally scheduled to play T. Henry Clarkson, but a heavy cold kept Clarkson out of the tournament for the day. It was a good billiard day for the Appleby family, as Francis carried on the good work where Edgar left off, and romped home with an easy victory over Renner, 300 points to 185. Appleby averaged 15 in this contest, and showed that he is very little inferior to his brother Edgar in the intricacies of balk-line billiards.

The high light in this second afternoon contest was a dazzling run of 106 made by Appleby in the thirteenth inning. At this point he left his opponent behind completely, and thereafter had the game at his mercy. It was a slow-starting game, especially on the part of Renner, who accumulated only 23 points in the first six innings. Appleby averaged only a fraction over 5 for the fine inning of 106 points, carried appeared to be more certain of his stroke, and he steadily drew away to a substantial lead. In the course of the ninth and tenth innings, however, he suffered a temporary setback by making only 1 point in the two innings while Renner clustered 39 points and drew up on almost even terms.

Runs of 93 and 33, followed by his fine innings with 106 points, carried Appleby out of danger again, and he drifted by easy stages to the 300-point mark in an even twenty innings, while Renner failed to get double figures for his scoring in nine successive innings.

The score by innings:

Renner—4 16 1 0 1 0 1 15 39 0 0 23 0 2 0 0 2 1 0 0 0 32—185. High runs, 39, 32, 23. Average, 9 2-33.

Cueists Capture Matches in Pocket Billiard Tournaments.

In the professional pocket billiard tournament at the Madison Billiard Academy at Fifty-fifth Street and Columbus Avenue, A. Church defeated J. Matuto last night, 125 points to 70. The winner had a high run of 37 and Mature one of 26. In the Greater New York amateur pocket billiard championship tournament being played at the same rooms, Vernon Whittle defeated J. Hart, 125 points to 50.

In the final round of the professional tournament tonight Charles Harmon, New York State champion, will meet A. Church. In the amateur event E. Kasinsky will engage A. Tucker.

Hagenlacher in Great Form.

Erich Hagenlacher, the German billiard champion, won an exhibition match at the Morningside Academy last night, where he defeated Hans Fritzhum 500 points to 261. Hagenlacher had a high run of 236 and another unfinished run of 203. He averaged 110 4-5, while the average of his opponent was 20 13-4.

Staff, Pro Skating Champion, Enters American Legion Meet

ENDICOTT, N. Y., Jan. 30.—News has been received from Arthur Staff, professional speed skating champion of America, that he is forwarding his entry to the American Legion to compete in the professional races to be held at the Ideal Park race track rink here on Feb. 11 and 12. Staff will meet Morris Wood, Edmund Lamy and Bobby McLean, all former world titleholders on the ice. The entries of Everett McGowan, Ben Oaicsky and Don Baker are expected in a few days. This will be the first meet that Staff has competed in since he won the American title at Lake Placid last year. Staff will arrive at Endicott on Feb. 7.

GEORGE WASHINGTON H. S. SKATERS WIN

George Washington High School skated off with the point trophy in the senior division of the P. S. A. L. speed skating championships, held at the 181st Street Ice Palace last night. In the Elementary School division (P. S. 10, Manhattan) captured premier honors through the victories of their youngest representatives in the 440 race for the 100-pound class.

Murray Hulbert, President of the Board of Aldermen and an amateur athletic enthusiast, was on hand to marshal the contestants for the speed skating title events. The rink was filled as much with skaters as it was with spectators, and the usual schoolboy rooting was much in evidence.

The first race of the evening, the 100-pound class for elementary schools, was swept clean by P. S. 10, Manhattan, which took first and second places. Raymond Murray, the eleven-year-old speedster of P. S. 10 had no trouble in cutting the sharp turns of the rink in handy fashion to win in 0:53 3-5, followed across the line by his schoolmate, A. Kahn.

One of the features of the night's racing was the good time made in the unlimited weight class for elementary schools at the half-mile distance, where George Brown of P. S. 8, Bronx, sailed home a winner in 1:34 3-5, some six seconds better time than that made in the junior high school event.

The summaries:

440-Yard Elementary School Race (100-Pound Class)—Won by Raymond Murray, Public School 10, Manhattan; A. Kahn, Public School 10, Manhattan, second; F. Carroll, Public School 70, Manhattan, third; L. Hecht, Public School 44, Manhattan, fourth. Time—4:53 3-5.

880-Yard Elementary School Race (115-Pound Class)—Won by G. Lynch, Public School 123, Manhattan; M. Coughlin, Public School 52, Manhattan, second; W. Towner, Public School 12, Manhattan, third; W. Brown, Public School 166, Manhattan, fourth. Time—2:04 1-5.

880-Yard Elementary School Race (Unlimited Class)—Won by George Brown, Public School 42, Bronx; C. Halstead, Public School 26, Bronx, second; H. Goldberg, Public School 166, Manhattan, third. Time—1:54 3-5.

880-Yard Junior High School Race—Won by G. Cypress, George Washington High School; George Usry, George Washington High, second; R. Ingraham, George Washington High, third; A. Enoyan, Morris High, fourth. Time—2:00 1-5.

One-Mile Senior High School Race—Won by G. Reis, Stuyvesant; J. Barnett, Commerce, second; R. Alpern, Morris High, third; M. Hanlon, DeWitt Clinton, fourth. Time—3:04 2-5.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Jan. 30.—The Nominating Committee of the New Rochelle Yacht Club, which will hold its annual meeting and election of officers for the ensuing year at the Hotel Astor, New York, next Saturday, announces the following slate:

Commodore, Oswald J Karsch (raw) Fox-Follett); Vice Commodore, Edward Groch (Bloop Cup); Rear Commodore, H. Bettes (power yacht Virginia); Secretary, William W. Swan; Treasurer, H. C. Hall; Regatta Committee, John Brophy, William H. Porter and L. E. Manley; Measurer, Roger Haddock; Trustees, G. V. Mueller, A. H. Tilts and Edmund P. V. Place; Entertainment Committee, William Whitehill and Charles Klatinger; Art Committee, A. D. Seymour Jr. and Arthur Todhunter; Law Committee, William H. Denton and John F. Lamboen; Nominating Committee, Harold T. Birnie, Charles A. McGill and F. W. Isenbarth.

No opposition candidates are in sight and the slate is likely to go through on a single ballot.

The annual meeting will be followed by a dinner, for which most of the members have already signed. The club has had one of the most exciting years in its history, and is laying plans for a still more active season. The syndicate which was formed for the purpose of securing pledges for the building of a yacht of the six-metre class reports gratifying progress. The New Rochelle yacht is the seventeenth projected, or ordered, with the International races for the British-American Cup, off Oyster Bay, next Summer, in view.

NEW YORK CURLERS LOSE.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Jan. 30.—The Caledonian Curlers of New York lost in a district medal match here tonight to the Mohawk Golf Club curlers, the score being 24 to 10 in favor of the locals. This was a preliminary to the Gordon Medal contest in which New York, Schenectady, Utica, Syracuse and Saranac Lake teams will take part. The ice was in perfect condition today.

The Caledonians and the Mohawks played an even contest until the ninth end, when the locals nosed out with a two-point lead. In the tenth end the New Yorkers gained several points, and again the Mohawks made a gain and added thirteen points in a big spurt, which greatly surprised the Caledonians, who were unable to offset the big gains made.

The line-up:

MOHAWK (24).	CALEDONIANS (10).
1—Deane.	1—Winton.
2—Fatson.	2—Wyley.
3—R. Emmett.	3—Kuekhertson.
Skip—W. Emmett.	Skip—Archibald.

Rhines Was Member of Cincinnati Reds for Many Years.

OIL CITY, Pa., Jan. 30.—William F. (Bunker) Rhines, aged 52, an old-time baseball pitcher, died at his home at Ridgway tonight, according to word received here.

Rhines started with the Davenport (Ia.) team in 1890 and later was transferred to the Cincinnati National team, where he remained for seven years. From Cincinnati he was sent to the Pittsburgh Pirates, and shortly after was released to a Western League club. However, he quit baseball upon his release and went to Ridgway. He is survived by his widow and four children.

MRS. MORROW MEDALIST.

Special to The New York Times.

BELLEAIR HEIGHTS, Fla., Jan. 30.—Mrs. George K. Morrow, former Belleair champion, who plays from Pomonok Club, Flushing, L. I., won the qualifying round in the women's tournament which begins here today. Her score was 87. She took 40 going out and 41 coming in, defeating Miss Glenna Collett of Providence by two strokes. Miss Helen Fox of Philadelphia, a former champion, scored 94 today in a stiff wind.

SIX MORE GIANTS SIGN DOTTED LINE

Gaston, Virgil Barnes and Rookies Affix Names to Contracts With McGraw Club.

Signed contracts from six more Giants were received at headquarters yesterday, increasing to eighteen the number of ball players who have put their names on the dotted line. Only two of the half-dozen, Alex Gaston and Virgil Barnes, have been up with the Giants before. The others were Frank Samide, a catcher, whose home is in Denver, Col.; Floyd Brown, a catcher, from Logan, Iowa, and Glen Shores and John Albertson, right-hand twirlers.

Gaston paid a personal visit to the Giants' offices and brought his contract with him. The young catcher, who spends his Winters in Teaneck, N. J., came here for a chat with Secretary James J. Tierney. Virgil Barnes, younger brother of Jess Barnes, sent in his contract from Circleville, Kan., where the Barneses make their home. The younger of the two brothers went South with the Giants last Spring, but was sent to the Milwaukee Club of the American Association for further seasoning. His record in the association was so impressive that McGraw recalled him.

Samide, the catcher, was a free agent when he signed with the Giants. He played on an independent team in Nebraska, known as the Casper and Scott's Bluff nine, and was picked up by Dick Kinsella, one of McGraw's scouts. He batted .348 last season, is 21 years old, 5 feet 10 inches in height, weighs 170 pounds, bats right-handed and is said to be fast on his feet.

Because of many requests from towns throughout the south for games with the Giants, McGraw has decided to establish a second team to take care of some of the extra requests for engagements. This team, which will separate from the main squad at San Antonio, will be under the direction of one of McGraw's assistants, probably either Hughey Jennings or Jess Burkett. The second aggregation will not rejoin the main squad until a few days before the season opens at the Polo Grounds on April 12.

The dates of five games already booked for the second nine were announced yesterday, and other contests will be arranged. The Beaumont (Texas) Club will be met on Saturday and Sunday, March 18 and 19, and Indianapolis will be encountered at San Antonio, Texas, on Friday and Saturday, March 24 and 25. A fifth game will be with the Portsmouth (Va.) team at Portsmouth, on Saturday, April 8. Games with the Houston (Texas) Club are pending.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 30.—William Dilhoefer, catcher of the St. Louis National League Club, is in a serious condition at St. John's Hospital here, according to announcements today by Dr. Robert Hyland, club physician, as the result of an attack of typhoid fever. Dilhoefer, who is married in Mobile, Ala., and had returned here to reside when he was taken ill.

BASEBALL PLAYER HURT.

HAVANA, Jan. 30.—José Le Blanc, Cuban baseball player, is in a hospital at Santiago, suffering from a fractured skull. It is alleged he was struck on the head with a bat by Antonio Susini during a dispute at a ball game Sunday afternoon. Susini is under arrest.

Le Blanc is a pitcher, and played on the local team against the Brooklyn and Memphis Clubs when they visited Havana some time ago.

Inaugurate Their Season by Trouncing Brooklyn Poly, 29 to 0.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 30.—The Naval Academy wrestlers started their season in whirlwind style this afternoon by taking every bout from Brooklyn Polytechnic and winning by 29 points to 0. The match was arranged for Saturday evening but was postponed because of the storm, which delayed the visitors.

The midshipmen were generally successful in getting their opponents to the mat on the bottom side, but worked constantly for holds, using the bar and half Nelson in combination with others to great effect and taking four bouts by falls. Smith and Morgan, old members of the team, and Hopkins, a newcomer, wrestled with special skill and aggressiveness.

Despite their overwhelming defeat the visitors gave a good account of themselves, the defensive work of Kurtz, Rubien and Leken being particularly skillful and plucky.

The summaries:

115-Pound Class—Hopkins, Navy, threw Daniels, Brooklyn, with a double bar hold. Time—3:25.

Charley Beecher, East Side featherweight, who is clamoring for a title match against Champion Johnny Kilbane, will engage Johnny Brown, English featherweight, in the principal bout of twelve rounds this evening at the Pioneer A. C. Brown is regarded as one of the most promising boxers developed in England in recent years. The London featherweight comes here highly recommended by Ted (Kid) Lewis, former world's welterweight champion, and is expected to extend Beecher to the limit.

A semi-final of ten rounds, an additional ten-round encounter and a bout scheduled for six rounds complete the card arranged by Matchmaker Charlie Pendrick for Conny Burch, light heavyweight, and Johnny Darcy, West Side, are scheduled rivals in the semi-final. The other ten-round bout will bring together Johnny Inhouse and Buck Josephs. In the six-round battle Buddy Wallace of Greenwich Village will exchange blows with Johnny Fox of the East Side.

VICTORY FOR ZBYSZKO.

Wrestling Champion Wins Two Straight Falls Over Daviscourt.

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—Stanislaus Zbyszko, world's wrestling champion, defeated Dick Daviscourt of Texas in a finish match here tonight, winning two straight falls. Zbyszko secured the first fall in forty-two minutes thirty-five seconds on an arm, scissors and crossing hold. The second fall came in twenty-two minutes fourteen seconds, when Daviscourt had fastened a double Nelson on the champion, but was rolled over.

Paul is Joie Graves.

Boston A. A. Starts Movement To Build Up Olympic Fund

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—The Boston Athletic Association has started a movement to assist in financing the next American Olympic team. It was announced tonight that a portion, probably 5 per cent., of the receipts at the Association's annual games next Saturday night would be set aside for an addition to the funds of the American Olympic Committee for the games of 1924. This action was taken in the hope that other sports bodies would similarly set aside part of their receipts from other sets of games. This would obviate the last-minute scramble for money that attended the sending of the American team to Antwerp.

Singles—Second Round (upper half)—Bob Powers, unattached, defeated J. Stanton, West Side Y. M. C. A., 21—18, 7—21, 21—15; J. Bossung, Trinity Club, defeated T. D. Jordan, New York A. C., 21—10, 21—8; Murray Vernon, Crescent A. C., defeated Van Cosenberg, Eastern District Y. M. C. A., 21—2, 21—10; H. Milgram, City College, defeated S. Schwartz, unattached, 21—4, 21—5; E. Gallowin, unattached, defeated M. N. Hooper, unattached, 21—3, 21—3; M. Gullian, City A. C., defeated F. G. McClancy, Twenty-third Street Y. M. C. A., 21—8, 21—17; Ed Groden, Trinity Club, defeated W. J. Plant, West Side Y. M. C. A., 21—13, 21—18; Samuel Buxbaum, Trinity Club, defeated Robert W. Dowling, New York A. C., 17—21, 21—4, 21—18.

Lower Half—William Backman, Trinity Club, defeated F. J. Smithney, West Side Y. M. C. A., 21—1, 19—21, 21—8; C. J. O'Connell, Trinity Club, defeated Roy Taylor, Crescent A. C., 21—12, 21—4; H. K. Gray, Crescent A. C., defeated J. J. Schmidt, St. George's Club, 21—11, 21—10; W. S. Childs, Twenty-third Street Y. M. C. A., defeated E. Mann, St. Bartholomew's Club, 21—19, 21—8; L. Gretsch, Crescent A. C., defeated T. R. Jarvis, St. Bartholomew's Club, 21—1, 21—21, 21—19; L. Massarge, Twenty-third Street Y. M. C. A., defeated J. Mahoney, West Side Y. M. C. A., 21—14, 21—15; A. Waldman, City A. C., defeated C. G. Beaver, Crescent A. C., 19—21, 21—16, 21—9; F. D. Wheaton, Twenty-third Street Y. M. C. A., defeated J. Arcuna, unattached, 21—10, 21—12.

Del Baker is Sold to Mobile.

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 30.—Delmar Baker, first-string catcher of the Portland team, has been sold to the Mobile Ala., team of the Southern Association, it was announced today. Baker came to Portland from the Detroit Americans.

HANDBALL TOURNEY FAVORITES ADVANCE

Murray Vernon, crack Crescent A. C. handball player, advanced to the third round in the New York State amateur handball championship tournament last night, when the title play was resumed on the Crescent A. C. courts in Brooklyn. The New Meoner, in his second round in the New York State amateur here, Eastern District Y. M. C. A. player, in surprisingly easy fashion, by scores of 21—2, 21—10.

Ed Groden of the Trinity Club, Bob Power, unattached, and Ed Gallowin, unattached, were other favorites who advanced with Vernon in the upper half of the draw. Power was forced through one of the hardest matches of the night in his clash against E. B. Stanton of the West Side Y. M. C. A., before the latter finally succumbed. The scores were 21—18, 7—21, 21—18. Gallowin and Groden each scored with comparative ease in straight games.

Two upsets were supplied in the lower half play with the elimination of two crack New York A. C. players. The Mers A. C. Footer, who went down in defeat were Bob Dowling and T. D. Jordan. Jordan bowed to J. Bossung, Trinity Club, in a keenly contested match which went to three games before Bossung won by the margin of three aces. The scores were 21—20, 12—21, 21—18. Dowling also participated in a three-game match. His conqueror was Sam Buxbaum of the Trinity Club. The New York A. C. star took the first game 21—17, but the effort cost him dearly. In the two succeeding games Dowling scored but sixteen aces, dropping the games to Buxbaum by 21—4 and 21—6.

William Backman of the Trinity Club, who shares the local doubles title, advanced through the second round in the lower half without being forced to extend himself. Backman defeated F. J. Smithney of the West Side Y. M. C. A., 21—1, 12—21, 21—8. A. Waldeman of the City A. C. was another successful competitor in this bracket. He scored a strong recovery in his clash against C. G. Beaver of the Crescent A. C. and, after losing the first game, 21—16, came back and carried off the succeeding games and the match, 21—16, 21—4.

The summaries:

New York State Handball Championship Singles—Second Round (upper half)—Bob Power, unattached, defeated E. B. Stanton, West Side Y. M. C. A., 21—18, 7—21, 21—15; J. Bossung, Trinity Club, defeated T. A long reign of satisfaction!

All in praise of "Scotch Mists, too!

Pittsfield, Mass., Jan. 28, 1922

New York City.

Dear Sirs:—

A letter due your good selves has been long postponed, and now that I am unable to hold my conscience in abeyance any longer, here it is, and its motivation is "the non-wrinkleability of Scotch Mists."

Since I purchased one from you, I have travelled over 40,000 miles, and never without it. It has been slept in on trains, used as a steamer and auto rug, a cushion at picnics, has journeyed in kit bag, in or strapped upon a suit case and in trunk; too often just "wapped up into a wad" or crammed into a corner of some baggage receptacle as packing material, and yet, with all this abuse, it never fails to shed its wrinkles and to look like new after a few minutes of wear or hanging in the air, and I see no chance of its wearing out.

Your advertising has featured the other good qualities of Scotch Mists, waterproof, warmth-without-weight, etc., but why ignore the quality so pre-eminently valuable to anyone who has occasion to travel or rough'it to any considerable extent?

Gratefully yours,
R. C. C.

P. S. And I forgot to say that dust and dirt shed like raindrops from it after a very moderate brushing.

Wrinkle-proof!
Cold-proof!
Snow-proof!
Rain-proof!
Worry-proof!

"Ten Commandments of Success"

A Lecture by Charles M. Schwab

Not so many years later, he was earning better than a million dollars a year.

How he was able to make such astonishing progress is summarized in his "Ten Commandments of Success," the basis of one of the most fascinating talks on getting ahead in business that has ever been put on paper.

EIGHT NOTRE DAME PLAYERS CONFESS

DISQUALIFICATION FOLLOWS

College Authorities Act Promptly—Athletes Say They Received No Pay—Two Stars Exonerated.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 30 (Associated Press).—Eight athletes of Notre Dame University, among them two all-American football players, a championship track man and captains of the basketball and track teams, today confessed to school authorities that they had played in the semi-professional football game at Taylorville, Ill., last November, which produced the biggest collegiate athletic scandal in the annals of American colleges.

Immediate disqualification of each man was announced by the university officials.

The men disqualified were:

Eddie Anderson, Mason City, Iowa, All-American end; Chester Wynne, Orinoque Kan. All-Western full back, selection of several football writers, and track captain; Roger Kiley, Chicago, varsity end, Captain of the basketball team and star track man; Lawrence Shaw, Stewart, Iowa, varsity tackle and Western champion shot putter; Harry Mehre, Huntington, Ind., sub-centre in football and basketball player; Robert Phelan, Fort Madison, Iowa, sub-varsity back, and Dick Seyfrit, Carlinville, Ill., sub-end.

The players exonerated Gus Desch member of the American Olympic team, and John Mohardt, all-American back, from having taken part in the game, saying that neither was in any way implicated.

The players made their statements voluntarily. They insisted that they received no pay and said they agreed to take part in the contest simply as a Thanksgiving holiday lark and without knowledge that the affair was the outgrowth of town rivalry which became so acute that $100,000 was said to have been bet on the game.

On Trail of "Fixer."

In agreeing to play with the Carlinville, Ill., eleven against Taylorville, the Notre Dame men were unaware that the nine University of Illinois stars recently disqualified for their part in the matter were to play with Taylorville, they said. Satisfied that the men who confessed were the only Notre Dame students to be implicated in the scandal, the school authorities tonight had launched an intensive investigation to find out who was the "fixer" of the affair and what means were used to tempt the lads into professionalism.

This man, if a student, will be expelled from school, it was announced.

The disqualification of the eight men, together with graduations and disqualifications of three other men recently for playing in a professional game at Green Bay, Wis., was looked upon as wrecking Notre Dame's chances in football, baseball and track during the coming season. Coach Knute Rockne will not have a single regular around whom to build his 1922 eleven, while little hope is held forth for successfully replacing the track and basketball men. Wynne and Shaw were sure first-place men in the hurdles and weights, respectively.

The eight men early today went before Father William Carey, Chairman of the Athletic Board, and told him the story of the affair. Father Carey in a statement tonight said that he regretted the affair, but was thankful that it had been cleared up and the guilty persons punished.

Will Enforce Rules.

"We will stand for no taint or hint of professionalism here," he said. "Not even if it wrecks our teams forever. We don't permit a man to play on any team unless he is well up in his studies, and we won't permit any other rule to be broken.

"My only regret is that we didn't learn of this sooner. The first hint we had of it was in The Associated Press dispatches. Had Illinois University officials, when they learned of it, come to us frankly we would have welcomed their information and gladly co-operated with them in cleaning it up. When we read the first dispatches about the affair we immediately telegraphed the Illinois authorities asking for any information or leads they could give us. We have had no reply. We sent a man to Carlinville and Taylorville to investigate, but his report is hardly needed now."

It became known tonight that Coach Rockne had barred Wynne from competing in the Millrose athletic games at New York Wednesday night before the latter made his confession. Talking to Wynne last night, Mr. Rockne asked him if the reports that he had played were true.

"I don't want to make a statement either way on it," replied Wynne.

"Well, you can't take part in track meets or in any athletic contest so long as I am coach here until you are willing to make a sworn affidavit that you did not play," replied Rockne.

Vindicates Two Players.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 30.—Wilfred Ass, coach of the Springfield American Legion football team, who umpired the Carlinville-Taylorville game, today substantiated claims of eight Notre Dame players, who exonerated Gus Desch and John Mohardt from having had a part in the game. He also expressed the belief that the nine University of Illinois players, who were suspended for participation in the game, received little compensation, beyond the satisfaction of beating Notre Dame players.

"After the game I remarked to Grove Hoover, manager of the Taylorville team, that it must have cost him a lot of money to get the Illinois men," Ass said. "He replied: 'Not so much as you might think; in fact, less than $500.'"

Ass said Hoover told him the money thrown to the Illinois men was contributed by fans who had won bets on the game and who had made their contributions when Hoover passed his hat.

"I know the regular Carlinville players, but when the Carlinville team trotted out onto the field that day they were strangers to me," Ass continued. "I might add that the fellow called Wynne played a whale of a game."

Silvert Abderson, business manager of the team, today denied making the statement that he had hired and paid the Notre Dame men. He said his statement was that he had managed the finances of the team, and that Carlinville had expected the Notre Dame varsity team to help them, but it didn't come. Anderson said he didn't know of the players and couldn't identify them."

To Fight Professional Game.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—A movement to combat temptation to college football players offered by the rapidly growing professional game will be launched when athletic directors of the Western Conference hold their next meeting in Iowa City, Iowa, in June, A. A. Stagg, athletic director at the University of Chicago, announced today.

Coach Stagg, by President of the Conference Athletic Directors' Association, "I shall forcibly bring the menace of the professional game before them," Stagg said. "Heretofore the various coaches have been trying in their own way to fight this evil. The time for action is at hand. I have noted the danger to the college sport because of the professional game for years, and it is time that we stopped it."

48th Renewal of Kentucky Derby to Be Run on May 13

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 30.—The forty-eighth annual renewal of the Kentucky Derby, the racing classic of Western tracks for three-year-olds, will be run at Churchill Downs here Saturday, May 13, it was announced today. The race will carry $50,000 added money, but changed rules will increase the winner's purse. Second money will be reduced from $10,000 to $6,000, third money from $5,000 to $2,000, and fourth money from $2,000 to $1,000, thereby adding $7,000 to the purse. The starting fee has been increased from $250 to $500.

Mercury Foot Trio Captures Junior National Team Sabre Championship.

The New York A. C. junior fencing trio captured the junior team sabre championship of the Amateur Fencers' League of America last night in the annual title tournament conducted at the new home of the Fencers' Club. The wearers of the Mercury Foot ran up a string of eleven victories in eighteen bouts. The Fencers' Club, with eight victories, was second and the Washington Square Fencers' Club, the only other organization represented, finished with seven victories.

The winning total of the New York A. C. represented two team victories. The Mercury Footers vanquished the Fencers' Club in their first match of a round-robin, by 6 bouts to 3. In their second match, which proved the decisive clash of the tournament, the New York A. C. players defeated the Washington Square Fencers' Club by 5 bouts to 4. This defeat was the second suffered by the Washington Square blade wielders. The team previously had succumbed to the Fencers' Club by 6 bouts to 3.

Leo Bartol was the principal contributor to the success of the N. Y. A. C. team. His superb work with the broadsword brought him triumphantly through five bouts in the six in which he participated. Bartol emerged with a clean slate in the clash against the Fencers' Club, in which he vanquished, in order, Leon Schoonmaker, Paul Meylan and Harold Van Boskirk. The bouts against Schoonmaker and Meylan were keenly contested and went to Bartol by a single touch. In the decisive clash against the Washington Square Fencers' Club Bartol added Pieter Myer and Arthur Muray to his list of vanquished rivals. The Mercury Footer suffered his only setback of the tournament at the hands of Nikolas Muray.

Van Boskirk was the only other competitor to score three successive victories. In the match against the Washington Square aggregation, Van Boskirk defeated Nikolas Muray, Pieter Myer and Arthur Muray.

Washington Square Fencers' Club—Nikolas Muray, Pieter Myer and Arthur Muray.

ZBYSZKO DUE TODAY.

After a tour of the middle West and South, Stanislaus Zbyszko, heavyweight wrestling champion, is expected in this city today to begin training for the defense of his title against Earl Caddock, Iowa grappler, at Madison Square Garden, next Monday night. The veteran Pole is reported in superb form, and ready for the approaching struggle. Zbyszko will ide his training at the Lexington Theatre, where special quarters have been fitted up for the champion.

This contest will be the feature attraction on a card which includes four finish bouts. Ed (Strangler) Lewis, former champion, is slated to test locks and grips with Renato Gardini, Italian heavyweight title claimant. Nat Fendleton, former Olympic champion, will engage Wladek Zbyszko, brother of the champion, and Laurent Gerstmans, Belgian heavyweight, will oppose John Grandovich. The bouts will be decided best two in three falls.

PLANS SWIMMING MEET.

Municipal Sports Body to Stage Event for City Employes.

In accordance with its plans for encouraging athletic competition among employes of the various city Government departments, the Municipal Athletic Activities, at its meeting yesterday, adopted plans for a swimming meet which is scheduled for the West Sixtieth Street Baths on March 14. A series of events will be conducted for city employes, and, in addition, several open competitions in which men and women stars will participate, have been planned.

The committee in charge of the M. A. A. three-year-track meet reported unusual interest in the proposed board floor competitions. Employes of the five boroughs are exhibiting marked interest in the games, which are scheduled for Feb. 28 at Madison Square Garden. Athletes of the Police and Fire Departments have been entered for the various events planned.

STEVENSON NOT TO START.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 30.—Bill Stevenson, national A. A. U. quarter-mile champion and captain of the Princeton track team, will be unable to run in the "Millrose 600" at the Millrose games on Wednesday, because of a shin splint, according to Keene Fitzpatrick, trainer of the Tiger cinder path stars. Stevenson's leg has bothered him for some time and he was unable to compete in the metropolitan "440" at Brooklyn Saturday. He has not been in condition to practice on the university board track here for over two weeks, and Fitzpatrick does not wish to take any chances that may operate against him in the outdoor season.

Several Orange and Black stars will enter the individual events, including Bill Massey, Harrison Thompson and Twin Huhn in the hurdles and Bruce Hills in the weights.

LANG ADDS FOUR TO STRING OF VICTORIES

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 30.—The persistence of a ninety-pound lad from Canada, Lang by name, in bringing horses which he bestrides past the judges' stand in first place at the Winter meeting on the Fair Grounds course has made the records sound like a modern Aeneid, with Lang in the role of the Trojan hero. Today, however, there was a change, for, instead of being merely the hero of the occasion, the young jockey was almost the whole show. He had six mounts during the afternoon and he rode four of them to victory, bringing a fifth into the show money and finishing fourth with the other. That was all he managed to do. Pool was runner-up, with two winning mounts.

During the current meeting of the thoroughbreds at the Fair Grounds Lang, an apprentice conductor of race horses, upon whom James Arthur has first claim, has paraded to the post in 138 events. He has finished first with forty of his mounts, second a score of times, and third in thirteen races. He weighs slightly under ninety pounds when devoid of vestment, but as they are not appearing thus airily arrayed in New Orleans this Winter his real riding weight is 95 pounds.

Lang had no mount in the opening sprint for two-year-olds, but appeared in the second race, a six-furlong affair, on Farewell Tape, an outsider in the betting, and brought him in just outside the money. At this point he cut loose. He took the third event on the card, another three-quarters dash, on the heavily backed favorite, Sagamore, from his employer's string, and followed by annexing the featured race of the day for H. M. Hoyt and the four-year-old gelding Sea Cave. This fourth race was the Pelican Purse, over a course of a mile and seventy yards, and Sea Cove carried enough money for the talent to back him down from 11 to 10 until, at post time, 1 to 2 was the best to be had on him.

Also Wins the Fifth.

Another favorite fell to Lang's fortune in the nine-and-a-half furlong race for the distance runners, which was fifth on the program. This was the old brown gelding Waukesa, entered by C. N. Freeman, and Lang had to work his passage in this event, for his mount wearied near the close and had to be hustled hard. The rider got enough out of the tired horse, however, to stand off the determined rush of Wadsworth's Last and win by a short length. In the sixth Lang was up on Hello Pardner, which, chiefly for that reason, was also favored by the speculators. In this case he suffered a temporary eclipse, for he rode the bay colt of Marslax all over the track and finished him in third place.

Lang came back with a whoop for his followers in the seventh race, and they came back with a whoop for him, for he rode a beautiful race on Henry Neustater's Serbian and brought him to the wire a winner by half a length at the welcome odds of 6 to 1.

In the chief event of the card, the Pelican Purse, after a quarter of the mile and seventy yard course had been covered, Zoeller took Rep, the Marshall brothers' entry, out to make the pace with Sea Cove and Natural well up and the others trailing in a bunch. At the half-mile Lang let Sea Cove down a bit and drew up to Rep's withers, the pair leaving the rest of the field several lengths behind. Rep wilted under the strain and fell back before the stretch turn, were reached, and Sea Cove was four lengths to the good when straightened out for the final dash. Lang took him up with the race safely in hand and crossed the finish line a couple of lengths ahead of Runaway, which dropped out of it in the early stages, but came fast in the last eighth. Rep lasted to take third place easily.

Track Continues Heavy.

Additional rains during the night and early this morning banished hopes of a fairly good track for the afternoon's entertainment, and the course was in about the same condition that obtained for the greater part of last week, namely, very soggy going, very fine for sore feet, or for horses boasting a strain of fish blood, but poor for the speed merchants. The attendance was a scattering affair, rather than a crowd, for heavy clouds overhung the scene as racing time drew near and only the regulars were willing to chance a deluge.

The summaries:

Cutbill Hurries From Pulpit to Track and Back Again

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 30.—Harold Cutbill, who won the second leg on the Brooklyn College 1,000-yard trophy last Saturday night, decided only at the last minute to make the trip to New York for the meet and did so under rather dramatic circumstances, it became known today. Cutbill is a clergyman. With no idea of running at Brooklyn, he traveled a hard mile and a half at the Boston College board track in practice Friday afternoon. Friday night he received urgent messages requesting his entry at Brooklyn. Finally, he wired acceptance. A few minutes later he was called on the telephone to take charge of the evening services at the Bromfield Methodist Episcopal Church, where he is the assistant pastor. His presence was necessary due to the illness of the minister in charge. Cutbill left for New York at 10 A. M. Saturday, raced 1,000 yards in the evening and then hustled from the finish line to the Grand Central Station to catch a midnight train which would bring him back to Boston in time to take charge of regular Sunday services at the church.

DAZZLING SQUASH WINS FOR BEEKMAN

As the result of yesterday's activities but two matches in the second round remain to be played in the squash tennis tournament at the Columbia Club for the national Class B individual championship. George Gould Jr., Columbia Club, will meet William Rand Jr., Harvard Club, and Donald McClave, Columbia Club, will oppose G. E. Abbott, Harvard Club, this afternoon. Otherwise the day will be devoted to the Class B team tournament of the Metropolitan League, in which the Yale and Princeton clubs will meet, while the Harvard Club plays on the Columbia courts and the Montclair A. C. visits the Crescent A. C.

The matches played yesterday in the tournament for the individual title were in several instances exceedingly close, as well as notable for the skill displayed. Most remarkable of today's performances was that of Leonard Beekman of the Princeton Club, the lawn tennis star, in pulling out his match against W. W. Taylor of D. K. E. in straight games after the points had mounted high against him in both instances. In the first game Taylor, who has been playing fast squash all season for the Greek letter men, accumulated no less a lead than 9—0. Beekman's situation seemed hopeless. Yet he began putting on more and more steam and slowly drew closer, forcing a number of costly errors by his hard hitting and also scoring well-earned aces, until he was able finally to set the game at 14-all. From that point he slammed his way through the next three rallies to a sensational victory.

Taylor Again Leads.

Beekman's uphill battling in the second game was but slightly less spectacular. Taylor began piling up the points at the start and was leading at 10—5 when the Orange and Black star started his second rally against what seemed overwhelming odds. Again success attended his efforts, and this time the game did not run into extra points. Beekman scored nine times while Taylor was gathering in two aces for the final count of 15—12.

Although there was no such spectacular shifting of the advantage as in the Beekman-Taylor duel, the match between R. H. Monks, Princeton Club, and R. C. Rand, Harvard Club, really took the day's prize for closeness. Monks won by 8—15, 18—16, 17—15. The court covering of the two men was of Class A calibre. The rallies were long, both players digging the ball up in the corners when a return seemed almost impossible. Monks was slightly the steadier in the last stages of the third game.

Another remarkable battle was that between Clyde Martin of the Yale Club and F. E. Chambers Columbia Club. All three games in this meeting were extended to extra points, Martin winning by 14—18, 17—14, 17—14. Both knew how to angle the ball around the walls for accurate placements and both were plentifully supplied with speed. In the rubber game Martin was forced to come from behind to win. Chambers led at 14—11 and needed but one more point to take the match. Three nicks by the Yale man tied it up at 14-all, and Chambers drove out in both the next two rallies. He then won his hand, but lost it again without scoring, and Martin finished the match with a clean-cut placement that speeded around the court at a mile-a-minute rate.

Many Favorites Advance.

Among the favorites who advanced through straight-game victories to the third round were R. H. George, D. K. E.; Kingsley Kunhardt, Columbia Club; J. C. Rochester, Squash Club; William M. Carson, Harvard Club, and R. W. Wolf, Yale Club. The last-named distinguished himself by a notable victory over N. F. Torrance, the Crescent A. C. veteran. C. F. Fuller, who plays No. 1 on the Harvard Club's Class B team, had a troublesome time with H. B. Thorne of the Dekes, but managed to win in three games. C. E. Stuart, D. K. E., eliminated Jesse Spalding, the old Yale football man, by scores of 15—6, 15—13.

The summaries:

Second Round—Clyde Martin, Yale Club, defeated F. W. Chambers, Columbia Club, 14—18, 17—14, 17—14; R. H. George, D. K. E., defeated Kingsley Kunhardt, Columbia Club, 15—3, 15—5; Leonard Beekman, Princeton Club, defeated W. W. Taylor, D. K. E. Club, 17—14, 15—12; R. W. Wolf, Yale Club, defeated N. F. Torrance, Crescent A. C., 15—11, 15—10; William M. Carson, Harvard Club, defeated J. M. Dawson, Princeton Club, 15—4, 15—9; J. C. Rochester, Squash Club, defeated R. L. Ward, D. K. E. Club, 15—7, 15—5; Kingsley Kunhardt, Columbia Club, defeated Kenneth O'Brien, Yale Club, 15—2, 15—13; C. F. Fuller, Harvard Club, defeated H. B. Thorne, D. K. E. Club, 15—9, 11—15, 15—11; R. H. MRS. MALLORY WINS IN TOURNEY OPENER

Upsets were conspicuous by their absence in the opening round of the women's invitation indoor tennis tournament at the Heights Casino, Brooklyn, yesterday. Fifteen matches were played in the course of the morning and afternoon, the entire first round being cleared away. The single bye among the thirty-one entries was drawn by Mrs. Gilbert Harvey, former Philadelphia and district champion.

Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, the national champion, who is favored to win this tournament for the sixth time in the seven years it has been held, advanced without difficulty, eliminating a good player in the person of Mrs. Percy Wilbourne by the one-sided scores of 6—0, 6—1. Mrs. Wilbourne broke through the champion's service in the opening game of the second set, but that was the only game she could win. Mrs. Mallory seemed to be in characteristically good stroke. Her back-court shooting had all its customary pace, and she rarely overshot the lines or found the net.

Second only to the champion's admirable performance was the excellent work accomplished by Miss Leslie Bancroft of Boston, who vanquished Mrs. Bernard F. Stenz by 6—3, 6—0. Miss Bancroft had both speed and control and, by good courtcraft, forced Mrs. Stenz repeatedly out of position. Another Boston star, Miss Edith Sigourney, advanced through the withdrawal of Mrs. H. A. Hatch.

Miss Bayard Triumphs.

In the lower half, besides Mrs. Mallory, Miss Martha Bayard of Short Hills, N. J., seems to have the clearest path to the semi-finals. Miss Bayard won in highly impressive fashion from Mrs. J. E. Bailey, conceding but a single game in their first set. Miss Bayard must be at her best today, however if she is to get safely through the second round. Her opponent will be Mrs. Frederick Schmitz, a former women's national indoor champion, who captured yesterday's closest match from Miss Carolina Winn by scores of 5—7, 6—3, 6—3. This was a duel from the baseline in which Mrs. Schmitz was the steadier, and in which her greater experience stood her in good stead to outmaneuvre the clever Jersey girl.

Miss Marie Wagner, who is also in the lower half of the draw, won a highly creditable victory over Mrs. Albert Humphries, taking both sets by the score of 6—2. What should prove to be one of the most interesting of today's battles will be that in which Miss Wagner will meet Mrs. M. B. Huff, who advanced in the opening round at the expense of Mrs. G. A. Adam, the former Miss Mabel Straffin. This was a well-played encounter, in which the honors went to Mrs. Huff by 6—1, 6—3.

Mrs. Mallory's opponent today will be Mrs. Samuel H. Waring, who won over Miss Bessie Holden by 6—2, 6—1. Mrs. Waring plays good tennis, but Mrs. Mallory knows her game thoroughly and ordinarily allows her not more than one or two games in each set.

Orange Player Wins.

Others of the day's winners were Miss Carse Baker of Orange, who defeated Miss Gertrude Della Torre; Miss Lillian Scharman, who eliminated Miss Jessie Gott; Mrs. I. B. Downs, who was extended to three sets to defeat Mrs. Marion Perkins, and Mrs. H. V. Kaltenborn, who won from Mrs. Ingo Hartmann in two close sets.

The summaries:

First Round—Mrs. H. V. Kaltenborn defeated Mrs. Ingo Hartmann, 6—4, 6—3; Miss Edith Sigourney won from Mrs. H. A. Hatch by default; Miss Carse Baker defeated Miss Gertrude Della Torre, 8—0, 6—4; Mrs. Theodore Sohst won from Mrs. Robert Le Roy by default; Miss Helen Bonner won from Mrs. Lawrence Wood by default; Miss Leslie Bancroft defeated Mrs. B. F. Stenz, 6—3, 6—0; Miss Lilian Scharman defeated Miss Jessie Gott, 6—2, 6—3; Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory defeated Mrs. Percy Wilbourne, 6—0, 6—1; Mrs. Samuel H. Waring defeated Miss Bessie Holden, 6—2, 6—1; Mrs. M. B. Huff defeated Mrs. G. A. Adam, 6—1, 6—3; Miss Marie Wagner defeated Mrs. Albert Humphries, 6—2, 6—2; Mrs. E. H. Thompson won from Mrs. De Forrest Candee by default; Mrs. I. B. Downs defeated Mrs. Charles Perkins, 2—6, 6—0, 6—2; Mrs. Frederick Schmitz defeated Miss Carolina Winn, 5—7, 6—3, 6—3; Miss Martha Bayard defeated Mrs. J. E. Bailey, 6—1, 6—0.

The draw in the doubles follows:

First Round—Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Wilbourne vs. Miss Baker and Mrs. Stenz; Mrs. Mallory and Miss Sigourney vs. Miss Gott and Miss Scharman; Mrs. Waring and Mrs. Schmitz vs. Mrs. Kaltenbach and Mrs. Hartmann; Mrs. Bancroft and Miss Bayard vs. Mrs. Humphries and Miss Holden; Miss Winn and Miss Della Torre vs. Mrs. L. C. Morris and partner.

Second Round (first round byes), Upper Half—Miss Wagner and Mrs. Wood vs. winners Mrs. Thompson-Mrs. Wilbourne and Miss Baker-Mrs. Stenz. Lower Half—Mrs. Huff and Mrs. Gilbert Harvey vs. Mrs. Adam and partner.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

The movement of foremost interest and significance on yesterday's financial markets was the rise in foreign exchange. At $4.28¾, a rise of 4 cents for the day, yesterday's sterling rate was 18 cents above the lowest quotation of the present month. It was 4¾ cents above last year's highest rate and 15 cents above the lowest; no such rate as yesterday's has been touched since the middle of August, 1919. These comparisons are remarkable, taken by themselves. They indicate evidently enough the real and great improvement of England's economic position since sterling touched $3.13 in February, 1920, or since it sold at $3.59 last July. Even such people (and there seem to be plenty of them) who are skeptical as to actual economic recovery admit the sentimental influence, even on foreign exchange, of the decline in British labor radicalism and the settlement with Ireland.

But what puzzles such observers is this extraordinarily rapid enhancement of sterling values at a moment when the two influences which were commonly assigned as the immediate cause for the rise to $4.24 last December—the proposed economic conference and the proposed German moratorium—have visibly lost power. Neither of these proposals is working out according to the expectations of that time. The most plausible explanation lies in the fact that the economic recovery which has occurred already points pretty surely to further progress in the same direction. But there is also the tangible evidence of a very great change in Europe's foreign trade balance.

This was illustrated several weeks ago when Great Britain's export and import figures for the whole of 1921 showed £100,000,000 decrease in the import surplus from 1920 and £186,000,000 from 1913, and when last December's excess of merchandise imports was actually much smaller than that of December, 1913. Yesterday, however, the statement of our own trade with England and the rest of Europe during 1921 was given out at Washington. For Europe as a whole, it showed our surplus of exports to be smaller than in 1920 by $1,640,000,000 and smaller than in 1919 by $2,820,000,000; which meant that it was cut down more than one-half from a year ago. The surplus of exports over imports in our trade with England was $608,000,000 less than in 1920 and $1,285,000,000 less than in 1919! The balance against France and in our favor on the same account was $427,000,000 less last year than the year before.

Declines of 1 to 3 points in various industrial stocks, including most of those which were most openly manipulated to higher prices a week or two ago, made up the day's stock market. Shares of something like a determined value, including the railways, hardly moved all day. As for the bond market, that could be described only in the same way as the market of many days past. One part of the investment list advanced while another part declined; on the whole, the advances were the more noteworthy.

A rise in wheat for May delivery to a price 12 cents per bushel above the month's low figure—yesterday's price was the highest since the middle of October—suggested again the possibility that the rabble of speculators may have misjudged the real supply-and-demand position. The grain markets might, under certain conceivable circumstances, come to play an important influence in politics; for the basis of the "farmers' bloc" has been wheat below a dollar and corn below 50 cents. On the other hand, cotton prices broke violently yesterday even from their previous low level, again indicating the attitude of consumers in the textile trade, but probably reflecting also sales by speculative holders who had bought cotton prematurely on the department's 1,900,000-bale underestimate of the crop. Such experimenters cannot wait for a season's complete supply and demand problem to work itself out. The price of 16.45 cents a pound reached by spot cotton yesterday had not been touched since the end of August; the price was 21.55 at the end of September.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

Market Strong With Rates Higher—Sterling at $4.28¾, Highest Since August, 1919.

After an interruption of the usual week-end holidays, the market functioning in a purely nominal manner on Saturday, European exchanges yesterday took up again the thread of the movement which sent all rates higher on Friday with the result that sterling touched $4.28¾, the highest since Aug. 15, 1919, and brought proportionate advances in francs, lire, guilders and the Scandinavians. German marks alone ran counter to the general advance, but were only slightly below Saturday's final. The South Americans were strong, with Canadian at 95.7 cents, compared with 95.4 on Saturday. A slight reaction from the high levels was encountered near the close on selling by earlier purchasers who were seeking profits.

Included in the influences purporting to account for the market's strength were the report of a large short interest, the scarcity of exchange and a much more straightened political and financial Europe when contrasted with even so recent a time as a month or two months ago. Reports were also current of heavy buying of sterling in payment of recent large coal shipments abroad.

In the subjoined table the quotations on sterling represent dollars and decimals of a dollar, all others represent cents and decimals of a cent. Quotations furnished by the dealers mark indicate a price, measured in fractions of a cent:

NEW DEPARTURES IN FRENCH BUDGET

Several provisions new in the history of French finance are contained in the budget for 1922 as finally approved by the French Parliament. Among them are provisions for reducing the number of Government employes, for loans to students and for taxing the exportation of objects of art and antiques. Details of the important new provisions, known as "loi des finances" and incorporated into the Budget, have been received by the Bankers Trust Company from its French Investment Service, as follows:

"Reduction in number of Government employes: The total number of Government employes shall be reduced by 37,000 units during the year 1922. This reduction, which is over and above such reductions as had already been made by the various departments of the Government, at the request of the Minister of Finance when he was preparing the budget, is to begin immediately and must be completed by Dec. 31, 1922.

"Exportation of objects of art: A tax of 10 per cent. will now be applied to business transactions involving the transfer of antiquities, curiosities, old books, objects of art, collections, paintings and sculptures which are the work of artists dead for over twenty years. According to the terms of a previous law, which is abrogated by this law, all works of art, antiquities and curiosities created before 1800 could only be exported out of France with the sanction of the Ministry of Finance.

"Loans to students: Ministers are authorized to institute loan funds in their respective departments in favor of young people of both sexes whose financial situation does not permit of their pursuing their studies. These loans, which will be made to holders of scholarships and specially recommended students, will be reimbursable before the end of the tenth year following the termination of their studies.

"Provisions for higher taxation of bicycles and motorcycles, a special tax on transportation by aeroplane, and the institution of entrance fees for museums, art galleries and national collections are also among the new provisions embodied in this law."

PLAN TO REFINANCE RIO GRANDE ROAD

TO CUT BONDED DEBT

The reorganization plan of the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Company was announced yesterday, and was recommended by the committee as in the interests of the first and refunding mortgage 5 per cent. bondholders, in view of the "probable default" in the payment of the interest due on Feb. 1, 1922. The Western Pacific Railroad Corporation, however, has made arrangements to purchase all coupons of bonds assenting to the plan, and will also purchase the Aug. 1, 1922, coupons if necessary.

In an outline of the plan the committee explained that in the last year, at a judgment sale, the Western Pacific Railroad purchased the property of the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Company through a new company, under the name of Denver & Rio Grande Western and with the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission became the owner of the entire capital stock of the new company. This amounted to 300,000 shares of no par value. The new company acquired the property subject to the bonds of the old company, but did not assume their payment.

The Western Pacific is now making an offer to the holders of the Denver & Rio Grande refunding 5s under which the refunding bondholders are to receive in exchange for their bonds 50 per cent. in a new sinking fund mortgage 5 per cent. bond due 1955 and 50 per cent. in a 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock of the reorganized company, an average return of 8 per cent. According to the plan the Western Pacific agrees to put $10,000,000 in cash or property into the reorganized company for which it will receive only common stock, "thereby increasing the amount of the equity behind the new securities." Future financing is provided for by a new senior unifying mortgage bond for the purpose of refunding the underlying bonds, for future additions and betterments. None of these bonds, however, are to be issued now, it is stated.

"One of the important features of the plan is the reduction in bonded debt from $125,056,000 to $101,649,000, a decrease of $23,387,000 and a reduction in the fixed charges from $5,896,940 to $4,613,160, a decrease of $1,283,780. The $79,112,000 underlying bonds in the hands of the public remain unscathed, according to the provisions of the plan.

"The plan shall not become operative," it is provided, "unless the Western Pacific Corporation and the committee shall otherwise agree, unless the holders of at least 50 per cent. of the outstanding refunding bonds, not including bonds on deposit under the adjustment mortgage, nor bonds held in the sinking fund under the refunding mortgage, nor bonds held in the treasury of the new company, shall become bound by the plan on or before May 26, 1922, or a later date fixed by agreement between the committee and the Western Pacific Corporation; and if the holders of more than 50 per cent. and less than 80 per cent. of the refunding bonds, as above specified, shall become bound by the plan prior to that date (or a later date fixed by agreement as aforesaid), the plan may be declared operative by the Western Pacific Corporation by written notice to that effect given to the committee, and in the same event, upon the giving of such notice, the plan shall thereupon become operative; but if the holders of 80 per cent. of the refunding bonds, as above specified, shall become bound by the plan prior to that date (or a later date fixed by agreement as aforesaid), the plan may be declared operative by either the Western Pacific Corporation or the committee, by written notice to that effect given to the other party and in the same event, upon the giving of such notice to either party the plan shall thereupon become operative."

J. H. Young, the President of the new company, estimates that it will be necessary to expend upon road structures and equipment in the next five years, including a small expenditure for extensions, not less than $20,670,237. For the eleven months ended Nov. 30, 1921, the company showed net revenues of $4,405,677, which, added to other income, made a total income of $5,119,853. After allowing for various charges, however, the road showed a deficit amounting to $2,328,109.

The 5 Per Cent. Refunding Bondholders' Protective Committee consists of the following: John Henry Hammond of Brown Brothers & Co., Chairman; Bertram Cutler (John D. Rockefeller); Charles Hayden of Hayden, Stone & Co.; Andrew J. Miller of Robinson & Co.; Frederick Strauss of J. and W. Seligman & Co.; Melvin A. Traylor, President, First Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago. The committee represents a very large amount of the refunding bonds and it recommends bondholders to deposit under the plan.

NORTHERN PACIFIC NET UP.

Gain for 1921 Was Nearly $3,000,000, Despite Lower Gross.

The Northern Pacific Railroad Company, in its December (1921) statement showed net operating income of $2,005,827, an increase of $1,056,640, compared with the previous year and comparing with $1,417,726 for November, 1921. December gross was $7,500,813, a decrease of $1,569,067 against the record of the same month in 1920. For the twelve months ended Dec. 31, 1921, the road reported net operating income of $10,845,828, an increase of $2,894,367 compared with the preceding twelve months. The road's gross for the year was $94,583,059, or $18,546,349 under that of 1920.

The Norfolk & Western reported a net income of $9,905,146 for the year ended Dec. 31, 1921, compared with $11,451,797 for 1920. The items of gross income compared $15,295,378 for 1921 and $16,813,150 for 1920.

London Advices Say Shell Co. May Issue 10,000,000 Shares Soon.

The Shell Trading and Transport Company, Limited, contemplates offering 10,000,000 £1 second preference shares bearing 7 per cent. cumulative dividends, according to London advices received yesterday in Wall Street. This is equivalent to about $42,500,000 at the current rates of exchange.

The issue is a newly-created class of stock, there being outstanding now 2,000,000 in preference shares of £10 par, and 21,321,296 ordinary shares of £1 par value. Last July the stockholders approved an increase in the £1 par value ordinary shares from 20,000,000 to 30,000,000. None of these have been disposed of, it is assumed.

Cuba Cane Pays Off $6,500,000.

Announcement was made yesterday by the Cuba Cane Sugar Corporation that of the $13,500,000 of acceptance which fell due yesterday it had paid off $6,500,000 and $7,000,000 has been renewed for ninety days. It was reported that the interest rate of the renewed block was on more favorable terms than the original rate.

SEES REMARKABLE RECOVERY IN CUBA

BACK FROM INVESTIGATION

Charles E. Mitchell, President of the National City Bank, who with Percy Rockefeller headed a party of bankers who made an investigation of conditions in Cuba, said on his return to his desk yesterday that for a country which was over-prosperous and then was plunged to the brink of an economic crisis almost over night Cuba has staged a remarkable recovery.

"Of course," there is no boom in Cuba," said Mr. Mitchell. "There is still a considerable gap between the price received by labor and the price for the necessities of life, but this gap is closing, and it is my belief that within a few months equilibrium must be recovered.

"I would stress one thing. Cuba does not need crop restraint of any sort, such as has been discussed and proposed. To my mind that would be a vital mistake. The natural law of supply and demand for her product will take care of the situation, unless artificial barriers are placed in the way. The fear that raw sugar prices would crash to a cent and one-half or a cent per pound, widely expressed, has not materialized. At present prices, and such higher prices as will eventually be maintained, Cuba can do very well. She must have help to work out her salvation—financial help—but this is not a problem of the immediate future."

Mr. Mitchell and his party were about ten days on the island, going from and returning to the tip of Florida by airplane. Mr. Mitchell said that the logical development for many of the corporations now operating in the Cuban field would be by merger. "The consolidation of producing companies with refining companies, the elimination of unnecessary overhead and such surplus of plants as are found to be the natural sequence of such a condition as that in which many of the companies operating in Cuba find themselves," he said. "A corporation with a moderate capitalization, say two or three million dollars, has a limited scope for the distribution of its securities, and naturally, a limit of credit. By putting some of these properties together into one large company, whose shares could be taken by investors in all parts of the United States, some of the financial burden at least is lifted."

It has been reported in Wall Street that the Cuban-American Sugar Corporation would form the nucleus for a merger of a dozen or so smaller companies. Mr. Mitchell said that he could not comment on this report at this time. In commenting on the report in the financial district that the American Sugar Refining Company and the Cuba Cane Sugar Corporation might be put together, he said that he considered such a merger very improbable. It is generally believed in the financial district, however, that Mr. Mitchell and his associates are planning a merger to be announced later and that this was the cause of his trip of investigation.

Mr. Mitchell said he had been impressed by President Zayas, and that undoubtedly the Administration of Cuba was doing everything in its power to eliminate unnecessary expenditures and to balance its budget. "In my opinion a big loan to Cuba will be made within a few months," said Mr. Mitchell. "It will be necessary to set Cuba on her feet, and in my opinion, it will be arranged just as soon as the promises which the Cuban Administration has made concerning budget and other economies have been fulfilled."

It has been reported in the financial district that the preliminary loan of $5,000,000, made last week by J. P. Morgan & Co. and associates, will be followed by a loan of $50,000,000, to be offered to investors here during the Spring.

Mr. Mitchell said he observed a shortage of labor in Cuba, particularly common labor in the cane fields. "With the shutdown of last year," he said, "there was an exodus of the labor usually found in Cuban fields to its native home—Spain."

$2,500,000 BONDS OFFERED.

Blyth, Witter & Co. are offering a new issue of $2,500,000 7 per cent. collateral trust fifteen-year gold bonds of Theodore H. Davies & Co., Ltd., incorporated under the laws of the Territory of Hawaii, at 96½ and interest, to yield 7.10 per cent. The bonds are dated Jan. 1, 1922, mature Jan. 1, 1937, and are noncallable until July 1, 1926, and thereafter as a whole or in part at 102½ and interest. The bonds are secured by pledge of Hawaiian Sugar Corporation stocks valued at $1,750,000 and other corporation stocks valued at $2,480,461 and by other assets, a total personal property value of $11,663,171.

Net earnings of the business, after all charges, for the five-year period ended Dec. 31, 1920, were at the annual average rate of $962,836. The purpose of the new issue is to provide additional working capital to enable the company to finance the needs of its allied interests.

No announcement of the allotments for the new Chicago, Burlington & Quincy $30,000,000 issue was made by J. P. Morgan & Co. yesterday. The bonds advanced sharply on the Curb market to 99, but receded when admitted to trading on the New York Exchange to approximately the offering price. The entire issue was allotted on a firm basis by the underwriters until 2 P. M. yesterday. An announcement concerning the offering is expected today.

TO DRILL OIL LANDS.

Creole Company Contracts With Pearsons for Venezuela Work.

The Creole Development Company, recently organized under the laws of Delaware, has entered into a drilling contract with the F. S. Pearson Engineering Company of New York to develop the former's oil land holdings in the Lake Maracaibo district of Venezuela. The Creole Company's acreage is said to adjoin that of the Standard Oil Company, the Dutch Shell, the Texas Company and other companies in the same area.

Preston McGoodwin, former American Minister to Venezuela, is President of the Creole Development Company, a subsidiary of the Creole Syndicate. Lieut. Col. Cecil A. Grenfell of London is Chairman of the Board of Directors. Other members of the board include John A. Drake, C. K. McCormick and Percival S. Hill, President of the American Tobacco Company.

BANK SELLS CORNER PLOT.

Buyers Will Improve Two Old Brooklyn Mansions.

The Bank of America sold the plot, 5 by 85, on the northwest corner of Clinton and Remsen Streets, Brooklyn. The property is in the rear of the Franklin Trust Branch of the bank and is directly opposite the Hamilton Club. Philip L. Watkins and Charles K. Kirby were the brokers.

The purchasers are Isidro Pendas and John M. Alvarez, who are contemplating altering the present two old mansions for business purposes and for offices for physicians, dentists, X-ray laboratory, lawyers and other purposes.

The courtyard in the rear of the corner house on Clinton Street will probably be used in connection with the rear extension of the Remsen Street house, and new stores with a mezzanine gallery, suitable for a bond and investment house, or an insurance office, will be erected.

STORAGE BATTERY MEETING.

Earnings for 1921 Reported to Be About $22 a Share.

Directors of the Electric Storage Battery Company are expected to hold their quarterly meeting today. Early last week reports were circulated that the Directors contemplated splitting up the present stock on the basis of three shares of new stock for each share now outstanding. It also was said that earnings for 1921 would show in the neighborhood of $22 a share earned.

In 1920 the company earned $25 a share and at the close had $19,001,825 common stock outstanding. The profit and loss surplus was $17,466,192, but this was said to have been increased as a result of the profits for 1921.

STATE TAX BUREAU AIDS THE PUZZLED

The State Tax Commission, in a statement prepared for the guidance of income tax payers, answered yesterday many new questions concerning the operation of the State income tax law. All of the problems have arisen in specific cases and the commission states the question asked and the official reply. Some of the questions and answers follow:

"Superintendent—If the combined payments to a man and wife employed in the Institution Farm exceed $1,000 should they be reported? A. No.

"Attendant—My salary check suffers a reduction of four and one-half per cent. for the pension fund, which is compulsory. I am married with two dependent children. My salary after this deduction is less than $2,400. Do I have to file a return? A. Yes.

"Orleans—My business suffered because my time was engaged in securing evidence for a suit for alienation of affection of my wife. Am I allowed to deduct amounts which I paid for detective service, attorneys' fees and estimated business loss on this account? A. No. These expenditures are personal and, therefore, not permitted deductions.

"Bankrupt—Is a person who has gone through bankruptcy and who after discharge pays his indebtedness, entitled to deduct such payments as business expenses? A. No.

"Berkshire—Are members of a partnership carrying on business with offices in Massachusetts and in New York State required to file partnership or individual returns with respect to their income from New York State sources? A. No, unless their income from New York State sources is from real property.

"Gunner—In 1920 I paid a tax. Last year I was working only part of the time and during the rest took vocational training under Government supervision. How do I figure my income? A. You should exclude the amount which you received from the Government. If your net income after omitting these payments was less than $1,000 you are not required to file a return.

"Administrator—I am B's executor. The entire estate consists of real property. In his will B left one piece to his widow C and another to his son D. The rest was conveyed to his executor with direction to sell and, with the proceeds pay the general legacies, the remainder, if any, to be paid to his widow. None of these payments have been made during 1921, nor has any property been sold. I have collected total net rental income of $20,000 upon all of the property during 1921. Of this, $5,000 came from property devised to the widow and $4,000 from the property devised to the son. How is this to be reported for income tax purposes? A. Title to real property devised to widow and son passed to them as of date of death. Income from it should be reported. $5,000 in the widow's return and $4,000 in the son's return, even though these did not receive it during 1921. Remainder was converted into penalty by the will and the income thereon should be included in the return filed by the estate and tax pay by the executor.

"Realtor—If an apartment house was sold last year, one-third of consideration being cash and the balance taken in two mortgages, does the seller compute the profit? A. This is considered as a cash transaction and the entire amount of profit realized is taxable in the year of sale."

Standard Oil Denies Report.

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey yesterday denied the statements published last week that the company was contemplating the construction of its own gasolene and oil filling stations in Newark, N. J. The only filling stations operated by the company direct are in Baltimore, Md.

How to Guard Against a Decline in Interest Rates

So quickly have our recent issues of first mortgage bonds been sold out that many investors have been unable to get what they wanted. In order to make sure of getting 8% on these well-secured bonds, instead of accepting a lower rate eventually, we suggest that you do one of the following things:

1. Allow us to fill your order from whatever we have on hand now, and exchange your bond later for one of the maturity you wish, which we will reserve for you out of a future issue. Your money will be refunded if the new bond does not meet your approval.

2. Ask us to reserve, subject to approval, a bond of a future issue bearing 8%, if you will be able to pay for it within two or three months.

3. Start a partial payment account with as little as $10 initial deposit on a $100 bond. We will then reserve a bond for you bearing 8%.

We have a few excellent loans in prospect on which we will be able to offer 8%. You may invest on the reservation or partial payment plan until this limited prospective supply is exhausted.

PARTIAL PAYMENTS

Since capital is not accumulated to be spent, but to be used for an income, it is advisable to invest it as it is accumulated.

IMPORTERS PROTEST U. S. VALUATION PLAN

Council Declares That Fordney Bill Will Create Monopolies and Increase Prices.

PREDICT TRADE DECREASE

Opponents of Measure Argue That Lack of Business Would Be Reflected in Duties.

The National Council of American Importers and Traders issued a statement yesterday in reply to some of the arguments advanced in favor of the American valuation plan by the National Association of Manufacturers in convention in Washington. In summarizing some of the reasons why the passage of this clause in the Fordney Tariff bill would be inimical to the best interests of the country, the statement says that "American valuation, by practically prohibiting the importation of foreign goods, will increase prices of domestic goods and give a small group of American manufacturers a virtual monopoly. It will be in their power to raise wholesale prices, and that will in turn make the duty on importations excessive, since American valuation bases the duty, not on the foreign purchase price, but on the estimated value of comparable articles in the American wholesale market.

"Price fixing and profiteering," continues the statement, "will become the order of the day. American valuation will put an end to America's foreign commerce, since, as President Harding has recently said: 'We cannot hope to sell where we are not willing to buy.' American valuation will shut the markets of Europe against American goods. It will also cut off our foreign trade with South America and other countries as well, because it will force European nations to buy their wheat, meats and other foodstuffs from South America, Australia and Canada, and their cotton from India and their oil from Mexico."

It is further pointed out that the new valuation scheme will increase the difficulties of international exchange, because it would deprive Europe of an exchange market, and by making it impossible for European Governments to pay what they owe us, will keep taxation high and result in high prices and business stagnation. In connection with the argument that the new plan would increase our revenue it is said that "the plan would decrease our imports to such an extent that our customs would suffer." It cites the opinions of leading economists in support of this point.

WINTON MOTOR PAYMENT.

Distributes 10 Per Cent. on Its Extension Indebtedness.

The Winton Company of Cleveland, makers of the Winton Six motor car, announces that checks were mailed on Jan. 23 for its second 10 per cent. payment on its extension indebtedness. This, together with various other payments that have been made within the past sixty days, has reduced the company's debts by practically $500,000.

The Winton Engine Works, a Winton property which manufactures Diesel marine engines, has undergone the same readjustments as the motor car plant, and is producing 50 per cent. of its capacity.

NEW YORK TRUST REPORT.

Statement of Adjustments Made in Liberty Bank Merger.

The New York Trust Company has mailed to stockholders a statement of adjustments affecting capital, surplus and undivided profits, made at the time of the merger of the New York Trust Company with the Liberty National Bank of New York.

"The actual total capital, surplus and undivided profits of the two institutions, as of Dec. 31, 1920, after giving effect to the adjustments subsequently made at the time of the merger, would amount to $25,839,484," it was said. "This figure is arrived at after providing for a $2,000,000 stock dividend paid from the surplus of the New York Trust Company to the stockholders of the New York Trust Company, and an additional distribution of $1,872,700 to the New York Trust Company stockholders from the New York Trust Company surplus for the purpose of equalizing the book value of the two institutions in connection with the exchange of the stock of the merging institutions and a dividend of $989,073 to the stockholders of the Liberty National Bank from the undivided profits of the Liberty National Bank for the purchase of their common stock holdings of the Liberty Securities Corporation.

"As compared to this figure, $25,839,484, as of Dec. 31, 1920, the combined capital, surplus and undivided profits of the consolidated institution, as shown by the published statement of the company as of Dec. 31, 1921, was $26,972,484, or an increase during the year 1921 of $632,000. This figure is net after the payment of all expenses, taxes, $1,965,000 in regular dividends, and after charging off all bad or doubtful items. No additional capital was paid in as the result of the merger, nor during the year."

FROTHINGHAM MINES PUT IN RECEIVERSHIP

SALVADOR ASSETS UNKNOWN

Fraud Charges Against Promoter Accidentally Shot Last Fall to Come Up This Week.

The El Salvador Silver Mines Company, Inc., of which Thomas H. Frothingham, a former member of the Stock Exchange, has been described in bankruptcy proceedings as promoter, was placed in the hands of a receiver yesterday by Federal Judge Julian W. Mack. The Court appointed A. Parker Nevin, 20 Church Street, receiver in a suit in equity brought by Alexander J. McAllister, describing himself as a stockholder to the extent of $10,000.

Mr. McAllister's petition sets forth that the El Salvador Silver Mines Company, Inc., has a capital stock of $3,000,000, owns a controlling interest in the Butlers' Potosi Consolidated Mines Company, capitalized at $700,000, and the Mont Mayor Mines Corporation, capitalized at $500,000, and also owns and leases further mining properties in the Republic of San Salvador.

The liabilities of the El Salvador Silver Mines Company, Inc., as of Oct. 31 last, are shown by the petitioner to have been $280,771. The value of the assets, including properties, equipment and fixtures of the mines, securities and a balance due on a contract with the Republic of Salvador, is not disclosed.

When an involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed on Dec. 12 last against Mr. Frothingham, who is a son-in-law of the late Henry Reese Hoyt, well known corporation lawyer, the petitioners, Frank D. Lackey, Harry M. Pierce and James S. Stirling, alleged that Mr. Frothingham had made fraudulent representations on the strength of which they bought stock in the El Salvador Silver Mines Company, Inc., which they later found to be worthless. They further charged that he had transferred $1,600,000 in securities and other property to his wife and other preferred creditors.

Later Judge Augustus N. Hand granted an order restraining the trustees of the property of Mr. Frothingham from disposing of his property under bankruptcy proceedings until the status of El Salvador Silver Mines Company, Inc., investors would be determined. Former Judge E. Henry Lacombe was appointed by Judge Hand as a special Commissioner to conduct a hearing into charges of fraud made against Mr. Frothingham by investors in the El Salvador mines. The hearing, postponed from time to time, is now scheduled to take place next Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Mr. Frothingham shot himself under strange circumstances last September in the home of his brother-in-law, Al. O. Hoyt, 2 East Seventy-fifth Street. The shooting did not become known until two days later, when members of the family described it as purely accidental.

1921 EXPORT TRADE OFF $2,300,000,000

IMPORT LOSS HEAVY, TOO

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Exports to Europe during the last year fell off by more than $2,000,000,000, as compared with 1920, while exports to South America declined by more than $300,000,000, according to foreign trade reports issued today by the Commerce Department.

During the year 1921 exports to Europe aggregated $2,564,000,000, compared with $4,406,000,000 in 1920, while imports for the year aggregated $765,000,000, as against $1,228,000,000 in 1920.

For the month of December exports to Europe aggregated $155,000,000, as against $388,000,000 in December, 1920, while imports for the month aggregated $73,000,000, as against $67,000,000 in December a year ago.

Exports to South America for the year aggregated $273,000,000, as compared with $594,000,000 in 1920, while imports from South America totaled $296,000,000, against $761,000,000 in 1920.

Exports to South America in December totaled $18,000,000, compared with $67,000,000 in December, 1920, while imports for the month aggregated $27,000,000, against $36,000,000 in December a year ago.

PLAN NEW FARM LOAN ISSUE.

Board Members Say It Probably Will Total $75,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The Farm Loan Board is preparing a new bond issue to be made shortly, it was said today at the Treasury.

Officials said the issue probably would amount to about $75,000,000. Interest rates have not yet been determined, it was said. The board will have to decide whether to dispose of the new bonds at a premium or lower the rate to below 5 per cent. under existing conditions in the bond market.

VALUES ROAD AT $45,051,000

Interstate Commerce Commission Acts on Ontario & Western.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A tentative valuation for the property of the New York, Ontario & Western Railroad of $45,051,000 was found today by the Interstate Commerce Commission. This covers the property used by the road in its transportation operations whether owned by it or not. On the books of the company, the report said, capital investment is valued at $85,101,000, while the company has outstanding stocks and bonds and other securities of a par value of $96,091,000.

The commission also found a tentative valuation of $1,090,873 for the property of the Central Union Depot of Cincinnati and of $610,398 for the property of the Butler County Railroad.

BAKER & DE FORREST QUIT.

George F. Baker and Robert W. de Forest resigned yesterday from the Jersey Central Board. Mr. de Forest also resigned as Vice President and General Counsel. This dual office was abolished and he was appointed General Counsel. The offices of the Chairman of the board and assistant to the President also were discontinued.

Other changes in the official staff include the appointment of Charles H. Stein as general manager in charge of mechanical engineering; Albert A. Heser, manager of the Marine Department, and Leon M. Hannaford, assistant real estate and tax agent. They begin their new duties on Feb. 1.

NEW TAX PUZZLES OFFICIALLY SOLVED

When to Exempt and How to Do It Explained for Those of $5,000 Incomes.

HEAD OF FAMILY DEFINED

Some of the puzzling questions relating to exemptions on Federal income taxes under the new Revenue act have been answered in an article prepared by the Bureau of Internal Revenue as the second of a series on "Income Tax Facts You Should Know."

Many of the errors made by taxpayers in the preparation of returns have arisen from a misunderstanding of the exemption allowed a head of a family, defined by Treasury regulations as a "person who actually supports and maintains in one household one or more individuals who are closely connected with him by blood relationship, relationship by marriage or by adoption, or whose right to exercise family control and provide for these dependents is based upon some moral or legal obligation."

"The exemptions allowed a head of a family under the Revenue act of 1921 are the same as granted a married person—$2,500 where the net income for 1921 was $5,000 or less and $2,000 where the net income exceeded $5,000," said the bureau's statement. "Circumstances surrounding each individual case determine largely whether a person is entitled to such exemption.

How Exemption Works.

"A single person—the term including widowers, widows, and persons not living with wife or husband—is the head of a family if he is the sole support of one or more relatives living in the same house with him, and if he exercises control of household affairs. A married person living with husband or wife, in addition to the exemptions allowed such persons, cannot claim an exemption as the head of a family, irrespective of the support of others, in the household.

"Whether a person who does not continuously live in the same house with dependent relatives is entitled to the exemptions depends upon the character of the separation. If a parent is away on business part of the year or a child or other dependent is away on a visit, the common home being maintained, the exemptions may be claimed. If a parent is compelled to maintain his dependent children with relatives, or in a boarding house, the exemption may still apply. If, however, the dependent continuously and without necessity makes his home elsewhere than with his benefactor, the latter is not the head of a family, irrespective of the question of support.

A Typical Tax Case.

"A taxpayer who is not the head of a family may still be allowed the exemption of $400 for each person dependent upon him for chief support, if such person is under 18 years of age or incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective.

"The following is a concrete example of taxes due under the Revenue act of 1921 and circumstances governing exemptions allowed a head of a family and for dependents:

"A married couple living together with two children, 10 and 12 years old, had a net income for 1921 of $4,500. Their tax is $48, which is 1 per cent. on $4,500, the amount of their net income less the exemption of $2,500 for married persons whose net income was less than $5,000, plus $400 for each dependent. The tax on the same income for the year 1920 was $84."

Canadian Pacific Conference.

The annual conference of the passenger traffic officials of the Canadian Pacific is being held in this city for the first time in the history of the system. Sixty of the officials are here for the meeting, all of whom are registered at the Commodore. Their sessions, which began yesterday, are being held in the Canadian Pacific Building, Madison Avenue and Forty-fourth Street.

STARTS NEW INQUIRY OF PITTSBURGH PLUS

WESTERN BUYERS TESTIFY

They Assert Adding of Rail Rate to Pittsburgh Base Cost Threatens Their Business.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 30.—The competition of Eastern drop forge factories with Eastern plants, if the "Pittsburgh plus" practice of the United States Steel Corporation continues, would "eventually put his company out of business," H. W. Ladish, President of the Ladish Drop Forge Company of Cudahy, Wis., declared before the Federal Trade Commission today. His testimony was part of a hearing of complaint originally filed by Western steel consumers, which came up today before Examiner John W. Bennett.

Practically all of the Ladish steel is purchased from the Illinois Steel Company, Mr. Ladish testified, on a contract dated May 3, 1920, which named the price of steel delivered to Cudahy as the Pittsburgh price, plus the freight rate from Pittsburgh. Most of the steel, Mr. Ladish said, comes from Gary, Ind.

Due to the fact that freight rates on manufactured products and on raw steel are the same, the Ladish Company is compelled to pay transportation charges on material wasted in the process of manufacture which Eastern companies save, and in addition his Western factory must pay return freight on its products when shipped back to any Western customers, Mr. Ladish explained.

Under examination by E. K. Steinhauer, attorney for the commission, Mr. Ladish testified that he had received steel from Duluth and other points, ordered through the Illinois Steel Company at the Pittsburgh price, plus the freight cost from Pittsburgh. He declared Pittsburgh forgers were able to compete with him here but he was unable to compete with them in Pittsburgh or other Eastern cities.

Charles A. McIntosh, President of the Federal Bridge and Structural Company of Waukesha, Wis., testified that under normal conditions quotations from different mills were practically the same, although conditions of competition sometimes caused a variation, especially in the past three years. The witness said his company had been unsuccessful in bidding on several Western jobs, but would not state that difference in freight rates and a consequent lower cost of steel had given his Eastern competitors an advantage. Recently, he said, he had purchased his material from Chicago mills, whose price was practically the same as the Pittsburgh price.

Under questioning by C. A. Severance, attorney for the United States Steel Corporation, Mr. McIntosh testified that he had been solicited by various steel mills for his business and that the prices were not always the same. Attorney Steinhauer objected to the trend of the questioning.

"I merely want to show that there is no Pittsburgh base price," Attorney Severance interposed. "Each producer has his own base."

Resuming the direct examination, Mr. Steinhauer inquired what saving on freight was gained by water shipments from Bethlehem and Pittsburgh.

"There was a saving of about $2.40 two years ago," the witness answered. He added, however, that the total freight charges still placed the Waukesha Company at a disadvantage with Eastern competing firms.

Attorney Steinhauer questioned the witness on the water and rail rates, but found that the Waukesha Company had discontinued water transportation because it "was unsatisfactory."

Objection was made by the corporation's counsel to introduction of a number of invoices intended to show prices paid by the Waukesha Company for steel from several mills, but the examiner overruled the objections.

Complainants in the present case are the Western Association of Rolled Steel Manufacturers, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the Southern Association of Rolled Steel Manufacturers and the Civic and Commerce Association of Superior, Wis.

The Pittsburgh plus case first came to the commission's attention in December, 1919. After seven months, a decision in favor of the Pittsburgh base was rendered, 3 to 2. Again, in December, 1920, another hearing was held, but in the following April the personnel of the commission was changed, and a decision this time was given in favor of the steel mills by the same vote. The present hearings are the result of an amended complaint made by the commission itself last December.

N. Y. CENTRAL EARNINGS.

December Report Shows Gain in Net Operating Income.

The earnings statement of the New York Central for December, filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, shows net railway operating income, after taxes and other charges, of $11,-596,247, an increase of $11,896,247 over 1920. Under the rules of the Commerce Commission, the company was required to eliminate from operating charges unexpended accruals for equalization and maintenance and for car repairs amounting to approximately $7,600,000. These were taken up in December and account to that extent for the distortion of the results for the month.

Operating revenues	[illegible]	[illegible]
Operating expenses	[illegible]	[illegible]

The ratio of operating expenses to operating revenue for December, 1921, was 52.9 per cent, against 93.7 per cent. in 1920, and for 1921 it was 76.9 per cent. against 85.8 per cent. in 1920.

Bankers' Convention May 22-23.

C. Howard Mansfield, President of the Association of Reserve City Bankers, announced yesterday that at its midwinter meeting in New Orleans the board decided the annual convention of the association should be held in Kansas City May 22 and 23.

RAIL HEADS MEET TODAY.

May Adopt Policy to Be Pursued at Regional Conferences.

The policy to be followed in connection with regional conferences will be determined at a meeting today of the Eastern Railroad Presidents' Conference. At a recent meeting in Chicago the roads in the Association of Railway Executives voted favorably on Secretary Hoover's proposal for regional conferences between representatives of the brotherhood unions and the railroad executives, for the purpose of arriving at amicable adjustments of labor difficulties.

It is understood that a committee of general managers of various carriers may be appointed to handle the situation. The Executive Committee of the Bureau of Eastern Railroad Information also may be authorized to act, it was said.

To Vote Stock Reduction Plan.

A special meeting of stockholders of the United Profit Sharing Corporation will be held in Wilmington, Del., today, to vote on the proposal to reduce the present capital stock from 2,000,000 to 500,000 shares and to increase the par value of the stock from 25 cents to $1 a share.

Firm London Market for Wool.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—A smaller selection, amounting to 10,650 bales, was offered at the wool sales today. Fine grades were readily sold at firm prices, but inferior sorts were in slow demand and were frequently withdrawn.

FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

Less Strength in High-grade Investment Securities Yesterday.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The general tendency of the stock market today was dull. Gilt-edged securities were easier, with sellers more in evidence. Oil shares were easy, while British Industrials moved rather irregularly. Gold is up one sixth, consols unchanged at 54, British 5 per cent. war loan is higher at 93½, 4½ per cent. war loan is lower at 87½. Rand Mines, $1 De Beers Mining, 10½, both unchanged.

PARIS, Jan. 30.—Prices were heavy on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 56 francs 40 centimes; 5 per cent. war loan, 86 francs 30 centimes, both unchanged.

Exchange on London, 5 centimes lower at 61 francs 70 centimes per sovereign; American dollars were quoted at 14 francs 16 centimes, against 14 francs 19½ centimes Saturday.

E. J. Callahan is Suspended.

Federal Reduces Sugar Price.

The Federal Sugar Refining Company has reduced the price of refined sugar to 5.05 cents a pound. The previous price was 5.10 cents.

Panama R. R. Earnings Decrease.

OPPOSE LIBERTY BOND TEST

Evolving a test whether or not an applicant for citizenship had purchased Liberty bonds of the first issue and rejecting those who had not when all other qualifications appear satisfactory has aroused the opposition of members of the Citizen's Alliance for Good Government in Queens, which has adopted resolutions on the question.

The test, according to the statements of members of the alliance, was made by Justice James C. Cropsey and Judge Russell Benedict when they were presiding at the hearing of applicants for naturalization in the Queens Supreme Court recently. The alliance, which is made up of citizens of German birth or descent, numbers over 20,000 members, and has been of considerable political importance in the borough for the last two years.

John Merring, President of the Long Island City branch of the alliance and Secretary of the Executive Committee, said last evening: "We feel that many by this action of the courts."

$72,000 FOR TRANSIT WORK.

The Board of Estimate, sitting as a Committee of the Whole, yesterday appropriated $72,000 to enable the Transit Commission to finish the work on the Jerome Avenue yard, but it refused to appropriate $10,000 and $3,500 for the purchase of anti-creepers, which make for safety on the rapid transit lines, and to paint the columns on the White Plains section of the Interborough system.

Thirty-five other applications for money were laid over, a process which it is understood is to be continued indefinitely under the plan described by Controller Craig in his speech on Saturday before the National Republican Club, which is to deny the commission money for the construction of new lines to be operated by private corporations.

Several of the applications were sent to the board during the time that John H. Delaney was Transit Construction Commissioner. These were returned to the Transit Commission, which will make whatever changes are necessary and return them to the board.

The Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company

A Plan and Agreement dated January 27, 1922, for the reorganization of The Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company has been proposed by The Western Pacific Railroad Corporation (the holding company) to the undersigned Committee constituted under the Deposit Agreement, dated May 28, 1917, for the First and Refunding Mortgage Five Per Cent. Gold Bonds of The Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company, and said Plan and Agreement has been approved and adopted by the Committee.

Holders of Certificates of Deposit for First and Refunding Mortgage Five Per Cent. Gold Bonds, issued under the said Deposit Agreement, who shall not dissent from the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization in the manner and within the period prescribed in the Deposit Agreement will be conclusively presumed to have assented to the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization, to have waived any right of withdrawal given by the Deposit Agreement, and also to have waived the provision contained in the Deposit Agreement limiting the time within which Depositors will be entitled to receive the new securities resulting from the Plan. Holders of Certificates of Deposit not so dissenting will, in the event that said Plan and Agreement of Reorganization shall become effective and binding on holders of Certificates of Deposit issued under said Deposit Agreement, become parties to said Plan and Agreement of Reorganization without issue of new certificates, but may at any time present their certificates to the Depositary or any of the Sub-Depositaries named below to be stamped as assenting to the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization.

Holders of undeposited First and Refunding Mortgage Five Per Cent. Gold Bonds of The Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company may become parties to the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization by depositing their bonds with coupons payable February 1, 1922, and all subsequent coupons attached, with the Depositary, or one of the Sub-Depositaries named below, on or before March 1, 1922, and will receive therefor Certificates of Deposit issued under the Deposit Agreement of May 28, 1917, stamped as assenting to the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization.

The Committee has arranged that in the event that default shall be made in the payment of the coupon due February 1, 1922, on the said bonds, The Western Pacific Railroad Corporation shall purchase such coupon belonging to such of said bonds, which shall have become bound by or shall have been deposited under the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization.

In order to participate in the benefits of this purchase, holders of Certificates of Deposit already issued under the Deposit Agreement aforesaid must sign and file with the Depositary or any of the Sub-Depositaries a written assent to the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization containing a waiver of all right of withdrawal given by the Deposit Agreement and of the provisions contained in the Deposit Agreement limiting the time within which Depositors will be entitled to receive the new securities resulting from the Plan and also must present their Certificates of Deposit, accompanied by appropriate income tax certificates, to the Depositary or any of the Sub-Depositaries, to be stamped accordingly. Blank forms for such assent may be obtained from the Depositary or any of the Sub-Depositaries.

Holders of undeposited First and Refunding Mortgage Five Per Cent. Gold Bonds will be entitled to participate in the benefit of such purchase merely by the deposit of their bonds, accompanied by appropriate income tax certificates.

Provision is made to the end that, if the Plan should not be consummated, the bonds may be returned free of charge to such Depositors as shall have assented to the Plan. This, however, does not apply to holders of Certificates of Deposit who may dissent.

The Committee recommends the immediate acceptance of the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization. In view of the probable default in the payment of the coupon due February 1, 1922, bondholders are urged to deposit their bonds promptly.

Copies of the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization may be obtained from the Depositary or any of the Sub-Depositaries or from the Secretary of the Committee.

To Holders of Certificates of Deposit for First and Refunding Mortgage Five Per Cent. Gold Bonds of The Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company issued under the Deposit Agreement dated May 28, 1917, between the Holders of said Bonds and the Committee therein named.

NOTICE is hereby given that a Plan and Agreement dated January 27, 1922, for the reorganization of THE DENVER AND RIO GRANDE RAILROAD COMPANY has been proposed by The Western Pacific Railroad Corporation to the undersigned Committee, and has been approved and adopted by the Committee, and that a copy of said Plan and Agreement of Reorganization has been filed with Bankers Trust Company, Depositary under said Deposit Agreement, at its office, No. 16 Wall Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, in the City of New York. The Committee recommends the acceptance of said Plan and Agreement of Reorganization by the holders of said Certificates of Deposit.

Each holder of a Certificate of Deposit issued under said Deposit Agreement shall be conclusively presumed to have assented to said Plan and Agreement of Reorganization unless he shall, within thirty days after the first publication of this notice, that is to say, on or before the first day of March, 1922, have filed with the said Bankers Trust Company, Depositary, written notice of his dissent therefrom, specifying therein the name or names and the address or addresses of the Certificates of Deposit held by him.

In case the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization shall become effective as provided by Article Ninth of the Deposit Agreement, any holder of a Certificate of Deposit who shall have filed notice of dissent as above provided may, within ten (10) days from the first day of March, 1922, withdraw his bonds from deposit under said Deposit Agreement in the manner provided in Article Ninth thereof, upon payment of such amount as the Committee in its absolute discretion may fix as his proportion of the compensation and expenses of the Committee, not exceeding one per cent. of the face amount of the bonds represented by his Certificate of Deposit.

The American Brass Company

The Anaconda Copper Mining Company has entered into a contract with the undersigned Committee, dated December 22, 1921, whereby, among other things, it agrees to purchase all or any portion of the capital stock of The American Brass Company (but not less than 51% of the total outstanding stock), which shall be deposited under the contract during the month of January 1922, for $130 in cash and three shares of the full paid non-assessable capital stock of the Anaconda Company for each share of the stock of The American Brass Company. The contract appoints the MECHANICS & METALS NATIONAL BANK, No. 20 Nassau Street, New York, N. Y., and the COLONIAL TRUST COMPANY, Waterbury, Connecticut, as the Depositaries. Holders of stock of The American Brass Company who desire to sell and dispose of any or all of their stock under this contract must deposit the same with either one of these Depositaries during the month of January, 1922, and NOT LATER than the close of business January 31, 1922. Deposited stock certificates must be duly endorsed by the registered holder and signatures must be guaranteed or attested to the satisfaction of the respective Depositaries. The Depositaries will issue transferable certificates of deposit which may be transferred only upon the books of the respective Depositaries issuing the same.

The cash and the certificates representing the Anaconda stock will be deliverable to the respective Depositaries on February 10, 1922, for the account of the holders of the certificates of deposit. No deduction will be made for revenue stamps or for the expenses or obligations of this Committee, the Anaconda Copper Mining Company having agreed to pay the same.

Printed copies of the above-mentioned contract of December 22, 1921, will be available to depositing stockholders at the respective Depositaries. The Depositaries will also have available for delivery to depositing shareholders a copy of the report rendered to the Chairman of this Committee by Price, Waterhouse & Co., accountants, regarding the accounts of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, and a copy of the letter of Professor James F. Kemp, mining engineer, addressed to the Chairman of this Committee regarding the mines, mining claims, mining plants, reduction works and refineries of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company.

No deposits of stock will be received by either Depositary after the close of business January 31, 1922.

To Holders of Adjustment Mortgage Seven Per Cent. Cumulative Gold Bonds of THE DENVER AND RIO GRANDE RAILROAD COMPANY, issued under the Adjustment Mortgage of said Company, dated May 1, 1912:

Holders of Four Per Cent. Ten-Year Secured Notes of THE WESTERN PACIFIC RAILROAD CORPORATION, issued under its Trust Agreement, dated October 1, 1920:

Referring to the notice dated this day and published by the Protective Committee representing the holders of First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds of said The Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company, announcing an agreement between this Corporation and said Committee with respect to a Plan of Reorganization of the securities and affairs of The Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company, The Western Pacific Railroad Corporation, which owns more than a majority of all bonds outstanding under said Adjustment Mortgage, notifies all other holders of such Adjustment Bonds that in said Plan of Reorganization this Corporation has reserved the right, within certain reasonable limitations, to offer to all holders of Adjustment Mortgage Bonds participation in the benefits of said plan, if carried into effect, and has agreed in that event to accept for itself as the owner of a majority of said issue the same terms which shall be offered to other holders of such bonds.

It is desirable, in order that bondholders may remain in position to take advantage of such offer (which shortly will be made), that holders of Adjustment Mortgage Bonds shall NOT deposit their bonds with or otherwise commit themselves to any Protective Committee which represents or purports to represent holders of Adjustment Mortgage Bonds, at least until after the announcement of such offer.

The properties of The Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad Company, which is the owner and in possession of the properties upon which said Adjustment Mortgage is a lien and which, through stock ownership, is controlled by this Corporation, are being competently managed with scrupulous regard for the interests of the properties, the public and interested bond holders of all classes. No assets of The Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad Company have been withdrawn by this Corporation, and it is provided in the Plan of Reorganization that pending the execution or abandonment of the Plan earnings of the Railroad Company shall not be distributed or withdrawn by this Corporation, through the medium of dividends or otherwise, for its own benefit. During the last six months this Corporation has supplied The Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad Company with considerable amounts of money and has invested and is investing additional large amounts in property intended for its use. It has agreed, in event that the Plan of Reorganization is carried out, to turn over to the Reorganized Company (in addition to the unmortgaged assets of The Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad Company), cash, property and securities of an aggregate value exceeding $10,000,000 in consideration of common stock to be received by it.

Holders of the outstanding Ten-Year Four Per Cent. Secured Notes of this Corporation (which were issued in exchange for Adjustment Mortgage Bonds) are notified that, in event said Plan of Reorganization is carried into effect, this Corporation will afford to the note-holders severally the same privilege of exchanging their notes for securities to be issued pursuant to the Plan as they would have been accorded had they continued to hold the Adjustment Bonds for which their notes were exchanged.

Copies of the Plan of Reorganization may be obtained by application to this Corporation at its office, 43 Exchange Place, New York City.

LIVERPOOL SELLING LEADS BREAK HERE

Selling pressure again proved too much for cotton, breaking prices over [illegible] a cent yesterday. New low records were made in all three large markets, Liverpool and New Orleans leading the decline. An unusual feature proved to be the orderly manner of the downward movement, no running breaks occurring. All selling orders were executed within a few points of preceding figures, but it seemed impossible to start any upturn. Good rains in Texas and some cold weather in the belt were both favorable as regards new crop prospects. A rise in sterling to 4.54 failed to have any influence on values. Not only did quotations touch the lowest levels since excited advances last Fall, but liquidation was as heavy at any time during the entire decline. Final prices showed a loss of 48 to 63 points.

Heavy selling was resumed at the opening. Improvement in all markets at the close of last week gave place to liquidation and enormous quantities of cotton were thrown on Liverpool, New Orleans and New York. Liverpool led the decline. Prices abroad, after opening a few points higher than Friday's close, broke over a cent a pound. This weakness abroad left differences between the two markets of only 3 cents, as compared with about 7 cents at the extreme high point last Fall. New Orleans again lost ground faster than New York, so that early pressure came mainly from foreign and Southern sources. Covering on the call opened October about unchanged, with March 10 points off. Then a rush of selling developed, increasing steadily in volume until prices were $2 a bale net under Saturday's close before midday. Both March and May went to new low figures. May breaking 16 cents and March selling at 16.17, compared with 16.27, the low figures last week. The decline was temporarily halted by scale buying orders in May, each point down below 16.00 helped by heavy buying orders in July.

New Orleans weakened rapidly during the first hour, March there selling 111 points under New York, compared with an extreme difference of 114 points last week. This brought both March and May there below the 16-cent level, showing to what extent market conditions have changed in the past two weeks. One cent and again appeared in southwestern sections, while demand for actual cotton continues apathetic. Sales on Saturday were less than 6,000 bales, a very light business, considering it is the end of the month. Light sales are attributed to conditions prevailing in manufacturing circles.

Mills have larger supplies than last year and jobbers report that cotton goods are selling at closer values than for many years. Under these circumstances, it is extremely difficult to create confidence in advancing prices and support comes mainly from trade, not speculative directions. Uncertainty over the outcome of the March notices, with many hedges are outstanding, plays an important part in determining the attitude of many operators. March continued to sell 24 points over May.

A reaction of about 16 points proved to be all. The recovery possible. Though May held within a 5-point limit over 10 cents for two hours, pressure was resumed during the afternoon, breaking March to a 16-cent level and July to 15.90, a new low. Few at hour has much option entered the ring as at any time during the entire decline. At 16 cents March showed a loss of over 2 cents from the opening on Jan. 3 and prices have been lower since then. The full market culminated early in October. Inability to sell any line of cotton in Liverpool owing to the week closing there, threw holdings back on New York. Liberal scale buying orders permitted an even decline and at no time during the day did an open break occur. Prices simply moved lower steadily with feeble reactions and a resumption of selling on each upturn. Demand around 16 cents for March proved sufficient to bring a final bid to 16 points, with near months off about half a cent net.

Following the heavy liquidation of contracts in the futures market, spot cotton yesterday broke 50 points per 100 pounds to 15.45, which is a new low record on the present move. On the other hand, lard, Middle West, which has been strong on the basis of exports, moved up sharply to 10.70 cents, the highest for the year to date. Other changes were nominal and found only in a few of the subjoined list, most articles holding firm and at prevailing levels.

MAY WHEAT NEARS THE OCTOBER HIGH

In the Flutter of Prices at New Levels Chicago Sees Overdue Boom at Hand.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—The long overdue bulge in wheat is regarded by the trade as being under way, and May sold at $1.19½ today, the highest figure since Oct. 14, and closed at the top with a net gain of ⅞ cent, while July was up ⅝ cent. Heavy buying of May by local interests and selling of July were partly responsible for the advance, although there was also buying by houses with seaboard connections. The market's action was most erratic, with numerous breaks and bulges, and the local element was badly whip-sawed.

Clement Curtis & Co. report showing farm reserves of 140,000,000 bushels and interior mill and elevator stocks of 85,000,000 bushels—a total of 225,000,000 bushels, compared with 244,000,000 bushels on farms alone last year—was the main influence in making the strong close, and it gave local bulls a great flutter of courage. For the past few days it has been noticeable that as fast as one bullish factor commences to grow a little stale, a new one develops.

An advance of ¼d in Liverpool attracted some attention, but the bulge of the late exchange rates, it was equal to about 1 cent per bushel. An increase of 49,000 bushels in the visible supply was a disappointment to the bullish, but there was a belief that the gain of 626,000 bushels at Philadelphia was Canadian wheat in bond, going through from Fort William for export and should actually not have been counted.

A fair export business was under way with confirmation secured of 160,000 bushels hard Winter via the Gulf and 215,000 bushels durum from the seaboard, in addition to around 400,000 bushels Manitobas.

Owing to the large receipts of corn, the number of cars held on track here waiting to be unloaded is increasing rapidly and now aggregates 4,240 cars. While hedges on sales of 500,000 bushels corn here to the seaboard were removed during the day, the free selling by Illinois points, where only 20 cents was paid to the producer, more than offset this and the close was ⅛ cent lower.

Oats lost a like amount. The seaboard claimed only 300,000 bushels sold abroad, although a local trader who returned from New York said that he found that all one had to do in order to make sales was to offer the grain abroad at a reasonable figure. Local arrivals today were extremely heavy at 1,072 cars, and the basis for sales was ¼ cent easier, as compared with the May No. 2 grades on track bringing 4¼ to 4⅜ cents under the future.

An increase of 40,000 bushels in the visible supply of wheat made the total 45,871,000 bushels; previous week, 45,622,000; last year, 24,212,000.

Supplies of corn gained 612,000 bushels and are 26,729,000 bushels, against 26,117,000 a week ago and 14,297,000 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat today were 1,542,000 bushels; week ago, 1,298,000; last year, 1,929,000. Shipments were 432,000 bushels; week ago, 473,000; last year, 664,000.

Corn receipts were 2,542,000 bushels; week ago, 3,063,000; last year, 1,926,000, and shipments 1,469,000 bushels; week ago, 1,428,000; last year, 800,000.

LATEST DEALINGS IN REALTY FIELD

$36,000 A YEAR RENT

Trading was light in the real estate market yesterday, and only a few scattering sales of importance were closed.

Brokers, however, report several large deals pending, one of which, on the upper east side, will involve close to $2,000,000 with the proposed improvement.

A $650,000 Lease.

In the Grand Central Station zone, where there has been a revival of renting activity, Truly Warner, the native, leased from William Decatur Parsons the entire six-story building at 24 West Forty-second Street.

The lease is for a term of eighteen years from Feb. 1, 1922, at an aggregate rental of $650,000, or an annual rental of about $36,000. The property is located between Madison and Fifth Avenues, and in order to secure the property it was necessary to purchase the Rockwell restaurant, which occupied the store in the building. Mannig & Trunk and the Cruikshank Company negotiated the transaction.

In addition to occupying the store, basement and second floor for retailing, the main office of the lessee will be brought from Broadway and Twelfth Street and occupy the fifth and sixth floors.

This is the second lease that Mannig & Trunk have closed for Truly Warner in the last few days, the other being a $900,000 transaction involving the store at 78 Nassau Street, which was taken from Weber & Heilbroner.

Another transaction in the same section was the closing of a lease with the Hale Desk Company for the large store at 16 East Forty-fourth Street, in the Canadian Pacific Building, through Cushman & Wakefield, Inc., agents for the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The store involved is 46 feet wide and connects with the Arcade of the building. It is part of the space acquired last year by the Canadian Pacific, and is obtained on a sublease from the railway company, at an aggregate rental of about $360,000.

The present transaction explains the purchase, about a year ago, by this firm of the seven-story loft building at 141 West Thirteenth Street, which has been extensively altered and equipped as a modern furniture warehouse.

W. J. Russell and Tingley May leased for the Lawyers Mortgage Company the store on Nassau Street adjoining the entrance to their new building on Cedar Lane and Nassau Street, to the Gotham Silk Hosiery Company, for a term of years at an aggregate rental of $100,000.

John A. Chalmer Leases Site.

John Armstrong Chalmer has leased a site, 100.8 by 100, at the southwest corner of Tenth Avenue and Fifty-sixth Street, to the W. M. W. Realty Corporation (A. Wartels, H. Weprin and M. Mirten) for twenty-one years, with the privilege of a similar renewal. The annual net rental of $6,750 is to be paid for the property, which contains six four-story buildings with stores.

BUYING IN THE SUBURBS.

New Owner Pays $82,000 for Rumson, N. J., Tract.

A. Karaghessian purchased the Rumson Road property of Mrs. George H. Chatillon, at Rumson, N. J., through William H. Hinteleman as broker. The property has a frontage on Rumson Road of 784 feet and a frontage of 793 feet on Bellevue Avenue. The property comprises 13¼ acres, with main residence, a gardener's dwelling and outbuildings. It adjoins the country estates of Edward D. Adams and the late Jacob H. Schiff. The sale price was $82,000.

The same broker sold for Mrs. Anna M. DeMott her Rumson Road property to Louis D. Compsom of New York. The property has a frontage on Rumson Road of 323 feet and on Navesink Avenue of 241 feet and contains about three acres. There is a large frame residence on the property. The price paid was $38,000.

Alexander Selkin and David Mintz have resold for Henry Silverstone the two four-story apartments with stores known as 1,222-1,224 South Broadway, Yonkers, on plot 60 by 100, which were held at $80,000.

Peter O. Ericsson sold a plot of land on Silver Lake Road, Brighton Heights, Staten Island, to Annie C. Whitlock, who intends building a private dwelling. Moffatt & Schwab were the brokers.

Chauncey E. Griffen sold for Van Ness Bros., Inc., one of their new houses in Roosevelt Heights, Pelham Manor, Westchester County, to Mrs. Josephine Warner. The property was held at $20,000.

The O. L. Schwencke Land and Investment Company sold three to ten lot plots at Hempstead, L. I., to the following: A. and M. Buczek, Peter Buys, Leo Cron, H. Cynermann, E. C. and E. A. Grady, K. J. and L. Gunderson, J. Holdsag, M. and E. Kusen, Lapinacci & Branch and E. J. McDermott.

Joseph F. Day sold 47 Coles Street, Glen Cove Landing, Glen Cove, L. I., a two-story dwelling on a plot 30 by 200, tree and clear, and known as the Martha Northage estate. Martha A. Weldon was the purchaser. The property brought $8,100.

Manhattan—For Sale or To Let.

A DRIVE SUPER-RESIDENCE.
A superb 5-story American basement, private residence of exquisite beauty of interior in magnificent condition; ($6,000 recently spent on interior decorations); small mansion on drive near 79th.; 14 spacious rooms, 3 ultra modern baths; Otis elevator to roof; efficient steam-heating system, artistic Gothic, cement; block reception room. This palatial home well worth $75,000. Owner will sell for immediate possession to quick action purchaser for $65,000; terms. A tremendous bargain. James P. Walden, 1,860 Broadway. Columbus 8781.

NEW LAW tenements with bath, renting at the reasonable rate of $5 a room, should prove the safest and most attractive investment, especially so when a 20% net income can be derived therefrom. We have one of these pre-war built tenements, occupied by a better class of Italians, whose promptness in paying rent is proverbial, which will yield a large net income upon an investment of $10,000. E. V. PESCIA, Times Building. Tel. Bryant 4000.

$25,000 investment in 7-story corner elevator apartment will secure net income of $14,000 per annum at present rental averaging ridiculous low figure of $163.36 per room; another important feature being the possibility of deriving much greater income from ground floor occupied by bank, which has spent over $100,000 for permanent improvement, including vaults, &c., and whose lease expires in 2 years. Address E. V. Pescia, Times Building. Tel. Bryant 4000.

ON 3RD ST., CLOSE TO 2D AV.

SALESMEN.
Evening or Part Time.
Could you use more money, and are you willing to work for it?
Have you actually tried to dig up a way to EARN more money in your spare time, or have you been waiting for luck to show you the way?
We will suppose, as in the majority of cases, that there is no chance for you to earn more money in your present job. You don't want to throw up the job, and yet, at the same time, you want to MAKE MORE MONEY.
You needn't quit your job, and under the Business Builders' plan you can EARN EXTRA MONEY and at the SAME TIME get a training and an OPPORTUNITY for a BIGGER and BETTER JOB. All we ask is that you make sure that you WANT TO FORGE AHEAD and are willing to pay the price in good, hard work.
We have men who came to us without the least selling experience and who are now earning upward of $40 a week in commissions devoting two or three hours at night or other spare time to selling the securities of solid, substantial industries.
Every man who WANTS to EARN MORE MONEY and at the same time FORGE AHEAD will call at 8 P. M. Our Reception Room is on the 12th Floor.

SALESMEN.
EARNEST, AMBITIOUS and ENERGETIC men will find an opportunity in our organization to earn a good income at once and also a chance for early promotion to positions of greater responsibility and larger earnings.
We have found that a man with these THREE qualifications, regardless of whether or not he has had previous selling experience, will MAKE GOOD in our work. The possession of them means:
FIRST, he will carry out faithfully our successful selling plan, which will give him good earnings in commissions at once.
SECOND, he will be increasing his ability so as to qualify for advancement to the management of a district or sub-district.
We are building a national sales organization for the largest corporation in the electrical industry to merchandise the most recent development in the field of illumination, and the immediate opportunities are in the first and second districts.
FIRST DISTRICT.
If you reside in NEW JERSEY NORTH of TRENTON, call mornings at our First District Office, 190 MARKET ST., NEWARK, 3d floor. Ask for MR. HART.
SECOND DISTRICT.
If you reside in BROOKLYN or LONG ISLAND, call mornings at our Second District Office, 158 REMSEN ST., BROOKLYN, 5th floor. Ask for MR. DOUGLAS.

SALESMEN.
That some men are born with a marked talent for some particular kind of work is undoubtedly a fact.
But—take SALESMANSHIP, for instance. If you will talk with the successful salesmen you know, you will find each and every one of them showing you from his experience how he LEARNED how to sell.
And if you watched him going about his work you are selling with confidence, assurance, understanding and success, you would likely be amazed to learn from him how much of that he HAD to LEARN as he went along.
Here is the BUSINESS BUILDERS many men are earning from $50 a week up, in commissions, selling the securities of successful expanding corporations.
Men who had never sold anything before, but who were ambitiously reaching out for greater development and greater opportunity.
You probably have more natural selling ability than you realize.
The success of the BUSINESS BUILDERS methods of training has been demonstrated in the records of hundreds of men.
Introductory classes will be started PROMPTLY at 9:30 A. M. and at 3 P. M. To attend either of these classes you should register 15 to 30 minutes prior to those hours, as classes commence exactly ON TIME.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Pressure is now high generally east of the Rocky Mountains and low on the Pacific slope, with a slightly marked intensity having the centre in Nevada. This disturbance has been attended by snows over the western plateau region and general rains in Arizona and California. Rains have also fallen in the Gulf States, and there have been local snows in the north plain States.

The temperature has fallen decidedly over the north-plain States, and it remains low in the north Rocky Mountains and plateau regions and the west Canadian provinces. Moderate temperatures prevail throughout the Atlantic valleys and the East and South Gulf States.

11 Days to Rio

NEW U. S. Government owned ships have broken all speed records to South America. They have cut 5 to 7 days from the journey. Rio de Janeiro is now but 11 days away. Montevideo and Buenos Aires are but a few days beyond.

This record speed on such palatial ocean liners introduces a new era in South American travel. These ships are 21,000 ton oil-burners and they rank among the finest afloat. Send the information blank and learn about your ships,—their beautiful appointments, luxurious ultra modern equipment, superior cuisine unexcelled on the seas. Operated by the Munson Steamship Lines, with 50 years of successful experience, your ships offer service that will delight the seasoned traveler.

S. S. Aztec ..... Feb. 22d
S. S. Sierra ..... Feb. 25th
S. S. Amazon Legion ..... Mar. 4th
S. S. Southern Cross ..... Mar. 15th
Fortnightly thereafter

Your Government wishes the name of every prospective traveler. If you are considering an ocean voyage anywhere, send the information blank now—no matter when you intend to go. You will receive without cost the Government's booklet of authentic travel information about passports, income tax requirements, etc., descriptions of the U.S. Government ships and literature telling of things to see in foreign lands. You will be under no obligation.
If you yourself cannot take an ocean trip, clip the information blank anyway, and tell some friend who may go to send it in.

MRS. STOKES TELLS OF MORE BEATINGS

FORCED TO SIGN, SHE SAYS

William E. D. Stokes, after a month's postponement of his appearance in court to defend the suit of his wife, Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, to set aside his conveyances of real estate, appeared in Supreme Court Justice Cohalans's court yesterday for the first time since the close of his unsuccessful divorce suit, in which Justice Finch awarded Mrs. Stokes a separation decree. He heard himself and his attorney, A. H. Gleason, accused of inducing her to sign away her rights by fraud. Mr. Stokes has been ill from pneumonia.

Mrs. Stokes is represented at the present trial by Samuel Untermyer, while Isidor Gainsburg appears for the first time as trial counsel for Mr. Stokes. Mrs. Stokes's mother, Mrs. Martha Miller of Denver, was in court with her.

Mr. Untermyer, outlining his case, told the court that Mrs. Stokes's signature to papers waiving her dower rights to the Stokes realty holdings of forty-nine parcels, including the Ansonia Hotel, was secured by fraud because she was not permitted to know the purport of the papers she signed. In behalf of Mr. Stokes, his attorney insisted that Mrs. Stokes knew what she was doing when she signed away her dower and that the statute of limitations bars her action now.

Mrs. Stokes was the first witness. She accused her husband of cruelties that had not been alleged at the separation trial last Spring. She said that on one occasion he struck her with his fist and knocked her against a dresser, saying:

"I'll show you that I am the boss of this house. The quicker you realize it the better it will be for you."

Mrs. Stokes said her husband became so enraged at times that he "would show his teeth and act like a crazy man." He once pinned her to the bed with his hand clutching her throat for an hour, and threatened to bring in a negro to terrorize her further, she said.

Telling of the incident when she was compelled, as she said, to sign away her dower rights, Mrs. Stokes testified that her husband came to her when she was ill in bed, and demanded that she sign papers he had brought. She said he "flew into a rage" when she tried to read the papers, and told her to "sign it and be damned quick about it." Mrs. Stokes said her husband threatened that if she didn't sign he would "break every bone in her body."

Mrs. Stokes said she did not know for a long time that she had signed away her interest in the Stokes property. She said her husband promised, when they were married to pay her $1,000 a month and give her a third of the income from the Ansonia, but that after a few months he cut down the allowance to $500 a month, which is the amount Mr. Stokes contends that his wife agreed to accept for signing away her rights.

In cross-examining Mrs. Stokes, Attorney Gainsburg read letters she had written which were not offered at the separation trial. In the letters Mrs. Stokes said:

"Remember, that if you don't stop publishing some of our private affairs it will result in some trouble."

"They say that life has hopes. I suppose I live on hopes. I want to live just a little safely, and not fear poverty, but that has nothing to do with the dead."

"You even fuss about a few dollars for your own children. You say I always mistrust you. My dear Will, I have to, as you have no regard for me. We have two beautiful children. Now I am willing to do the right thing by you. I should have what is right to spend. I should have at least $36,000 a year to spend regardless of what you will give me later. I don't like to think about the later."

Mr. Gainsburg interrupted the reading with the question:

"Wasn't that the trouble with you and Mr. Stokes. You wanted at least $36,000 a year and he wouldn't give it to you?"

Mrs. Stokes denied this and insisted that she did not ask Mr. Stokes if he had provided for her and the children in the event of his death.

BURGLAR'S APPEAL FOR MERCY REJECTED

20-Year-Old Brother of Gassed Veteran Pleads Family Distress in Vain.

An appeal for mercy, made by Howard Atkins, a 20-year-old burglar, when he appeared yesterday before Judge Caffery in the Common Pleas Court in Newark, failed to lessen a twelve to twenty-one year sentence imposed upon him on three charges.

Atkins pleaded non vult to three counts of breaking and entering. The charges grew out of more than a dozen burglaries in the Clinton Hill section of Newark, which Atkins confessed committing. After Judge Caffery had sentenced the youth, Atkins asked permission to speak. It was granted.

"Your honor," he said, "if you knew conditions in my home when I began to steal you would better understand. I had a brother who was carried away to war, leaving me with a sick mother and three younger brothers to support. I worked in the shipyards and steel mills during the war and everything went well for a while.

"Then came hardships. My brother was thrown back upon us, gassed and a victim of shell shock; I lost my job. Every day the wants of my stricken family were greater and my funds ebbed. I had no money and no friends from whom I could borrow. I began to steal, but not as I have been charged. I never took all the money or jewelry I am charged with having taken. I am only a victim of unyielding circumstances."

Here Judge Caffery interposed:

"There are eighteen charges against you and you have only pleaded non vult to three. The sentence will stand."

The prisoner fainted as he was being led from the courtroom.

Your Rights

How to secure them from your Insurance Broker

IF YOU STILL place your Fire, Marine and Casualty Insurance with brokers who look upon their commissions as "easy money," you stand a slim chance of getting your rights.

The law prohibits money-returns or rebates. It does not prohibit the broker employing for your benefit:—

Men at your service skilled in figuring closely the exact amount which will cover you—men who closely watch the fluctuating values of your properties throughout the year.

Men at your service who know which sound insurance companies will give you quickest settlement in case of loss.

Men at your service whose life-long experience in intricate Marine Insurance will give you the benefit of prompt, technical and legal help.

Engineers at your service to inspect your plant and make recommendations which almost invariably secure for you reduced rates.

Loss adjusters at your service who know the direct roads to quick settlements and who start to work without an hour's delay.

Error-proof systems to protect you against lapsed policies, and an organization watching out for your interests every minute of the business day.

Each Tuesday on this page, we have quoted a few of the many recent instances where we have promptly secured reduced insurance premiums for new clients. Judging by inquiries we have received, not only New Yorkers, but business houses in ten eastern states are eager to secure their rights from insurance brokers.

We are at your service. Let us examine your policies and send an engineer without cost to inspect your properties. There is more than a 50% chance that reduced insurance costs will result.

It is not necessary to wait until the expiration of your present insurance contracts. A telephone call to our headquarters, JOHn 0235, will bring a prompt response.

Make us the insurance department of your business —without a dollar's added cost.

With this very constipating diet—yet no constipation

Under the supervision of a leading scientist a remarkable feeding experiment was made. For one whole month men and women were given eggs, milk, cheese—all constipating foods—and yet they did not suffer from constipation because they added Fleischmann's Yeast to their diet.

When they ate the same constipating diet without Fleischmann's Yeast as a corrective, all four were constipated.

Thousands of men and women all over the country have found that using Fleischmann's Yeast daily gives them normal and regular eliminations. Fresh yeast lends to the elements which increase the action of the intestines and keep the body clean of poisons.

Add 2 to 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast to your own daily diet. You'll soon find that laxatives are unnecessary. Be sure it's Fleischmann's Yeast—the familiar tin-foil package with the yellow label. Place a standing order with your grocer.
